Congress passed the Federal Records Act of 1950 to provide the framework for records management for federal government agencies. Many emails from federal employees are considered records under the Act and therefore subject to certain recordkeeping requirements. This Committee has legislative jurisdiction over the Federal Records Act, as well as the Presidential Records Act and Freedom of Information Act.[1] As technology has changed and the use of email and other modern forms of electronic communication have become ubiquitous, the Committee has been active in updating portions of these laws. These updates include the Presidential and Federal Records Act Amendments of 2014 and the FOIA Improvement Act of 2016.[2]

As part of our regular oversight duties, the Committee, from time to time, inquires of the Executive Branch departments and agencies about their compliance with these federal laws.[3] With numerous public revelations of senior executive branch employees deliberately trying to circumvent these laws by using personal, private, or alias e-mail addresses to conduct official government business, the Committee has aimed to use its oversight and investigative resources to prevent and deter misuse of private forms of written communication.[4] Based on yesterday's Politico reporting regarding private email use for official government business by a senior member of the President's staff,[5] today we write towards a similar end.

19. Upon completion of the document production, you should submit a written certification, signed by you or your counsel, stating that: (1) a diligent search has been completed of all documents in your possession, custody, or control which reasonably could contain responsive documents; and (2) all documents located during the search that are responsive have been produced to the Committee.

HARRIS COUNTY TEXAS

Ed Emmett

COUNTY JUDGE

September 13, 2017

The Honorable Ben Carson, Sr.
Secretary
U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development
451 7th Street S.W.,
Washington, DC 20410

Dear Secretary Carson:

It has been just over two weeks since the residents of Harris County, Texas, witnessed and survived through the most devastating flooding event ever recorded in our region. While we are still sheltering thousands, and just now coming to the realization of the vast breadth of the devastation in our community, we are also keenly aware that the quick flow of federal recovery funding will ensure that our residents, infrastructure, and business community will return to optimal conditions in the near future. Therefore, prompt implementation of recovery action can only occur through the direct grant of Hurricane Harvey Community Development Block Grant Disaster Recovery (CDBG-DR) Supplemental funding to Harris County.

As an Entitlement Community Harris County, through its Community Services Department, has administered CDBG funds since 1975, successfully operated both Hurricane Ike and American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) recovery programs with nearly $200 million in funding, and maintains the capacity to continue services as well as implement new programs as our community enters Hurricane Harvey recovery.

Specifically, based on the following reasons, it is critical that CDBG-DR funds be provided as a direct grant to Harris County to ensure rapid implementation of recovery projects:

Capacity

Harris County through its Community Services Department (CSD) possesses the experience, knowledge and the existing capacity to administer recovery grants to meet local needs, and has the proven track record to demonstrate successful implementation. Harris County CSD staffing have a combined experience of more than 75 years in community development and disaster recovery programming. They are well trained and have thorough knowledge of regulatory and statutory requirements. Through its existing operations, CSD can implement and administer home owner repair and rebuild programs, multi-family housing rebuild and repair programs, as well as public infrastructure and drainage improvement projects in coordination with our County and City partners. To meet the scale that is required to respond to the needs of Hurricane Harvey survivors, CSD has the ability to quickly expand staffing through existing contracted services as well as procure new services as needed.

In addition to the program capacity to operate and oversee project delivery, CSD maintains an experienced financial management staff that works closely with the County Budget Officer and County Auditor to ensure timely expenditure of funds, application of effective internal controls as well as a well-documented audit trail.

As demonstrated in Table 1, Harris County has a proven history of receipt and expenditure of a large recovery grant programs that your Department records can confirm.

Table 1. Prior Recovery Grant Experience, Harris County

Year	Program	Amount Administered
2008	Neighborhood Stabilization Program	$14,898,027
2008	Neighborhood Stabilization Program	$1,925,917
2009	Hurricane Ike CDBG-DR, PL 110-329*	$172,209,251
2009	Homelessness Prevention and Rapid Rehousing Program	$4,400,000
2009	American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (CDBGR)	$2,919,475
Total		$196,352,670.00

*Administered through State of Texas subrecipient agreement.

Prior Experience as State CDBG-DR Subrecipient

In general, a CDBG-DR subrecipient can only receive funding following the approval of the State's Action Plan for Recovery which normally follows a four to six-month timeline after the Federal Register notice. This process as designed extends the timeframe for recovery. Harris County cannot afford to wait through standard subrecipient processes as we identify critical community needs and projects that can be addressed today. As a direct recipient, Harris County is ready to prepare and submit its Recovery Action Plan, as we do annually for our standard entitlement programs (CDBG, HOME and ESG).

As a prior State of Texas CDBG-DR subrecipient, Harris County experienced delays in receipt of funds as well as encountered burdensome administrative requirements including multiple replacement database systems, and lack of or severely delayed program guidance. The delays encountered through this subrecipient process have negatively impacted the County's ability to recover from previous disasters and have exacerbated and prolonged recovery for impacted residents. Most recently, Harris County has been awarded CDBG-DR funding through the State for 2015 and 2016 disaster declarations, for which the County is still currently awaiting award of funding, or even an application process. While still awaiting these funds, many County residents have re-flooded in the most recent disaster declaration. For Hurricane Ike, Harris County did not receive approval from the State of program guidelines until September 2010, two years after the disaster declaration.

Importance of Local Control and Coordination

Harris County's jurisdiction includes serving 12 smaller cities that have signed cooperative agreements with the County which allows each city to participate in the Harris County CDBG and other entitlement programs. Four of these 12 cities were devastated by Hurricane Harvey flooding and will require long-term recovery support from the County. Based on the long term relationship, the County can and will ensure these smaller cities are supported. Additionally, the County through CSD has developed the Method of Distribution of recovery funds for other cities within the County for prior disasters at the request of the State. This experience has garnered the trust of our Cities and other government partners and who expecting the rapid disbursement of recovery funds.

Conclusion

It is critical that recovery funding flow directly to the most impacted community that can demonstrate the capacity to administer such funds. Harris County has the demonstrated capacity to do so and can ensure the rapid implementation of recovery programs to meet the needs of our most affected residents. Your decision to approve a direct grant to Harris County will ensure that rapid recovery can and will occur.

Sincerely,

Ed Emmett

Re: Texas Hurricane Harvey (DR-4332-TX) – CDBG-DR Request

Dear Governor Abbott:

As the estimates to the City of Houston (COH) for Hurricane Harvey (DR-4332-TX), come in, we are requesting your assistance in seeking a supplemental appropriation for Community Development Block Grant- Disaster Recovery (CDBG-DR) in the amount of $22.0 billion. My administration has the expertise and capacity to manage these funds directly to expedite deployment in our community via direct allocation. We submit this preliminary plan for this funding in the disaster impacted areas for the following areas:

- Housing: $12.5 billion of which 70% will be to conduct housing-related activities to ensure that low- and moderate-income residents can obtain or maintain safe and affordable housing options. As housing needs continue to emerge and data becomes available, the City will refine the request to determine the extent of need for specific types of housing assistance including the need for:
    - Relocation of City residents displaced by the disaster
    - Rehabilitation and reconstruction of single family and multi-family properties in affected areas
    - Homeownership activities
    - Clearance and demolition, tied to recreating units
- Infrastructure: $5.0 billion for street level and neighborhood focused projects:
    - Acquisition of lands for sub-regional detention basins
    - Upgrade the drainage infrastructure within flood impacted areas
    - Improve waste water and water infrastructure addressing flood protection, water quality and possible consolidation

Council Members: Brenda Stardig Jerry Davis Ellen R. Cohen Dwight A. Boykins Dave Martin Steve Le Greg Travis Karla Cisneros

INTERGOVERNMENTAL SERVICE AGREEMENT

INTERGOVERNMENTAL SERVICE AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE
UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY
FEDERAL EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT AGENCY
AND
THE STATE OF TEXAS GENERAL LAND OFFICE

I. Parties:

The parties to this Intergovernmental Service Agreement ("Agreement") are the Department of Homeland Security Federal Emergency Management Agency ("FEMA") and the State of Texas General Land Office ("State").

II. Authority:

This Agreement is authorized by:

A. Homeland Security Act of 2002, Pub. L. No. 107-296 (2002) (codified as amended at 6 U.S.C. § 101 et seq.)

B. Sections 306 and 408 of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, Pub. L. No. 93-288 (1974) (codified as amended at 42 U.S.C. §§ 5149 and 5174) ("Stafford Act")

C. Department of Homeland Security Delegation of Authority No. 9001.1, Delegation to the Administrator of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (Dec. 10, 2010)

D. Title 44 of the U.S. Code of Federal Regulations, Chapter I, Part 206.

E. Texas Disaster Act of 1975 (Tex. Gov't Code § 418)

F. Federal Grant and Cooperative Agreement Act, 31 U.S.C. § 6301 et seq.

III. Background:

On August 25, 2017, the President declared major disaster DR-4332 for the State pursuant to his authority under the Stafford Act. (82 FR 42691 (Sept. 11, 2017.) This declaration authorized FEMA to provide financial assistance and direct services, under Section 408 of the Stafford Act, to individuals and households "who, as a direct result of a major disaster, have necessary expenses and serious needs in which the individuals and households are unable to meet such expenses, or needs through other means," such as insurance. FEMA may provide direct temporary housing when there are a lack of available housing resources. In addition, FEMA may authorize Permanent Housing Construction (PHC) in the form of direct or financial assistance when there are no alternate housing resources available and temporary housing assistance is not available, is infeasible, or not cost effective.

FEMA determined that due to the significant damage caused by Hurricane Harvey in the State, the exigent need for housing requires the provision of direct housing assistance to eligible survivors under Section 408. FEMA is in need of support to execute the direct housing mission for DR-4332, and the State has expressed a desire and the capability to provide the needed support.

IV. Purpose:

A. The purpose of this Agreement is to establish an agreement between FEMA and the State for the provision of direct housing assistance, under section 408 of the Stafford Act, to individuals and households who are displaced from their pre-disaster residences, or whose pre-disaster primary residences are rendered uninhabitable as a result of damage caused by Hurricane Harvey, and who are unable to meet the expenses associated with procuring housing by other means.

B. This Agreement sets forth the responsibilities of FEMA and the State and states the services that the State shall perform satisfactorily in order to receive payment from FEMA.

V. Services and Period of Performance:

A. The State shall provide assistance to FEMA in the delivery of direct temporary housing, and direct permanent housing construction assistance to Hurricane Harvey survivors residing within the areas declared by DR-4332. See Attachment 1, Program Implementation and Conditions.

B. Performance Period: The period of performance shall be for 18 months from the date of the disaster declaration (August 25, 2017). FEMA may, at the State's request, extend the period of performance if FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery determines that due to extraordinary circumstances an extension would be in the public interest.

C. Procurement Standards: The State will generally comply with the procurement standards detailed in 2 CFR 200.317-326 in conjunction with state emergency procurement law.

D. Similar Agreements: To the extent a similar agreement is executed between FEMA and another state for the provision of direct temporary housing and direct permanent housing construction assistance with terms and conditions that are more favorable than those offered to the State of Texas General Land Office, the more favorable terms and conditions will immediately apply to this Agreement upon approval by the State of Texas General Land Office.

VI. Issuance of Orders

A. For the purpose of this Agreement, the FEMA Contracting Officer may issue orders on either a firm-fixed-price basis, or a total not-to-exceed basis (time and materials) or a combination of both. Terms and conditions applicable to any order shall be as described in this Agreement.

B. The intent is to allow the State, and its local partners, to begin work on discrete projects as the specific need and capacity are identified, defined, and established. The State, within the general scope of this Agreement, may propose projects based on program service line item(s), political subdivision(s), or any combination thereof.

C. FEMA will obtain written technical and cost program proposals from the State. The proposal generally shall include the following, as appropriate to the task:

1. Task to be performed;
2. Scope of task;
3. Time for completion or target date;
4. A detailed cost estimate;
5. Other pertinent information, such as technical/management approach;
6. QA/QR [Quality Assurance/Quality Review] plan;
7. Total firm-fixed-price or ceiling price (for Time and Material); and
8. Any other requirements specific or unique to the project.

D. FEMA will evaluate the State's proposals, and negotiate and memorialize appropriate cost and quality control mechanisms in a timely manner, as necessary.

E. Only upon receipt of an executed order, signed by the Contracting Officer, shall the State commence work. All orders are subject to the terms and conditions of this contract. In the event of conflict between an order and the Agreement, the Agreement shall control.

F. The State shall notify the Contracting Officer within 24 hours if any significant difficulties with regard to performance according to the terms of the order are anticipated or any time significant difficulties in performance arise.

G. If at any time during the performance of a time and materials order it appears that additional funds will be required to complete performance, the State shall promptly notify the Contracting Officer in writing. Such notification shall include the costs expended, an estimate of costs required to complete the order, and an explanation of why the originally negotiated estimated costs were not adequate. The Government shall have the right to require the State to continue performance up to the originally estimated cost level and to suspend work thereafter, negotiate a new set of work priorities to be completed within the remaining funds, to modify the order, increasing the estimated cost to the level appropriate for completion of the work, or to modify the order to reduce the total to coincide with actual work accomplished.

VII. Rates and Ceiling:

A. FEMA agrees to pay the State for documented, reasonable, and allowable, and allocable costs related to assistance provided to applicants, in accordance with the terms of Attachment 1, Federal law, and FEMA regulation and policy.

B. 2 CFR Part 200. The State, by execution of this Agreement, certifies that the pricing established under this Agreement is in compliance the Cost Principles in 2 CFR Part 200, Subpart E, and includes only allowable costs of performance under this Agreement.

C. The State shall not exceed the total ceiling price in services for FEMA without written modification by a FEMA Contracting Officer, such written modification to be provided in a timely manner. Any such modification shall be reviewed by FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery prior to approval.

If at any time the State has reason to believe that the payments and material costs that will accrue in performing this Agreement in the next succeeding 30 days, if added to all other payments and costs previously accrued, will exceed 80 percent of the ceiling price in the Schedule, the State shall notify the Contracting Officer giving a revised estimate of the total price to FEMA for performing this contract with supporting reasons and documentation.

D. FEMA is not obligated to pay the State any amount in excess of the ceiling price, and the State shall not be obligated to continue performance if to do so would exceed the ceiling price set forth in the Schedule, unless and until the Contracting Officer notifies the State in writing that FEMA has approved the increase in the ceiling price and specifies in the notice a revised ceiling approved by FEMA.

E. If at any time during the performance of this contract, the State has reason to believe that the total price to FEMA for performing this contract will be substantially greater or less than the stated ceiling price, the State shall so notify the Contracting Officer, giving a revised estimate of the total price for performing this contract, with supporting reasons and documentation. FEMA generally will not approve a total price that exceeds the stated ceiling price.

FEMA may approve such an excess only if the supporting reasons and documentation provided by the State demonstrate extraordinary circumstances.

F. If at any time during performance of this contract, FEMA has reason to believe that the work to be required in performing this contract will be substantially greater or less than the stated ceiling price, the Contracting Officer will so advise the State, given the then revised estimate of the total amount of effort to be required under the contract.

VIII. Program Service Cost Controls

A. Each program assistance service line item has a per applicant household cap established.

B. The program service cost-control methods will be applied, as detailed in Attachment 1.

C. Only the Contracting Officer may approve exceptions to the program service cost caps which exceed the amounts or justifications described in Attachment 1.

IX. Administrative Costs

A. State administrative costs for the direct housing program will be calculated and managed for purposes of this agreement in an analogous manner to the current PA model delineated in 44 CFR 207.7(b) and (c).

B. Administrative Costs means any direct and indirect costs, administrative expenses, and any other expenses not directly chargeable to a specific project that are reasonably incurred by the State and municipalities in administering and managing this mission. Indirect costs means costs that are incurred by the State and municipalities for a common or joint purpose benefiting more than one cost objective that are not readily assignable to the cost objectives specifically benefited.

C. Administrative costs are not intended to cover direct costs of managing specific projects because these costs generally are eligible as part of the cost accounting for each project.

D. Administrative costs will be actual costs, capped at 6% of the final program costs.

E. The State must submit an administrative plan and include procedures for sub-recipient administrative costs amount or percentage determination, pass through, closeout, and audit. The State will submit this initial administrative cost funding request/invoice before any administrative fees for the direct housing program can be disbursed.

F. An initial 25% of the State's total projected administrative cost amount will be disbursed upon the submission and approval of the plan with additional funds obligated and released as program requirements stabilize. The State may submit a funding request for additional administrative costs, upon a showing of need and a revised administration plan. FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery may approve or deny such request at his discretion.

G. Final administrative costs accounting will be verified upon agreement closeout, and based on actuals, not initial projection amounts. Any surplus is subject to reimbursement to FEMA.

X. Program Funding

A. FEMA will obligate funds to the State upon approval and issuance of project orders under Section VI. This money will be drawn down upon via the invoicing procedures contained herein.

B. Approved proper invoices will draw down against obligated projects on a reimbursable basis.

C. If the State requires additional funding to ensure compliance with the Prompt Payment Act requirements, Tex. Govt. Code 2251, are being met, it shall submit a written request to the Contracting Officer detailing the need and proposed solution.

XI. Invoicing and Payment:

A. Subject to the availability of funds from the Disaster Relief Fund (DRF), FEMA will provide funding to the State in accordance with this Agreement.

B. The State shall submit a project management plan package to include performance schedule and cost estimates for work to be performed under each program, as outlined in Attachment 1. The package will be reviewed by FEMA for acceptance. Upon determination of acceptance, a proper invoice for the amount accepted by FEMA will be submitted by the State for payment. The original invoice payment request shall be submitted via email as provided in the attached invoice instructions below. The FEMA Point of Contact for payment issues is Dennis C. Clements.

C. Each invoice submitted shall contain the following information:

1. The date of invoice submission;
2. Invoice date and number;
3. Agreement number;
4. Detail of the Services provided and work completed;
5. Breakdown of the political subdivisions at which services were provided;

6. Breakdown by service and associated CLIN;
7. Itemized listing of all other charges;
8. Supporting documentation;
9. Name, title, and phone number of person to notify in event of defective invoice;
10. Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN).

D. Attachments 3 and 4 are the approved and required Invoice templates for use by the State in submitting for payment.

E. FEMA shall review the invoice and make payment on a proper invoice within 10 business days of receipt.

F. For any improper or questioned invoice, FEMA will review and deny or resubmit with 14 business days.

G. Payment will be made by electronic funds transfer.

XIII. Liability Provisions:

A. The parties each agree to be responsible for the negligent or wrongful acts or omissions of their respective employees.

B. FEMA liability for any injury, damage, or loss to persons or property arising in the performance of this Agreement and caused by the negligence of its own officers, employees, agents and representatives shall be governed by the Federal Tort Claims Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2691 et seq. The State shall promptly notify FEMA of any claims or lawsuits filed against any FEMA employees of which the State is notified.

C. State liability, if any, for any injury, damage or loss to persons or property arising out of the performance of this Agreement and caused by the negligence of its own officers, employees, agents, and representatives shall be governed by the laws of the State of Texas. All Agreement and financial records including, but not limited to, supporting documents, statistical records, and other records, pertinent contracts, or subordinate agreements under this Agreement shall be retained by the State for three (3) years after the expiration of the Agreement for purposes of federal examinations and audit. If any litigation, claim, negotiation, audit, or other action involving the records is initiated before the expiration of the three (3) year period, the records must be retained until completion of the action and resolution of all issues which arise from it or until the end of the regular three (3) year period, whichever is later.

Replacement services requested, due to fault or negligence of performance, in excess of the associated cap or cost-control method will be ineligible for reimbursement.

F. If this Agreement is terminated, within 4 months of the notice of termination, the State must submit a final invoice for services provided and administrative costs incurred up until the date of termination. The Federal Government shall not be liable to the State for damages incurred for early termination.

4. FEMA is responsible for compliance with a number of environmental and historic preservation laws. These responsibilities cannot be delegated to the State. FEMA will work with the State to gather the necessary information to ensure compliance.

5. FEMA will provide all necessary forms to the State and detail when each form is required for use within 15 days of the execution of the IGSA.

6. FEMA is responsible for making all applicant eligibility determinations for Direct Temporary Housing and Permanent Housing Construction under section 408 of the Stafford Act and notifying the applicant of their approval for Direct Temporary Housing Assistance or PHC. Based upon the casework being performed by the State, any requested changes to the eligibility determined by FEMA must be reviewed and approved by FEMA. FEMA will retain determinations in the National Emergency Management Information System (NEMIS) and provide eligibility determinations to the State. The State or local jurisdiction will be responsible for working with the applicant to implement or update the Direct Housing option, with approval from FEMA.

The State, upon working with the applicant, will consider the below criteria and inform FEMA if the recommended Direct Housing solution has changed. After reviewing the State's proposal, FEMA will provide final approval of updated Direct Housing determinations for applicants. The criteria are:
    a. Timeliness, availability, and cost;
    b. Suitability for the applicant's household, including members of the household with disabilities or other access and functional needs;
    c. Location of available option, and
    d. Environmental and Historic Preservation compliance requirements, including consideration of options available outside the SFHA.

9. The State shall provide weekly reports to FEMA identifying for each applicant referred to the State by FEMA:
    a. The housing option recommended for each applicant;
    b. Justification for any change to FEMA's initial determination using the criteria identified above;
    c. The date the applicant begins occupying temporary housing provided by the State or repairs are complete;
    d. Any accessibility modification or other reasonable accommodations provided for applicants with disability or other access and functional need; and
    e. The continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance eligibility recommendation for applicants placed in Direct Temporary Housing Assistance.

10. The State shall develop a strategy for regular maintenance and repair for all forms of Direct Temporary Housing Assistance.

11. Direct Temporary Housing Assistance is limited to 18 months following the date of the disaster declaration. The period of assistance for this disaster began on August 25, 2017, and will end on February 25, 2019. At the State's request, FEMA may extend the period of assistance if FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery determines that due to extraordinary circumstances an extension would be in the public interest.

    j. The State will begin to coordinate with FEMA on the end of program or potential need for an extension of the program within 90 days of February 25, 2019.

Duplication of Benefits

1. A duplication of benefit (DOB) may occur when an insured direct temporary housing occupant receives Additional Living Expense (ALE) or Loss of Use (LOU) insurance benefits that cover the cost of renting alternative housing. When FEMA identifies a DOB with ALE or LOU while making an eligibility determination, FEMA will initiate steps to collect the ALE or LOU benefits for housing costs. FEMA will base the amount of the monthly payment on the ALE or LOU amount not to exceed the Fair Market Rent (FMR) rate established by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the size (number of bedrooms) and location of the housing unit. FEMA will only collect payments until the total amount of the ALE or LOU insurance has been exhausted or the occupant vacates the direct THU, whichever is first. The State will inform FEMA when an applicant with ALE is placed in and vacates a direct temporary housing assistance option.

2. PHC represents a DOB with financial housing assistance: Applicants determined eligible for PHC who choose to receive PHC must provide documentation of the use of any previously provided FEMA financial housing assistance for Repair, and return all unused, previously provided financial housing assistance for Repair or Replacement to FEMA.

3. Right of Recoupment: The State agrees that FEMA may seek reimbursement for any identified DOB, including through the reduction of future disaster relief awards to applicants, the State, or other parties to this agreement.

Compliance with Environmental and Historic Preservation Laws and Executive Orders

1. FEMA will provide the State a matrix of Environmental and Historic Preservation Compliance requirements, including the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), the National Historic Preservation Act, and Executive Order 11988 Floodplain Management (44 CFR Part 9) to help inform the choice of best housing option for the applicant's location.

2. FEMA is responsible for compliance with a number of environmental and historic preservation laws. These responsibilities cannot be delegated to the State. FEMA will work with the State to gather the necessary information to ensure compliance.

Direct Temporary Housing Terms and Conditions

Eligibility Conditions

1. All eligibility determinations by FEMA for Direct Temporary Housing Assistance and continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance will be made by FEMA in accordance with the Stafford Act, and implementing regulations, and IHPUG.

Continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance Conditions

1. The State will monitor the progress that Direct Temporary Housing occupants are making towards obtaining and occupying permanent housing within the 18 month period of assistance, based on the conditions outlined by FEMA's regulations at 44 C.F.R § 206.117(b)(1)(ii)(G).

2. The State will provide FEMA with a recommendation for continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance to individuals and households based on these conditions until February 25, 2019.

3. FEMA will make the final determination on an applicant's eligibility for continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance based on the State's recommendation.

Termination of Direct Temporary Housing Assistance Conditions

1. The State may recommend to FEMA to terminate an occupant's Direct Temporary Housing Assistance for any reason not prohibited by the Stafford Act, FEMA's regulations at 44 C.F.R § 206.117(b)(1)(ii)(G), or IHPUG.

2. FEMA must approve all terminations and appeal decisions in a timely manner before the applicant is notified.

3. The State shall utilize FEMA templates to notify the applicant of the termination and provide FEMA with copies of all termination notices, appeals, and appeal decisions within seven days of the date issued to ensure FEMA is able to record these documents in NEMIS.

Direct Lease Conditions

1. The State may lease to Eligible Applicants, existing residential property, not typically available to the general public, for use as temporary housing for eligible individuals and households.

2. The State may lease properties that comply with Housing Quality Standards (HQS) established by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), to provide complete and independent living facilities for one or more persons, including permanent provisions for living, sleeping, cooking, and sanitation. All utilities, appliances, and other furnishings must be functional.

3. The State shall evaluate properties according to the following factors:
    a. Cost to the federal government: The State shall lease properties with per-unit rent at or below the Fair Market Rent (FMR) established by HUD. If the State is unable to obtain sufficient rental resources, the State shall conduct an analysis of prevailing market rates and may increase leases to properties with per-unit rent of up to 125% of FMR. Properties with per-unit rent above 125% of the Fair Market Rate established by HUD must be approved by FEMA;

b. Landlord's demonstrated ability to manage and provide maintenance services;
c. Proximity to community and wrap-around services, such as accessible public transportation, schools, fire and emergency services, grocery stores, health care services, etc.;
d. When selecting available properties, the State may prioritize properties that are already accessible, include accessibility features, or can be easily made accessible; and are in proximity to accessible public transportation.

    b. A copy of the lease contract specifying the monthly rent rates.
    c. A copy of the lease agreement signed between the applicant and the property and the applicant and the State, for each applicant.

Multi-Family Lease and Repair (MLR) Conditions

1. The State may enter into lease agreements with owners of multi-family rental properties located in Individual Assistance designated counties to house Eligible Applicants and make repairs or improvements to existing multi-family housing units in order to provide temporary housing to Eligible Applicants.

2. Per the Stafford Act, under the terms of any lease agreement for property entered into under MLR, the value of the improvements or repairs shall be deducted from the value of the lease agreement and may not exceed the value of the lease. To determine the cost-effectiveness of the potential MLR property, the State will deduct the estimated cost of repairs and improvements from the value of the lease as follows:
    a. The State will determine the estimated cost of repairs or improvements by performing an independent cost estimate for the necessary repairs and improvements, or receive an estimated cost for repairs and improvements from the building contractor.
    b. The State will determine the value of the lease agreement by multiplying the monthly FMR by the number of units, and then multiplying the number of months remaining between the date the repairs are completed and the end of the 18 month period of assistance, which is February 25, 2019.
    c. The estimated total cost per unit is up to $21,000 unless approved by FEMA.

i. This includes a minimal monthly maintenance cost per unit for the operation of the property.
ii. The State can also provide one month's cost for a security deposit for each unit.
iii. FEMA may approve an increase to the cap up to 25% for access and functional needs-related costs.

3. Properties located within a floodway, coastal high-hazard area, or Coastal Barrier Resource Unit are not eligible for this program.

6. Within 14 days of completion, the State must provide FEMA the following documentation:
    a. Paid invoices documenting the expenses incurred for repairs and improvements;
    b. A copy of the occupancy certificate issued by the local government; and

7. All repairs shall be made in a manner consistent with current local building codes, standards, permitting, inspection requirements, and all applicable environmental planning and historic preservation (EHP) laws and regulations. Items will be repaired when feasible, but may be replaced when cost-effective to the government or when necessary to ensure the health and safety of the occupant. The State will be responsible for obtaining local permits, but can delegate this responsibility.

RV Conditions (currently only approved for DR-4332-TX)

1. The State may provide and place RVs certified to comply with the Recreation Vehicle Industry Association (RVIA) standards established on July 1, 2012.

2. The State will notify disaster survivors with access and functional needs who request a RV that a reasonable modification may be available upon request. If survivors are unable to occupy an RV due to access and functional needs:
    a. The State, with approval from FEMA, may make other forms of direct temporary housing assistance available, which meets the survivor's access and functional needs, including Uniform Federal Accessibility Standards (UFAS)-compliant MHUs if needed.
    b. Should the State require UFAS-compliant MHUs, FEMA will provide them on behalf of the State.

    a. A copy of Purchase Order and Bill of Sale.

6. The State shall be responsible for disposing of RVs provided under this IGSA in accordance with Section 408(d)(2) of the Stafford Act. The State must provide documentation of the method of disposal for all units. The State shall return the proceeds from any sale of the units to FEMA.

MHU Conditions

1. The State may procure, haul, and install MHUs as a form of Direct Temporary Housing Assistance.

[1] On December 12, 2016, the EPA issued a final rule mirroring the CARB standards as required by the Formaldehyde Standards for Composite Wood Products Act, Pub. L. 111-199 (2010), 15 U.S.C. § 2601 note. The rule will take effect in December 2017; however regulated entities may voluntarily label compliant products as soon as compliance can be achieved. See 40 CFR Part 770.

2. The number of bedrooms in the MHU must accommodate the applicant's household composition, as recorded during the FEMA inspection.

3. Units must comply with 24 C.F.R. Part 3280 Manufactured Home Construction and Safety Standards ("HUD code").

4. The estimated cost per unit is up to $92,000 unless approved by FEMA.
    a. This cost includes procurement, hauling and installing the unit, and any maintenance and deactivation costs.
    b. FEMA may approve an increase to the cap up to 25% for access and functional needs-related costs.

5. Any UFAS MHU provided for an Eligible Applicant with a disability or other access and functional needs will be provided by FEMA, and must be installed with a functioning Tank and Pump System prior to occupancy.

6. Any FEMA-sourced MHU provided for an eligible applicant must be installed with a functioning Tank and Pump System prior to occupancy except where to do so would cause a delay in allowing the applicant to take occupancy, in which case the Tank and Pump System shall be installed at the earliest possible date after occupancy. This requirement for the installation of a Tank and Pump System does not apply to any state-sourced MHU provided to an Eligible Applicant.

7. The State shall provide FEMA, on a weekly basis, the following documentation for MHUs procured for use as temporary housing:
    a. A copy of Purchase Order and Bill of Sale.

8. The State shall be responsible for disposing of MHUs provided under this IGSA in accordance with Section 408(d)(2) of the Stafford Act. The State must provide documentation of the method of disposal for all units. The State shall return the proceeds from any sale of the units to FEMA.

RV and MHU Site Conditions

1. The State may provide RVs and MHUs to eligible applicants and place them on private and commercial sites.
    a. The estimated monthly cost per pad lease is up to $600 unless approved by FEMA.

2. Placement of RVs and MHUs as post-disaster temporary housing in a SFHA/1-percent annual chance year floodplain must comply with 44 C.F.R. Part 9 and FEMA Directive/Instruction 108-1, Environmental Planning and Historic Preservation

a. Pursuant to 44 CFR §9.13 (d)(2), no MHUs or other readily-fabricated dwellings can be placed within a floodway, coastal high-hazard area, even under the abbreviated decision-making process. No MHUs or other readily-fabricated dwellings can be placed within a Coastal Barrier Resource Unit.
b. In accordance with 44 C.F.R. §9.13(d)(4)(i), MHUs placed on a private or commercial site in a SFHA must be elevated to the fullest extent practicable up to the Base Flood Elevation (BFE) and adequately anchored.
    i. The State shall evaluate RV and MHU placement sites individually, and make a determination regarding a site's suitability for RV or MHU placement based on the best available flood hazard information for that site.
c. RVs will not be placed in the regulatory Floodway or Coastal High Hazard Areas.
d. RVs will only be placed in the SFHA if no other housing options are available. In order to reduce the risk of loss of life of the occupants, RVs may be placed in the SFHA only where base flood depths are sufficiently shallow to allow for timely and safe evacuation from the RV on foot. RVs placed in the SFHA will be adequately anchored.
e. Prior to placement, the State shall provide for each RV and MHU a completed Request for Site Inspection Report (FEMA form 010-0-9), to include, latitude and longitude of the proposed location.
f. Placement of MHUs or other readily fabricated dwellings must be in accordance and compliance with Texas Manufactured Housing Division regulations.

    b. The State will prioritize sites provided by the State and local government at no cost before leasing a site from a private party.
    c. When considering the placement of MHU at potential group sites, the State must coordinate with the Environmental Planning and Historic Preservation Program.

d. FEMA, including Environmental Planning and Historic Preservation, approval must be obtained prior to any site lease and site construction activity.
e. The estimated cost per pad is up to $50,000 unless approved by FEMA.

Eligibility Conditions

1. Applicants may be eligible for PHC assistance after a FEMA determination that all other forms of temporary housing are not available, feasible, or cost effective.

2. PHC assistance shall only include repairs (PHC-Repairs) not PHC-Replacement. Reference "Attachment 2: Detailed Eligible Permanent Housing Construction-Repairs," for eligible repair items.

3. At the State's recommendation, FEMA may approve PHC Repair for eligible applicants whose homes are feasible to repair when:
    a. The repairs are estimated to be completed within 90 days or less from the start of the repair work;
    b. The damages are less than fifty percent of the market value prior to the disaster; and
    c. The estimated labor and materials costs are up to $60,000 unless approved by FEMA. FEMA generally will not approve a total price that exceeds this amount.
        i. FEMA may approve an increase to the cap up to 25% for access and functional needs-related costs.

4. PHC-Repair is not eligible when the State identifies:
    a. The home requires repairs to structural elements (e.g. foundation, frame) or other items requiring architectural or engineering services;
    b. The home requiring repairs with estimated costs that exceed fifty percent of the market value of the structure before the damage occurred; or
    c. The home is determined to be "repetitive loss or severe repetitive loss", as identified by the National Flood Insurance Program, and the cost to be brought into compliance with the local floodplain exceeds the maximum allowable costs for PHC-Repair.

5. Any home located within a SFHA shall not be considered for PHC repairs unless in accordance with applicable federal, and local laws, regulations, and ordinances, and can be repaired within the PHC cost limits.

6. Applicants determined eligible by FEMA for PHC may choose either to:
    a. Receive PHC, provide documentation of the use of any previously provided financial housing assistance for Repair, and return all unused, previously provided financial housing assistance for Repair or Replacement to FEMA; OR

b. Receive Direct Temporary Housing Assistance, if available, and keep any financial housing assistance for Repair or Replacement that FEMA previously provided.

7. In order to be referred to the State for PHC, eligible applicants who choose to receive PHC assistance must sign an acknowledgement of the following terms and conditions:
    a. The applicant agrees to participate in the State program, including right of entry;
    b. The applicant agrees to obtain and maintain flood insurance coverage on the home for at least the value of the repairs provided the home is located in an SFHA. FEMA will not contribute to the cost of flood insurance premiums; and
    c. An applicant's decision to accept or decline PHC shall be considered final; FEMA will not re-consider an applicant for Direct Temporary Housing Assistance or PHC after they have declined either form of assistance. Applicants who accept PHC will not be considered for any additional FEMA Housing Assistance, including financial Temporary Housing Assistance.

8. The State and FEMA agree that applicants for PHC-Repair should not include those applicants whose properties may eventually be eligible for elevation or a buy-out. The State and FEMA will work together to ensure applicants eligible for PHC-Repair are reviewed for potential future mitigation, elevation, or home buy-out programs and, to the maximum extent possible, minimize PHC-Repair approval for those applicants.

9. The State and FEMA's responsibility to provide Direct Housing Assistance to the applicant ends once the completed PHC-Repairs are accepted by the applicant.

PHC Repair Conditions

1. Under PHC, the State will not repair or replace items eligible under Other Needs Assistance for Personal Property, such as furnishings and appliances.

2. The State will need to ensure that there is no duplication of benefits between emergency work provided under the Sheltering and Temporary Essential Power (STEP) program and PHC-Repair assistance, and report to FEMA on the mechanism for doing so within thirty (30) days of initiating the PHC-Repair program. FEMA will only reimburse for specific line items repairs for a property under PHC or STEP, not under both options.

3. PHC-Repairs are limited to real property components eligible under FEMA Housing Assistance that were damaged by the disaster and functional before the declared event. The State shall only perform repairs necessary to restore the pre-disaster residence to a habitable condition. The completed repairs shall ensure the pre-disaster residence is restored to a safe, sanitary, and functional condition.

4. All repairs shall be made in a manner consistent with current local building codes, standards, or minimal acceptable construction industry standards by the area, permitting, inspection requirements, and all applicable environmental planning and historic preservation (EHP) laws and regulations. Items will be repaired when feasible, but may be replaced when cost-effective to the government or when necessary to ensure the health and safety of the occupant. The State will be responsible for obtaining local permits, but can delegate this authority.

5. Prior to repairing a property, the State shall provide for each property an initial inspection report to include:
    a. Location, physical address and latitude and longitude;
    b. Date of construction, and
    c. An exterior photo.

6. Repairs shall be made using materials of average quality used in new construction, in accordance with 44 C.F.R. § 206.117(b)(4)(iii), and taking into account the accessibility needs of the occupant.

7. Repairs to accessibility features and accessible routes will be guided by the Americans with Disabilities Act Accessibility Guidelines (ADAAG) and HUD Design Details for Accessible Disaster Relief Housing.

8. The State shall provide to FEMA the following documentation within 7 business days of completing PHC Repairs for an applicant:
    a. Completed property inspection report;
    b. Itemized repair cost estimate;
    c. Executed repair contract or work order, including itemized list of repairs performed;
    d. A copy of the occupancy certificate issued by the local government.

The Honorable Benjamin S. Carson
Secretary
U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development
451 7th Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20410

Dear Mr. Secretary:

Congress passed the Federal Records Act of 1950 to provide the framework for records management for federal government agencies. Many emails from federal employees are considered records under the Act and therefore subject to certain recordkeeping requirements. This Committee has legislative jurisdiction over the Federal Records Act, as well as the Presidential Records Act and Freedom of Information Act.[1] As technology has changed and the use of email and other modern forms of electronic communication have become ubiquitous, the Committee has been active in updating portions of these laws. These updates include the Presidential and Federal Records Act Amendments of 2014 and the FOIA Improvement Act of 2016.[2]

As part of our regular oversight duties, the Committee, from time to time, inquires of the Executive Branch departments and agencies about their compliance with these federal laws.[3] With numerous public revelations of senior executive branch employees deliberately trying to circumvent these laws by using personal, private, or alias e-mail addresses to conduct official government business, the Committee has aimed to use its oversight and investigative resources to prevent and deter misuse of private forms of written communication.[4] Based on yesterday's Politico reporting regarding private email use for official government business by a senior member of the President's staff,[5] today we write towards a similar end.

Housing groups urge Senate to confirm HUD general counsel (National Mortgage News)
National Mortgage News
(9/25/2017 6:17 PM, Brian Collins)
Nearly 30 housing groups are urging the Senate to move more quickly to confirm Paul Compton to be the new general counsel at the Department of Housing and Urban Development. President Trump nominated the Alabama attorney nearly six months ago. It is crucial for HUD to have a general counsel in place to deal with the ongoing "disaster relief efforts" in Texas, Florida and the Caribbean, according to the signers of a Sept. 25 letter to Senate leaders. "The aftermath of hurricanes Harvey and Irma require strong leadership from HUD. And the general counsel plays a critical role in creating and approving disaster relief programs and coordination between federal agencies," the joint letter said.

Compton, who would serve as the top lawyer for Secretary Ben Carson at HUD, is a partner in the Birmingham law firm of Bradley Arant Boult Cummings LLP. He has served as general counsel to the Alabama Affordable Housing Association and is a member and former state chairman of the American Bar Association Forum on Affordable Housing and Community Development. He is familiar with the Community Development Block Grant program and the HOME program, which provides housing for low- and very low-income Americans. Congress recently appropriated $7.4 billion to fund HUD's Community Development Block Grant disaster recovery programs. "His familiarity with HOME and CDBG make him a perfect candidate to serve as General Counsel," the letter said.

Ben Carson Weighs In On Anthem Controversy (KMJQ-FM Magic 102.1, TX)
KMJQ-FM Magic 102.1
(9/25/2017 10:43 PM, Nigel Roberts, Newsone)
It's no surprise that Carson sides with his boss, saying football fields on Sunday is neither the time nor place for protest.

On Sunday many NFL players, teams and owners displayed unity—in defiance of President Donald Trump—by kneeling or locking arms on football fields across the nation.

HUD Secretary Ben Carson backed his boss in the controversy, after the president used an obscenity against players who protest police brutality against Blacks by kneeling during the national anthem.

In a Facebook post, Carson reminisced fondly about NFL Sundays that were "a time of fun, games and unity." In his view, the national anthem is played before games as a symbol of national unity.

He acknowledged that all Americans have a right to protest. But quoting the Bible, he said there's an appropriate time and place for demonstrations.

Carson is shocked to see 8-year-old boys kneeling during the national anthem on the football field before their game.

Senators Introduce Legislation to Protect Children from Lead Poisoning (National Low Income Housing Coalition)
National Low Income Housing Coalition
(9/25/2017 1:01 PM, NLIHC)
Senators Richard Durbin (D-IL), Tim Scott (R-SC), Bob Menendez (D-NJ) Todd Young (R-IN), Joe Donnelly (D-IN) and Tammy

Duckworth (D-IL) introduced the "Lead-Safe Housing for Kids Act of 2017" (S. 1854) to protect children living in federally assisted housing from lead poisoning. While lead poisoning rates have fallen since the federal government enacted lead polices in the 1990s, the problem persists. Lead poisoning disproportionately impacts the children of minority and low income families. NLIHC has endorsed the bill.

The bill would require HUD to issue rules that mandate an initial risk assessment for lead-based hazards in low income housing constructed prior to 1978 before a family moves in. More rigorous examination than a mere visual inspection would be required for an initial risk assessment. The bill also provides an emergency transfer process for families without penalty or loss of assistance if a lead hazard is found in the home and the landlord fails to control the hazard within 30 days of being notified. Landlords would also have to disclose the presence of lead if lead hazards are found in the home.

HUD Funding, By the Numbers (LeadingAge)
LeadingAge
(9/22/2017, Linda Couch)
Keep track of funding for the federal housing programs you rely on with LeadingAge's new budget chart for selected programs.

The House's HUD funding bill for FY18 passed the House in mid-September and the Senate bill came out of the Senate Appropriations Committee in late July. Both bills provide sufficient, and significantly increased compared to FY17 enacted levels, for the Section 202 account. But, not all HUD programs fared so well, especially in the House bill. Both bills also include the expansion of HUD's successful Rental Assistance Demonstration preservation program to include Section 202s with Project Rental Assistance Contracts (RAD for PRAC), a key LeadingAge priority.

But, we need to continue to push for Congress to enact a final FY18 funding bill into law. Right now, absent appropriations bills completed by October 1 (the first day of FY18), Congress is operating under a continuing funding resolution until December 8.

Trump admin stonewalls on release travel records for HUD Secretary Ben Carson (Daily Kos)
Daily Kos
(9/26/2017 5:40 AM, Jen Hayden)
We know Treasury Secretary Steve Mnuchin has been jetting off to eclipse watch parties and requested a $25,000 per hour taxpayer-funded jet for his European honeymoon (request denied). We know Health and Human Services Secretary Tom Price has used taxpayer-funded private jets at least 24 times, something none of his predecessors did, and Price's trips itinerary included a trip to a retreat in Aspen, where he got his marching orders from the billionaire Koch brothers to repeal Obamacare or else they'll quit pumping money into the Republican party.

Given the Trump administration's unprecedented use of private taxpayer-funded jets stands to reason that the travel records of all Trump's cabinet members would be subject to scrutiny. The Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics (CREW) organization submitted a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request for the public travel records of Housing and Urban Development Secretary Ben Carson and they got a surprising reply. They are stonewalling the release of the Carson's travel records, rebuffing the FOIA request by claiming CREW's request for a fee reduction or waiver for the records is "not in the public interest." HUD sent their first letter rejecting the request on August 31 and again rejected the request a month later.

[NH] HUD's New England director will be former Ben Carson campaign official (Boston Business Journal, MA)
Boston Business Journal
(9/25/2017 8:38 PM, Catherine Carlock)
The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has named longtime Republican political consultant David Tille as New England Regional Administrator overseeing Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont.

Tille was previously New Hampshire state director for Dr. Ben Carson's presidential campaign. Carson, a neurosurgeon, now serves as HUD secretary.

For close to five years, Tille has served as Northeast Regional Director of the Job Creators Network in New Hampshire, a "pro-free enterprise organization of business owners, entrepreneurs and employers," HUD said in a release.

Tille also served as senior adviser former U.S. Sen. Robert Smith, who served from 1990 to 2003; U.S. Rep. Frank Guinta, who served from 2011 to 2013 and 2015 to 2017; and Jeb Bradley, the current Majority Leader of the New Hampshire Senate.

"This is a tremendous honor," Tille said in a statement. "I look forward to working with Sec. Carson, the HUD Region I team and our dedicated community partners across New England, to listen to and explore innovative ways to best meet the housing and community development needs of our region."

Tille is a U.S. Army veteran who served in active duty as a Russian linguist and analyst on Russia and Eastern Europe, according to his LinkedIn profile. He has a bachelor's degree in economics, political science and international administration from New England College in Henniker, New Hampshire and an associate of arts degree and certification as a Russian linguist from the Defense Institute in Presidio of Monterey, California.

[NH] Carson's former NH campaign director named region's top federal housing official (Boston Globe, MA)
Boston Globe
(9/26/2017 5:40 AM, Tim Logan)
A veteran New Hampshire political operative who ran Ben Carson's presidential campaign in that state has been named New England's top federal housing official.

David Tille was sworn in Monday as regional administrator for the New England office of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Previously the regional director of a free-market small business advocacy group, Tille has worked as an aide to three Republican members of Congress from New Hampshire and on various political campaigns in the state. In 2016 he ran campaign operations there for Carson, who is now HUD Secretary.

"This is a tremendous honor," Tille said in a statement. "I look forward to working with Secretary Carson, the HUD Region I team, and our dedicated community partners across New England, to listen to and explore innovative ways to best meet the housing and community development needs of our region."

Tille will take over a Boston-based office that oversees the six New England states for HUD, working with local governments and housing authorities on federal grants, economic development and housing programs.

HUD plays a key role overseeing vouchers and other low-income housing programs and local development block grants, and needs to approve large-scale projects to redevelop public housing in Boston. Earlier this year, the Trump administration proposed sharp cuts to HUD's budget, but has received pushback from Congress.

Concord resident was HUD secretary Carson's NH presidential campaign director MANCHESTER, N.H. — Former congressional policy staffer and longtime Republican strategist David Tille of Concord is the Trump administration's new New England Regional Administrator of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Tille, 51, was sworn in to the post Monday morning by Gregory Carson, HUD's New Hampshire field office director, after being designated for the post in recent weeks. The regional position did not require U.S. Senate confirmation.

Tille was the New Hampshire state director of the presidential campaign of the current HUD secretary, Dr. Ben Carson. During the 1990s, he worked in former Sen. Bob Smith's office with Pamela Patenaude, who was confirmed as deputy HUD secretary – the No. 2 post in the agency – on Sept. 14.

According to an announcement from HUD, Tille, as Region 1 administrator, will oversee HUD's operations in the six New England states, serving as the department's liaison to mayors, city managers, state and local officials, members of Congress, private and non-profit developers, stakeholders and customers. Tille is one of 10 HUD regional administrators nationally.

"This is a tremendous honor," Tille said in an official statement. "I look forward to working with Secretary Carson, the HUD Region 1 team and our dedicated community partners across New England to listen to and explore innovative ways to best meet the housing and community development needs of our region."

Prior to joining HUD, Tille was Northeast regional director of the Job Creators Network, a self-described "pro-free enterprise organization of business owners, entrepreneurs and employers."

[NY] Donovan hosts tour of HUD-funded Superstorm Sandy recovery projects in Staten Island (The Ripon Advance, NY)
The Ripon Advance
(9/26/2017 5:40 AM, Ripon Advance)
U.S. Rep. Dan Donovan (R-NY) led a tour of projects that are part of the Department of Housing and Urban Development's (HUD) ongoing efforts to rebuild storm-damaged areas in Staten Island, New York, in the aftermath of Superstorm Sandy in 2012.

Donovan hosted Lynne Patton, the administrator of HUD Region II, in visiting a house elevation project supported by HUD's Build it Back program and the Living Breakwaters project supported by Rebuild by Design, a HUD resiliency competition program.

"I'm glad Regional Administrator Patton accepted my invitation to spend a day on Staten Island," Donovan said. "Her commitment to personally visiting projects critical to Staten Island's future emphasizes her focus and determination at the helm of HUD's regional office."

Donovan's office has worked with hundreds of home elevation projects in Staten Island. He and Patton learned about the challenges and complications from local homeowner Lori Widlund on Thursday. Wildlund's elevation project is expected to mitigate future flood risks and help reduce flood insurance costs.

"It's no secret that New York City's recovery from Superstorm Sandy was too slow, too bureaucratic and too expensive," Donovan said. "There's plenty of blame to go around, including how Congress wrote the Sandy aid bill and how the city implemented it, and I hope we can learn from our mistakes. I'm confident Regional Administrator Patton will do a fantastic job, and I look forward to a productive and collaborative relationship."

[NJ] New HUD Regional Administrator Speaks in Atlantic City (SNJ Today, NJ)
SNJ Today
(9/26/2017 5:40 AM, SNJ Today)
ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. - The New Jersey Association of Housing and Redevelopment Authority held its annual housing conference in Atlantic City on Monday, September 25th, to discuss the work being done in the housing area.

This year's keynote speaker for the event was newly-appointed U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development Region II Regional Administrator Lynne Patton.

Patton spoke to housing stakeholders about the work she has been doing in New Jersey, and draw focus to important housing priorities in New Jersey, and throughout the region.

"It's great to see the change in a lot of different communities that you've been able to see firsthand how they've transitioned from urban, and maybe gritty, to mixed income and affordable, it's fantastic," said Patton.

Patton hopes under the new leadership, the department will spend more time and focus more attention to New Jersey, who she said had been forgotten about in the region over the years.

Patton joined Housing and Urban Development after nearly 10 years of public liaison experience as vice president for a non-profit, and senior aide and advisor to the Trump family at the Trump Organization.

[GA] Dougherty County looks for $100 million in federal disaster aid (WALB-TV NBC 10 Albany, GA)
WALB-TV NBC 10 Albany
(9/25/2017 5:18 PM, Amanda Hoskins)
DOUGHERTY CO., GA (WALB) - Dougherty County is asking for millions of dollars in disaster relief assistance from the federal government.

Now, the county is getting closer to receiving that assistance because of the help from a government affairs agency and its lobbyists.

The state has asked the federal government for $200 million for the state of Georgia. Half of that is for Dougherty County, according to lobbyists.

The money would come from the disaster relief sector of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, also known as HUD.

Right now HUD has a specific formula it goes by in order to allow cities and counties to apply for the money.

It's current formula only protected Dougherty County under flood disasters, not wind.

Lobbyists are working to change that formula to make Dougherty County eligible to receive money.

Lobbyists and Dougherty County Commission Chairman Chris Cohilas said the state government is on board and have already requested the funds.

"We have different damage here in this community. We have been working with our federal delegation to make sure that the requirements that are there actually coincide with the type of damage that we had. And a wind event is much different than a water event," explained Cohilas.

Cohilas said the money would help with long-range projects that will make the community more resilient, like reinvesting in Radium Springs, improving roads and burying power lines.

[AL] White House: No Problem with Carson Supporting Roy Moore (NewsMax)
NewsMax
(9/26/2017 1:20 AM, John Gizzi)
Three days ago, U.S. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Ben Carson made national news by stating his choice for the Republican U.S. Senate nomination in Alabama was not the candidate backed by the president or the vice president.

But while some may consider it insubordination by a Cabinet member, the White House made clear to Newsmax on Monday it had no problem with Carson making known his preference for former Alabama Chief Justice Roy Moore over Trump-backed Sen. Luther Strange.

Asked by Newsmax if Carson's blessing of Moore meant that members of the president's Cabinet and official family are free to disagree with him on matters such as a political contest, Press Secretary Sarah Sanders replied that "the president has a lot of people with a variety of backgrounds and certainly with a variety of opinions. He always welcomes them voicing those."

But Sanders stopped short of saying Carson had a free license to speaking out on the Alabama contest between Moore and Strange (which will be decided on Tuesday).

On Friday night, Donald Trump traveled to Alabama in the hopes of giving appointed Sen. Luther Strange (R) an 11th-hour boost ahead of tomorrow's primary runoff. Shortly before the president spoke, however, one of the president's high-profile cabinet secretaries announced his support for Strange's rival. The Washington Post reported:

> Housing and Urban Development Secretary Ben Carson issued a statement Friday supporting Roy Moore's candidacy for the Republican Senate nomination in Alabama, breaking with President Trump's endorsement of the establishment-backed incumbent Sen. Luther Strange.

Though Carson did not explicitly use the word "endorse" in his written statement, he didn't leave any doubts about whom he wants Alabama voters to support. "Judge Moore is a fine man of proven character and integrity, who I have come to respect over the years," Carson said. "He is truly someone who reflects the Judeo-Christian values that were so important to the establishment of our country.

"It is these values that we must return to make America great again. I wish him well and hope everyone will make sure they vote on Tuesday."

For now, let's put aside the bizarre belief that Roy Moore's theocratic vision and multiple ethical violations that forced him from the bench will "make America great." Instead, let's focus on the angles that make this story so problematic for Carson.

The first is the fact that a sitting president is publicly supporting one Senate candidate while one of his current cabinet secretaries is effectively telling voters, "Don't listen to my boss; vote for the other candidate." This kind of split within an administration is practically unheard of.

The second is that cabinet secretaries cannot legally intervene in ongoing political races. Ben Carson should know this – because it was just last year that his immediate predecessor got in trouble for running afoul of this prohibition.

Roy Moore continues to rake in endorsements both in Alabama and from outside of the state. Even though President Donald Trump has endorsed his opponent, U.S. Sen. Luther Strange, R-Ala.; Trump's Housing and Urban Development head, Ben Carson, announced his support of Moore on Friday.

"Judge Moore is a fine man of proven character and integrity, who I have come to respect over the years. I was delighted to hear he is running for the US Senate," Carson said. "He is truly someone who reflects the Judeo-Christian values that were so important to the establishment of our country. It is these values that we must return to in order to make America great again. I wish him well and hope everyone will make sure they vote on Tuesday."

“The American people are tired of the lack of leadership on Capitol Hill,” former U.S. Sen. Jim DeMint, R-S.C., said. “They want people who are willing to fight to save our country. Judge Moore has proven he has the courage and the commitment to stand up to the Washington establishment and help President Trump implement a positive agenda. That’s why the Kings of the Washington Swamp are working so hard to keep Judge Moore from becoming the next U.S. Senator from Alabama, and why conservatives are supporting him.”

[OH] What Went Wrong at the Alms? (Cincinnati CityBeat, OH)

Owners didn’t pay for upkeep. HUD didn’t pay attention. Now residents may have to leave.

For the last three decades, 76-year-old Aaron Jamison has lived in The Alms, a sprawling former luxury hotel at 2525 Victory Parkway. He and his late wife moved there in the 1980s, right around the time the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development signed a contract to provide Housing Assistance Payments for its low income residents.

He doesn’t want to leave, but he may have to soon as HUD pulls out of the building.

Over the years, longtime residents at the Alms witnessed the grand, red brick structure slowly sink like an unmanned ship. They navigated gloomy, under-lit hallways. They got trapped in its malfunctioning elevators. Bedbugs and roaches infested some of their units; others went without heat for months at a time.

Now, after decades of neglect by a succession of owners, HUD is acting to end its subsidies on the building — though it ignored warnings from city officials and its inspections just a few years ago didn’t detect the declining conditions there. Ironically, HUD’s move comes right as the Alms might be turning a corner.

VIDEO. CAIRO, IL (KFVS) - The town of Cairo, Illinois is getting support from Illinois officials.

U.S. Senators Tammy Duckworth (D-IL) and Dick Durbin (D-IL) are asking President Trump to form a Cabinet-level task force to address the housing, health and economic crises in Cairo.

According to the Senators, because the Federal government played a significant role in the city’s economic decline, it should also play an active role in its revival and recovery.

“Cairo was once home to bustling industries that supported local communities but, over the past century, has suffered a steady economic decline,” wrote the Senators. “Unlike many similarly situated communities, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) had a role in Cairo’s economic decline, and therefore, the federal government should play an active role in its recovery and revival… We hope that convening a new task force of relevant Cabinet members focused on the needs of Cairo will result in a plan to achieve our shared goals, as it is vital that the federal government does everything it can to promote the revitalization of this community.”

[IL] Feds to watch city’s public housing? Problem solved. (Belleville News-Democrat, IL)

After 32 years, the federal government decided to return the East St. Louis Housing Authority to local control, an occasion so momentous that it drew U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development Secretary Ben Carson.

There will be a local board overseeing the authority whose members received “extensive training” in what to look for, meaning the kind of political high jinks and contract padding that turned the city’s housing projects into crumbling hellholes to lead to the federal takeover. There will be a HUD oversight monitor and an oversight committee advising for two years.

Which might explain Carson's quote: "I don't think we're going to see any of those problems anytime soon."

We'll generously interpret that as the two years of oversight.

[TX] Congresswoman Sheila Jackson Lee Urges HUD to Quickly Disburse Community Development Block Grant Disaster Relief Funds to Help the Most Vulnerable Victims of Hurricane Harvey Victims (Houston Style Magazine, TX)

Washington, D.C. – Congresswoman Sheila Jackson Lee, a senior member of the House Homeland Security and Judiciary Committees, issued the following statement about her letter urging the Department of Housing and Urban Development to quickly disburse Community Development Block Grant disaster relief funds to help seniors and low income Hurricane Harvey victims secure housing:

"This month, the United States Congress took a significant step toward helping the victims of Hurricane Harvey recovery from catastrophe, when it passed legislation providing $15 billion in emergency relief funds including $7.4 billion in Community Development Block Grant funds. While the state of Texas and local governments are eager to begin the process of restoration, the funds have been slow to materialize.

"That is why I have sent a letter to Secretary Ben Carson of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, requesting that HUD immediately disburse the Community Development Block Grant funds to help those victims most vulnerable after the storm; seniors and low to moderate income individuals and families.

"I have also asked that the secretary provide maximum flexibility to recipients so that the funds typically earmarked for housing, can also be spent on infrastructure and mitigation projects to defend against future catastrophic events. I believe this will help to ensure the fullest possible recovery and the resiliency these communities will need moving forward.

[TX] Hurricane Harvey: Who Pays for Damage? (KXAS-TV NBC 5, Dallas - Fort Worth, TX)

An assortment of government agencies, insurance companies and private property owners will foot the $180+ billion bill

VIDEO. One of the many questions to emerge after Hurricane Harvey made landfall nearly one month ago is the matter of the bill – who pays to repair the damage?

The answer to the question is complicated because it involves an assortment of government agencies, insurance companies and private money.

Texas Gov. Greg Abbott has estimated the cost for cleanup after Hurricane Harvey will exceed $180 billion, which would make Harvey one of the costliest natural disasters in the history of the United States.

The state can only bear so much of the burden for Harvey recovery, according to the Governor's press office.

There is a $100 million Texas Disaster Relief Fund that will be tapped into, as well as the $4 billion 'Rainy Day Fund,' according to Governor Abbott's office. Money pulled from the Rainy Day Fund must be for a specific purpose, a representative for the Governor said, and cannot be a "blank check."

Earlier this month, Congress passed a $15 billion disaster aid package specific to Hurricane Harvey expenses.

The bulk of the money from the federal government will come from FEMA, which provides financial assistance to people who live in a federally-declared disaster area whose property has sustained damage.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development provides longer-term housing assistance to people who sustained damage in the 18 counties that are part of the Harvey disaster declaration.

The North Fork Rancheria of Mono Indians has been awarded a $605,000 U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Indian Community Development Block Grant (ICDBG) Program grant to undertake expansion and renovation of the Sierra Mono Museum located in North Fork.

The grant is part of a program that supports a wide range of community development and affordable-housing activities, from new housing for individual families to community amenities like recreation centers or water lines.

The North Fork Rancheria is among a small number of federally recognized tribes to receive a HUD grant in this round of funding.

"These grants will support Native American communities as they work to improve housing conditions and neighborhoods," said HUD Secretary Ben Carson. "HUD will continue to be a steadfast partner to tribes as they design and execute their community development plans."

"The North Fork Rancheria is acting like all good governments," said Tribal Chairman Gary Walker. "Our first priority is to protect people, property and culture, and this summer we've worked all sides of the equation, from protecting our community against wildfires to preserving our cultural artifacts in partnership with the Sierra Mono Museum."

According to Paul Irwin, North Fork Rancheria Indian Housing Authority's director, who prepared the grant application, the grant will greatly enhance the Museum's ability to preserve its extensive catalog of Mono items and artifacts. Most of the Museum revenues are currently derived from private donations, museum entrance and membership fees, and proceeds from its annual event, the Indian Fair and Pow Wow Day, said Irwin.

[HI] Missed deadlines leads the city to lose millions in federal housing funds (KFVE-TV 5 The Home Team, HI)

(9/25/2017 11:45 PM, Shawn Ching)
HONOLULU (HawaiiNewsNow) - Mayor Kirk Caldwell says dealing with Honolulu's housing crisis is one of his top priorities. But at the same time, the city just lost millions of dollars for housing programs and need-based rental assistance.

Hawaii News Now has learned the city missed deadlines to spend almost $10 million, and the federal government has already taken some of it back.

Federal officials say over $2 million has already been lost in federal funds, and another $7.5 million is at risk. All the federal money is intended to serve Oahu's low to moderate income population.

"The objective I think for just about every government agency is to receive the money, put it to good use, and expend it before you lose it, so any time we see loss of federal funds in particular, it's surprising to us," Ryan Okahara, the Honolulu Field Office Director for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, said.

Each year the city receives millions in federal grants from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). There's a deadline to spend that money under the HOME program, which HUD says, the city missed this year.

The money could've gone to for affordable housing or rental assistance, like Section 8.

Okahara says the city only spent four percent of the money it was given.

"The city has had challenges from time to time on spending money on initiatives that require close and significant coordination with the private sector. This occurs when there are delays in getting projects started, especially when third parties are involved," city Managing Director Roy Amemiya Jr. said.

HUD officials also say the city missed another critical deadline for HUD's Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program that could lead to another $7.5 million being lapsed.

Rubio's office will have two or three staffers on the island to assist Puerto Ricans with disaster claims, and the senator said he's exploring the possibility of low-interest loans to help Puerto Rico rebuild.

Puerto Rico's power utility declared a form of bankruptcy in July and the Puerto Rican government sought bankruptcy relief in exchange for supervised fiscal belt-tightening in May, further underscoring the need for federal assistance.

But the Trump administration isn't making any promises on the size and scope of long-term hurricane relief. The Department of Housing and Urban Development manages long-term disaster relief funding through the Community Development Block Grant Program. Trump wanted to eliminate that program earlier this year and some conservatives have voted against hurricane relief bills with long-term HUD funding in the past.

"Once we have a greater insight into the full assessment of damage, then we'll be able to determine what additional funds are needed," Huckabee Sanders said.

Reverse mortgage reforms create stampede among would-be borrowers (Orange County Register, CA)

A rules change that will raise fees and reduce loan amounts for reverse mortgages apparently has created a nationwide rush to get new loans completed before the reforms take effect Monday, Oct. 2.

Agencies providing financial counseling needed for such loans have been swamped, and a leading industry group has appealed for waivers and extensions so more borrowers will qualify under the old rules.

"Our industry is currently inundated," said Julie Martinez, a reverse mortgage housing counselor at the nonprofit HomeStrong USA housing agency in Rancho Cucamonga. "We have an enormous influx of calls and requests for appointments that's unprecedented."

Another agency, NeighborWorks Orange County, reported that calls requesting counseling jumped to 100 or more from 20 calls a day since rule changes were announced Aug. 29.

"It was just an all-of-a-sudden rush," said Helen O'Sullivan, NeighborWorks-OC chief executive. "It's possible most of them looked at the (new) terms and said, 'I don't want to pay more and get less.' "

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development sent emails last week to its network of counseling agencies to see if any of them has "capacity to take up additional clients for (reverse mortgage) counseling" before Friday, Sept. 29.

Watchdog: Ginnie Mae wasn't ready for nonbank mortgage lending boom (HousingWire)
HousingWire
(9/26/2017 6:00 AM, Ben Lane)
OIG report notes that Ginnie Mae made progress on oversight, but issues remain

As readers of HousingWire are likely well aware, over the last few years, there's been a shift in the mortgage business, with nonbanks significantly increasing their share of mortgage originations as the big banks dialed back in the wake of the financial crisis.

This shift was noted in a recent report from the Urban Institute, which showed that the nonbank origination share rose from 30% in 2013 to 60% in July 2017.

Over that same time period, Ginnie Mae experienced the largest shift, with its share of nonbank originations rising from 37% in 2013 to 75% this year. In 2011, nonbanks made up only 11% of Ginnie Mae's originations. Ginnie Mae is the arm of the federal government that securitizes federally insured mortgages.

And, according to a new report from a government watchdog, Ginnie Mae was not prepared for the rise of nonbank mortgage lending and "did not adequately respond" to the changes in its lender base.

The report, published late last week by the Department of Housing and Urban Development Office of the Inspector General, states that over the last few years, Ginnie Mae "did not implement policies and procedures in a timely manner for its account executives to follow in managing issuers, did not develop a written default strategy, and did not assess and address the risks posed by nonbanks in a timely manner."

U.S. Government Increasingly on Hook for Non-Bank Mortgages, Despite Lack of Regulators and Preparedness (The District Sentinel, DC)

Ginnie Mae has struggled to keep tabs on the rapid growth of the lightly-regulated non-bank mortgage market.

The wholesale mortgage guarantor's unpreparedness may leave it struggling "to immediately respond to increased risks posed" by recent industry changes, according to a report published Monday by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) inspector general.

"As a result, Ginnie Mae may not identify problems with issuers in time to prevent default," the report warned.

Ginnie Mae guarantees payments by issuers of certain mortgage-backed securities (MBS) to institutional investors, as part of government efforts to subsidize homeownership.

Financial institutions that don't engage in traditional retail banking activities have been increasingly active in the mortgage market, since the financial collapse and the subsequent enactment of Dodd-Frank financial regulations.

Down payments cast a big shadow, real and imagined, over home buyers (MarketWatch)

(9/25/2017 11:33 AM, Andrea Riquier)
Would-be buyers may think that the down payment is a bigger hurdle to homeownership than it really is Saving for a down payment remains one of the toughest nuts for would-be home buyers to crack, but many Americans may be making that hurdle even higher than it really is, according to survey data.

More than one-third of respondents to the National Association of Realtors' Housing Opportunities and Market Experience survey, out Monday, said saving for a down payment would be "very difficult."

As might be expected, respondents with higher incomes and higher levels of education thought it would be somewhat less challenging. (Saving would be "very difficult" for 47% of those with no college education, and for 32% of those with at least some college education.)

It's perhaps a little less intuitive that the youngest age group surveyed, 34 or under, was far more bullish about saving than the next segment, those aged 35 to 44.

How to find a contractor after a hurricane Hurricanes Harvey, Irma and Maria have left thousands of homeowners across the U.S. scrambling to fix their properties and return to a sense of normalcy. Choosing the right contractor is just the first step in that long process.

Residents across the U.S. are still in the process of assessing the damage wrought by storms this hurricane season. In Texas and Louisiana, around 100,000 homes were affected by Hurricane Harvey and the flooding it caused, according to White House estimates. Hurricane Irma destroyed nearly 25% of the homes in the Florida Keys and damaged even more, according to the Federal Emergency Management Agency. The hurricane caused damage throughout the Sunshine State, as well as in coastal communities in Georgia and South Carolina. Residents of Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands are still reeling from Hurricane Maria, having already been struck by Irma.

Given how devastating the recent spate of storms were, it's likely that homeowners who don't act soon could be left high and dry. "It's going to be a big challenge rebuilding based on the number of houses affected," said Scott Norman, executive director of the Texas Association of Builders. "In Texas, we had a labor shortage before the storm and that makes it a challenge."

Unison Survey Reveals 4 in 10 Americans Find Saving for a Down Payment the Biggest Financial Barrier to Home Ownership (Riverside Press-Enterprise, CA)
Riverside Press-Enterprise
(9/26/2017 4:48 AM, PR.com)
Unison Home Ownership Investors, the leading provider of home ownership investments, today announced findings from its survey of 2,018 Americans, conducted by Atomik Research, on the biggest barriers to home ownership. The findings reveal that there are significant generational and regional differentiators when it comes to housing, including how much is being spent on rent, flexibility in budget and compromises for the ideal home location. While majority of Americans agree that buying a home is a good financial decision, saving enough money for a down payment and the process of getting approved for a loan are the major financial barriers.

The New York Fed's recent Household Debt and Credit Report shows total consumer debt in Q2 2017 has increased by $114 billion to $12.84 trillion and student loan debt alone reached $1.3 trillion. Between skyrocketing rents, student loans and debt to pay off, many Americans have a hard time budgeting for a down payment. To understand changes in home purchasing behavior and industry perceptions, Unison's survey dove deep into the decision-making process to understand barriers of entry, impact on monthly financials and accessibility to additional funds.

The Decision-Making Process to Buy or Not to Buy a Home

Although the majority of Americans understand that owning a home is a sound investment and are willing to make sacrifices for the ideal place, they are not ready to follow through with a purchase. Part of this is a result of not fully understanding the financial benefits or trusting the credibility of information available.

With scores of Cape Coral homeowners facing big bills to repair or replace hurricane-damaged sea walls, the city may turn to a program created by the state Legislature that could help homeowners finance the work.

At the suggestion of City Council member John Carioscia, city officials went looking for ways to help people faced with replacing or repairing sea walls.

Sea walls cost thousands of dollars to repair or replace and usually aren't covered by insurance.

City leaders found an answer in a program they had already been considering of adopting.

"That would be PACE, a statewide program," city spokeswoman Connie Barton said. "It provides professional third parties and lenders that work with the residents to provide low-interest loans to make those repairs."

If you're planning to build a new home, be prepared to pay more and wait longer for it to be completed.

Hurricane Harvey, which devastated Houston and Beaumont with floodwaters, is expected to swamp home builders throughout the state as well, including in North Texas, where a lingering labor shortage and rising lumber prices already had new home prices creeping up.

Now, with months of reconstruction work just starting along the Gulf Coast, it may take even longer for new homes in the Metroplex to go up, experts say.

"There is a labor shortage all around and generally Harvey did not help," said Scott Jacobsen, purchasing manager at Riverside Home Builders, which builds communities in Fort Worth and Dallas. While his company has contracts in place to keep prices fixed for supplies like lumber, Jacobsen said he wouldn't be surprised to see overall material prices increase.

Builder Gehan Homes' newest model houses come with four bedrooms, granite countertops in the kitchen and a covered patio out back.

But it's the price tag that's likely to catch buyers' attention.

Gehan's new lines of starter houses are priced from about $220,000. That's about a third less than most of the company's standard homes. Starting at less than the median cost of a preowned North Texas house, these houses are aimed at young buyers who've been priced out of the new home market.

"We are going after that millennial market that we know is ready to buy," said Gehan marketing director Christine Lombardo, showing off one of the company's new houses in Forney, east of Dallas. "This price point we have found is moving a lot faster than we anticipated."

Median new home prices in Dallas-Fort Worth have jumped to record levels of more than $350,000. A mid-priced new house will run you about $100,000 more than a preowned property — the biggest spreads ever between new and existing homes.

Thousands of so-called "Dreamers" across the U.S. have bought homes and paid property taxes since getting protection from deportation under a federal program.

In a recent report, Zillow found that an estimated 123,000 recipients of Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) have bought homes in the U.S., nearly 3,000 of those in Washington.

In Washington, those homeowners pay nearly $9 million in property taxes each year, according to Zillow's report. Nationally, they pay about $380 million in taxes annually.

The DACA program was created in 2012 under executive order by President Barack Obama as a protection for those undocumented immigrants who were brought to the U.S. illegally as children. Immigrants approved for the program (often called "Dreamers" in reference to never-passed federal immigration reform) are granted work permits and deferred from deportation. Since the program's inception, roughly 800,000 immigrants have been approved for DACA status.

NLIHC and the Public and Affordable Housing Research Corporation (PAHRC) released a major update to the National Housing Preservation Database (NHPD) on Friday, September 22. The update includes new data and a new user interface, as well as profiles of the federally funded affordable housing preservation needs for all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

There are almost 5 million federally assisted rental homes nationally. Nearly 500,000 of these rental homes will reach the end of their current subsidy contracts and affordability restrictions for low income families in the next five years. About one in four of these homes are funded by Low Income Housing Tax Credits (LIHTCs), and three-fifths are funded by HUD Project Based Rental Assistance (Section 8) contracts.

Data indicates that 488,332 Affordable Housing Units are At Risk of Loss in the Next Five Years

New data released today in the National Housing Preservation Database (NHPD) shows that nearly 500,000 federally-assisted apartments or rental homes will reach the end of their current subsidy contracts and affordability restrictions for low-income families in the next five years. Nearly one in four of these units are funded by Low Income Housing Tax Credits (LIHTC). Previous experience suggests that as many as 8% (or 39,066) of these units could be permanently lost from the publicly-assisted and affordable housing stock, because their current owners could opt for the private market. President Trump's proposed budget cuts to rental programs managed by the US Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) could potentially result in even more rental homes being lost due to insufficient funding.

The NHPD supports affordable housing preservation efforts by giving users the information they need to create strong plans for the preservation of publicly-assisted housing. Recently updated, the database allows users to estimate the size of the affordable housing stock in local areas and identify properties at risk of leaving the publicly-assisted housing stock, and develop preservation strategies.

Failing to preserve our nation's publicly-assisted affordable housing stock will further hurt the nation's lowest-income families at a time of unprecedented need. According to research by the National Low Income Housing Coalition (NLIHC), the nation already has a shortage of 7.4 million homes for extremely low-income renters. Failing to preserve the publicly-assisted affordable housing stock will also cost more money in the long-run. The Public and Affordable Housing Research Corporation (PAHRC) recently noted that the cost to rebuild and maintain these lost homes would be $6.4 billion over 50 years, compared to $4.8 billion to preserve and maintain the already-existing homes for 50 years.

NLIHC's CEO and President, Diane Yentel, noted that "we cannot afford to lose any of the federally-assisted housing stock. The rental housing crisis is hitting the lowest-income renters particularly hard, while federal resources for new subsidized housing is insufficient. Maintaining our current stock is critical."

During a lunch Monday held in appreciation of union construction workers building the new Cherry Street Lofts, a train would periodically rush past on the elevated tracks next to the site and force everyone to raise their voices or wait for it to pass.

Once the apartments are completed, the development's new windows, which are being installed this week, are designed to keep the noise to a minimum even as they help recreate the building's historic look.

"We used a historical consultant, and it took about a year to match those windows," said Gary Flocco, managing partner of Corvus Capital Management, who is leading the development team. "And they have to limit the sound that comes through."

Work is well underway on the project that is transforming a block of former industrial buildings in plain view of passers-by on Interstate 95 into hundreds of housing units, with the first residents expected to move in next spring. The project, which is using all union labor, is financed in part by $35 million from the AFL-CIO Housing Investment Trust in its first Connecticut project.

Officials with the Housing Investment Trust said the project meets its goals in a variety of ways, providing union jobs that will produce affordable housing while also bringing in a solid return on its investment.

[NY] Historic Brooklyn armory has a political role (AM New York, NY) AM New York
(9/25/2017 10:15 AM, Liza Featherstone)
Its brick facade reminiscent of a pretentious European castle, the Bedford-Union Armory looks comically out of place in the bustling urban neighborhood of Crown Heights.

The armory was erected in the wake of the violent Civil War draft riots of 1863, the economic depression set off by the Panic of 1873 financial crisis, and the rise of socialist and anarchist organizing. Some in NYC feared violence from the working class.

It is fitting, given its history, that the armory, built in the early 1890s, should now be used to organize and inspire working-class politics in the neighborhoods that surround it.

Much of the armory's 138,000 square feet sits vacant, while some is used to house homeless people. Now, there's a plan by a city developer to turn the piece of public property into luxury housing — with some set aside for affordable housing and other public purposes, including basketball courts and a community center.

Initially, City Councilwoman Laurie Cumbo, who like many NYC politicians receives donations from real estate interests, supported the plan. But area activists called attention to the project's likely impact: more luxury housing in a gentrifying neighborhood would make the area more expensive for local residents in the long run.

Miss K, an activist who was also inspired by Occupy, has attended every anniversary since police raided the park and booted out the protesters. She came this year to offer insight on her fight for affordable housing and the homeless.

"I was there to let people know that finding affordable housing is a crisis and homelessness is on the rise," she said.

She is a part of the organization Picture the Homeless, which is fighting against landlords who hold onto vacant property or space until they can rent them for a huge profit. The organization is also fighting for the city to develop a publicly accessible database that lists all vacant properties throughout the city.

"Many of the groups that you see protesting are from people that learned from Occupy, that were there during the protest, they watched and learned," Halasa said. "I must say the legacy of Occupy Wall Street will forever live on."

[NY] Affordable housing forum planned for Wednesday (Dunkirk Observer, NY)
Dunkirk Observer
(9/26/2017 12:45 AM, Dunkirk Observer)
County agencies have collaborated on a resource forum focused on affordable housing programs available to residents and families in Chautauqua County. Hosted by the Chautauqua County Land Bank Corporation (CCLBC), this forum will provide information regarding programs and services available from the participating agencies, including Chautauqua Opportunities Inc. (COI), Chautauqua Housing Rehab and Improvement Corporation (CHRIC), Southern Tier Environment for Living (STEL and Legal Assistance of WNY.

Additionally, the city of Dunkirk will providing some opening remarks regarding housing initiatives underway in the city.

Affordable housing programs typically are income-based, where participants cannot show a household income over a specified amount, e.g. $50,000 for a four-person household. Program criteria may vary per program and/or agency. The participating agencies provide programs and services varying from first-time homebuyers programs, to assistance with rehabilitation projects, to rental or rent-to-own housing.

Although the Land Bank's mission does not focus on affordable housing, it collaborates with these agencies to serve the needs of the lower income population. Executive Director, Gina Paradis, explained, "This is an opportunity for us to help familiarize the community with the resources available locally, and support our partner agencies with their mission to provide quality affordable housing."

[NY] Hip-hop museum and affordable housing complex to rise in the South Bronx (Architect's Newspaper)

Last Friday, the New York City Economic Development Corporation (NYCEDC), along with the Departments of Housing Preservation and Development (HPD) and Parks and Recreation (DPR), announced a massive new project in the South Bronx spearheaded by L+M Development Partners.

Dubbed Bronx Point, the project is located on city-owned land on the waterfront of the Harlem River, and will include about 600 units of affordable housing in phase one (1,045 units total) as well as the nation's first brick-and-mortar hip-hop museum, officially called the Universal Hip Hop Museum.

Among the founding members of the museum are recording legends Kurtis Blow and Rocky Bucano; its cultural ambassadors include Big Daddy Kane, Rakim, LL Cool J, and many other recognizable names. Law and Order: SVU's Ice T is on the board of directors.

Executive Director Rocky Bucano said the museum's goal was to bring "hip-hop back to the Bronx where it originated from […] it's gonna be a complete history of hip-hop."

Members of the different associations accused Zara representatives of "harassment, undue rent increases, and frivolous lawsuits," and called them "predatory landlords."

"Zara Reality has a track record of tenant harassment and contributing to the displacement of low-income residents," said Jagpreet Singh, a spokesman for Chhaya, a community development corporation. "Jamaica needs affordable housing and responsible landlords.

"This development will make it hard for long-time residents and their families to stay in their community. Chhaya is committed to working with community members that will be impacted by this new development and ensure that private developers are held accountable for predatory practices."

Zara Realty spokesman Jason Fink found Singh's accusations to be baseless.

"Zara has invested millions of dollars in improvements and modernizations to buildings throughout Queens to create high-quality affordable housing," Fink said. "We are a long-term investor in neighborhoods, particularly Jamaica, and have created thousands of units of affordable housing, while continuously making critical upgrades to buildings so that tenants can stay in their communities.

VIDEO. The project will feature 146 apartments at the 7-acre farm. Approval was granted for 124 market-rate units on a 6-acre tract on the west side of Washington Avenue and 22 affordable-housing units on a 1-acre plot at the corner of Delong and Washington avenues.

Loventhal said every aspect of Landmark's settlement with the borough, and the approved site plan, would remain as is. He said even the name of the project — Washington Promenade at D'Angelo Farms — would be the same.

Isolation of low- to moderate-income households from market-rate apartments became a sore spot for some residents, who said such segregation would alienate tenants of the affordable units.

In response, Loventhal said, "We don't want to disturb any of the approvals. We're being very respectful of the approvals as they were granted."

[NJ] Newark development-oriented rezoning fiercely disputed in public meetings (Architect's Newspaper)
Architect's Newspaper
(9/25/2017 4:54 PM, Jackson Rollings)
At a Newark City Council meeting last Wednesday, tensions ran high as residents loudly protested the Council's discussion of new zoning proposals intended to increase density in the city.

Among the measures on the table was a riverfront rezoning proposal that would allow for developments up to 40 stories high in some areas. Another would allow construction in the Ironbound (an unincorporated community near Penn Station) to rise to 12 stories. Both areas include a good deal of vacant property that would be redeveloped as high-rise buildings if these proposals pass. By the end of the meeting, the riverfront zoning proposal was moved to the next step of approval, while the Ironbound proposal was deferred.

A separate inclusionary zoning ordinance devoted to incorporating low- to middle-income housing in new developments was also deferred, despite Newark Mayor Ras Baraka's months-long pursuit to push it forward. It would require buildings with 30 or more units to devote 20 percent or more for low- and middle-income residents, or contribute the funds required to build those units in other projects.

Mayor Baraka expressed his concerns that the two separate measures – the go-ahead for new development and the ordinance promoting affordable housing – would be passed at separate times, allowing developers to forgo any responsibility to set aside affordable housing in the new buildings. "I do not think we should pass anything if we can't pass everything," he remarked at the meeting.

[NJ] Beck & Rice: We Support Class Action Suit Against 'Renter Hell' Property Owners (New Jersey Senate Republicans, NJ)

(9/25/2017 12:08 PM, Emily Everson)
Senator Jennifer Beck (R-Monmouth) and Senator Ron Rice (D-Essex) today pledged their unwavering support for tenants at Pueblo City, as they file a class action lawsuit against the owners of the Newark housing complex. Pueblo City was one of the properties visited by the senators and featured in the Asbury Park Press investigative series: "Renter Hell."

The main plaintiff in the class action lawsuit is Yanira Cortes, a Pueblo City tenant who has been actively working alongside the senators as they fight to advance their "Safe Sanitary Subsidized Rental Housing Bill of Rights." Other plaintiffs include Pueblo City residents who have lived in the complex within the last 6 years. The suit, which was filed on Sept. 22, 2017, claims "breach of warrant of habitability" and "consumer fraud." The suit also requests that the building be put into receivership.

"Pueblo City was arguably one of the worst subsidized housing complexes we have seen," Senator Beck said. "Families were living among rats and in cramped spaces with mold crawling up the walls. I commend Yanira and her fellow tenants for having the courage to file a class action suit. They deserve justice and a safe place to live, as do all tenants who are forced to live in such horrific conditions. We will continue to fight for our legislation, so that no one ever has to live through this hell again."

Beck and Rice sponsor S-3270, the "Safe Sanitary Subsidized Rental Housing Bill of Rights," to hold negligent landlords accountable for dangerous, unsanitary, and unsafe conditions in subsidized housing.

A Washington-based investment company has bought Eastridge Apartments, an affordable housing complex in Swatara Township, for $6.9 million.

Commercial real estate investment services firm Marcus & Millichap announced the sale. Ridge MacLaren, Andrew Townsend and Clarke Talone, investment specialists in the firm's Philadelphia office, had the exclusive listing to market the property on behalf of the seller.

Eastridge, which sits on seven acres along Worcester Avenue, has 108 apartments. It was owned by a Montgomery County-based limited partnership tied to Altman Management Co. principal Brett Altman, according to Dauphin County deed records.

The buyer is a limited liability company connected to Viking Companies in Washington, property records show.

[PA] Allentown zoners strike down Abe Atiyeh's Union Terrace apartment plan (Allentown Morning Call, PA)
Allentown Morning Call
(9/26/2017 12:20 AM, Emily Opilo)
Citing a traffic study presented by representatives for Atiyeh at an August meeting, zoners said traffic would increase significantly compared to that generated by self-storage units currently on the site -- a legal basis for denying such an application, they said.

That study projected that there would be 868 average daily trips to the site if apartments were built. Currently, the property averages 119 daily trips. When it housed a concrete plant in the past, it averaged 244 trips, said board member Scott Unger, quoting the study.

Robert Knauer, board chairman, said the change to the neighborhood would be anything but minor.

"The traffic generated is substantially more," he said. "You would add significant population to the area."

Atiyeh had hoped to build affordable housing or "workforce housing" on the site, designed for blue-collar residents. Rents would have ranged from $695 for a studio to $995 for a two-bedroom.

[DE] THEMAL: Counties should work with Woodlawn Trustees to preserve land (Wilmington News Journal, DE)
Wilmington News Journal
(9/25/2017 12:50 PM, Harry Themal)
According to savethevalley.org, there are still 321 other unprotected acres in Delaware, just south of the state line, also to the west of U.S. 202. Much land is still owned by Woodlawn Trustees, which is certainly no friend of the Beaver Valley folks. Here's what it says on its savethevalley.org website:

"The Woodlawn Trustees, the folks who were appointed by William Bancroft [in 1901] to preserve the thousands of acres he left for public enjoyment, are welcoming more development in the pristine Beaver Valley. The trustees must figure that their reputation can't get any worse, so they continue to haggle with those who would desire to take away public open space for personal gain."

Woodlawn explains it needs a flow of funds for such other community activities as its 450 units of affordable housing now being redeveloped in the Flats on Wilmington's west side.

Developers are always looking for land to meet what they perceive as a need for more housing and commercial development, and the Woodlawn land certainly looks tempting. Look at the existing or potential disputes in New Castle County over other threatened easy-to-build-on sites, such as the golf courses and country clubs of Brandywine, Cavaliers, National (Hercules), Three Little Bakers and now DuPont.

The Chapel Hill Alliance for a Livable Town – CHALT – will hold a housing forum from 7 to 8:45 p.m. Monday, Oct. 2, in the council chamber at Chapel Hill Town Hall.

The public forum, "A Place to Call Home: Making Housing Available for all Income Levels," will explore how to create and maintain housing for families with low and moderate incomes. The format will include presentations and time for questions and comments from attendees.

“There is a need to address affordable housing so that town staff, including police and fire department employees, teachers as well as UNC and hospital employees are able to live in the town to which they contribute so much,” the group said in a news release.

Speakers will include Town Council member Nancy Oates; Tim Jezisek, vice president for developer Grubb Properties; Hudson Vaughan, senior director of the Marian Cheek Jackson Center; and Mai Thi Nguyen, associate professor in UNC’s Department of City and Regional Planning.

[NC] How LGBT elders and their advocates are keeping the closet door open in retirement (Durham Herald-Sun, NC)
Durham Herald-Sun
(9/25/2017 8:44 AM, Cliff Bellamy)
In January 2016, SAGE Raleigh, an affiliate of SAGE and a program of the Raleigh LGBT Center, started the SAGE Raleigh Housing Initiative. The program is exploring buying or building affordable housing and market-rate units for seniors, Geller said. The center conducted a feasibility study and found the need for 200 affordable housing units and 700 market-rate units, Geller said. The area in that study included Durham and Orange counties, he said.

The Raleigh center has been offering training to nursing homes and other facilities for about six months. Some facilities welcome the training, some do not, Geller said. No organization can build enough affordable housing, but SAGE Raleigh wants to make sure staff in retirement facilities have some training in dealing with elder members of the LGBT community, he said.

McAulay said she and her wife came out in their 40s and do not relish having to go back into the closet because “we took so long to come out.” With Village Hearth Cohousing, “we want to be proactive about our aging situation. ... So we’re creating this community that will have elements that will help us stay in our homes longer than if we were in a single-family home, isolated from the community,” McAulay said.

Ross and Keech are looking forward to moving into a place where they have a sense of community and autonomy. “I am going there to live,” Keech said. “I am not going there to die.”

[GA] Building Affordable Housing Communities Discussed at Event Moderated by Arnall Golden Gregory Partner Orlando Cabrera (Citybizlist, NY)
(9/26/2017 5:40 AM, citybizlist)
Arnall Golden Gregory partner Orlando Cabrera moderated the panel discussion “Macro Outlook: Development and Building Communities” at a recent Bisnow Atlanta Affordable Housing event.

Atlanta has a severe affordable housing shortage. Panelist Sara Haas, director at the nonprofit Enterprise Community Partners, said 73 percent of extremely low-income Atlanta residents spend more than 50 percent of their income on rent, which means they are severely cost burdened.

Rent and home-ownership costs have risen significantly but income has not kept pace, Ms. Haas said. She added that up to 20,000 income-restricted units could be lost in the next five years due to demand for market-rate housing.

During his 31 years in affordable housing Mr. Cabrera has served as Assistant Secretary for Public and Indian Housing at HUD and as Executive Director and Chief Executive Officer of the Florida Housing Finance Corporation. He also was president and CEO of a major affordable housing developer.

Mr. Cabrera, a member of Arnall Golden Gregory’s Housing Team, asked City Councilman Andre Dickens about his vision for the city with another 2 million people expected to move to Atlanta in the next 20 years. Mr. Dickens said Atlanta’s diverse workforce requires diverse housing options and that housing for all income levels near employers would lessen the city’s traffic congestion. Teachers who could live close to their schools, he said, would interact with their students as neighbors, strengthening the community.

[FL] Hurricane Irma shuts the door on Keys' most affordable housing -- RVs and trailer parks (USA Today)
USA Today
(9/25/2017 1:37 PM, Alan Gomez)
BIG PINE KEY, Fla. — As Hurricane Irma bore down as a Category 4 behemoth, Kevin McNamara evacuated his trailer home on this island in the Florida Keys.

The storm passed, but a frantic text message rolled in. There was a letter taped to his door advising McNamara to clear out and find new housing, his sister wrote in the text. Irma had caused massive damage to the Sea Horse RV Park and crews would sweep out the debris and damaged trailers "within the week."

The only offer of help: the phone number and website for FEMA.

The roughly 50 residents who live in the Sea Horse RV Park remained on edge this weekend, wondering when they would be kicked out of the only homes they could afford on this increasingly-expensive chain of islands.

To the residents, the letter represented the latest affront in what has been a decades-long trend throughout the Keys: expensive hotels, ritzy resorts and fancy homes replacing simple, affordable Keys bungalows.

Keys authorities severely restrict new development. Monroe County's Rate of Growth Ordinance sets number of housing units allowed. But developers can transfer units they own from island to island: If they remove one home in Big Pine Key, for example, they can build a new one in Key West.

Boston-based Beacon Communities said it has acquired National Development Corp., which has a portfolio of nearly 60 affordable housing properties in 10 states and the District of Columbia. A spokeswoman for Beacon said the deal includes nearly 2,700 housing units in Louisiana and Florida, but did not provide a breakdown. According to the NDC website, the company has 10 properties in Baton Rouge. NDC also has two properties in Westwego: Beechgrove Homes and Claiborne Homes, both at 804 Sherry Lane. The company also has four properties in Lake Charles. No financial details were released on the sale, but the value of the housing that changed hands was placed at more than $250 million. With the deal, Beacon now has 17,500 apartment units.

[IL] Critics hammer Emanuel's affordable housing plan; aldermen advance it (Chicago Tribune, IL)
Chicago Tribune
(9/25/2017 5:17 PM, John Byrne)
Mayor Rahm Emanuel's proposal to increase affordable housing options in a handful of hot neighborhoods west of downtown and through part of the Northwest Side drew fire Monday from critics who contend it would do too little to stem gentrification.

Housing groups and some aldermen said the mayor needs to do more to keep rents down for working-class families in the Near West Side, Logan Square and other areas that have seen recent spikes in housing construction aimed at wealthy, single people.

Emanuel introduced a proposal this month that would create stricter affordable housing rules for developers in two stretches of the city. It would require those constructing bigger projects within the boundaries to include affordable units equaling at least 15 percent of the total number of units in the buildings.

Developers instead could build affordable units elsewhere in the boundaries, but then they would need to include enough to equal 20 percent of the overall size of the development. The mayor's program would apply to developments of 10 units or more.

[IL] Emanuel's affordable housing pilot plan clears key committee hurdle (Chicago Sun-Times, IL)
Chicago Sun-Times
(9/25/2017 4:58 PM, Fran Spielman)
Mayor Rahm Emanuel's plan to create affordable housing in gentrifying neighborhoods — on the Near North and Near West Sides and along the Milwaukee Avenue corridor — cleared a key hurdle Monday, despite fears that rents are too high for families to afford and the area covered is too small.

The voice vote by the City Council's Housing Committee followed a marathon meeting that featured a shouting match between aldermen Walter Burnett (27th) and John Arena (45th).

Arena wanted to expand the plan's boundaries farther north, to include Jefferson Park and Portage Park. Burnett didn't want to complicate the issue.

"When I'm dealing with developers who bring belligerence to the table and find every single way to get around doing affordable units on site … why wouldn't you give us a hand in fighting that fight when you have the legal defensible position to do it in this case?" Arena asked.

[SD] Letter: Affordable housing 'a reality' for city growth (Sioux Falls Argus Leader, SD)
Sioux Falls Argus Leader
(9/25/2017 7:50 PM, Greg Neitzert, City Councelor)
In reference to the recent article [HERE] in the Argus Leader, "Councilor says it's time to make pace with apartments in Sioux Falls," in which I was quoted, I wanted to add context to my statement. First, the vast majority of citizens who bring concerns forward regarding any rezoning or redevelopment do so in good faith and have valid concerns. Those usually revolve around traffic, drainage and parking. Whenever you propose to place two uses that are not the same against or near each other, there are impacts that must be mitigated so that the lower intensity use is not negatively impacted by the higher density use (i.e. an apartment or a retail store). That's why we have zoning regulations. I honor those concerns and they are appreciated. I also appreciate that if you have previously been impacted negatively by a "bad neighbor," you are naturally going to be concerned that history will repeat itself with any new development. Good landlords and property managers are punished for the bad acts of the few. Those few bad actors create a perception for some that apartments are a nuisance.

This is particularly true if you attach the word "affordable" to the project. Many have a perception of what an affordable project looks like or means. Here in Sioux Falls, those living in affordable housing developments are hardworking citizens, many working multiple jobs, who simply can't afford a market rate unit or a home. As councilors, we unfortunately do hear feedback from a minority that calls into question the character of those who live in multi-family developments. That unfortunate commentary is what I was addressing in my quote. Simply put, we need to address the stigma that some have with multi-family housing, particularly affordable housing. The best way we can address this is through education and communication. We need to discuss what affordable housing really means here in Sioux Falls. With our population growth, as well as the incomes of many of our hard working citizens compared to housing costs, the need is only growing and not going away. Multi-family is growing very quickly and even outpacing single family growth. Housing of various types near each other will be an increasing occurrence and reality going forward. It is this reality that we have to deal with going forward.

Colorado Springs Gazette
(9/25/2017 4:55 PM, Jakob Rodgers)
A 50-unit affordable housing project catering to homeless veterans is being planned for the Cimarron Hills area, the Pikes Peak United Way announced.

Construction on the three-story apartment complex, called Freedom Springs, is slated to begin in spring 2018 at 850 Western Drive, north of Peterson Air Force Base. It is expected to open in spring 2019.

Freedom Springs aims to address a dire shortage of affordable housing in El Paso County, which has left homeless advocates struggling to help people off the streets.

"We're excited that this will address a need for those who fought for us - they certainly deserve it," said Annie Snead, spokeswoman for the United Way, which is spearheading the project.

[CO] City plans Truscott buyout (Aspen Public Radio, CO)
Aspen Public Radio
(9/25/2017 10:55 PM, Alycin Bektesh)
AUDIO. Aspen's Truscott II affordable rental buildings were built through a partnership with the the Aspen Pitkin County Housing Authority (APCHA) and private partners. The contracts expire this year, which leaves room for new opportunities.

The private funders joined APCHA in order to collect tax credits that come from building affordable units. Those credits are only good for 15 years. The City of Aspen will now spend $350,000 to buy out the private sector partners and put majority ownership with the housing authority.

From here, the city may decide to again pursue selling to private equity partners. This would generate money for maintenance on the property. There is also potential for a remodel that would create additional units, or an entire scrape-and-replace of the apartments. City staff is presenting the deal to the Aspen City Council in a work session Tuesday afternoon.

[CO] Denver city government is five years into a hiring blitz. Can taxpayers afford it? (Denver Post, CO)
Denver Post
(9/26/2017 4:57 AM, Jon Murray)
City plans increase in budgeted positions again next year, pushing projected growth since 2012 to nearly 20 percent

"Denver just seems to be a place that, whenever some new thing comes along, (officials) never seem to say: 'If you want to do B, let's do less of A to pay for it,' " said Mike Krause, the director of the Local Colorado Project at the libertarian-leaning Independence Institute. "You can only do it so long before you have to pay the piper."

Such disagreements often hinge on whether city leaders, in new ventures such as a recent 10-year, $150 million affordable-housing funding initiative, are straying beyond the proper role of city government.

Hancock and the council may have drawn the ire of conservatives — who are in short supply in liberal Denver — as they also have looked to expand the city's involvement in transit, social problems and other issues. But they have been pushed to take action by a range of urban activists.

Initially, with voters' approval, the city hiring surge reflected a reversal of a few years of belt-tightening during the Great Recession and its lingering aftermath, including employee furloughs.

1:00 a.m., Tuesday, September 26, Santo Domingo Pueblo, New Mexico

Thanks in part to a $287,000 Affordable Housing Program (AHP) grant from Century Bank and the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas (FHLB Dallas), WaDi Housing, a 41-unit rental community for very low- and low-income residents in Santo Domingo Pueblo in New Mexico, has opened. The grant was awarded to Santo Domingo Tribal Housing Authority and provided gap funding for the construction of the community.

The media is invited to join project and bank representatives at a grand opening event at 11:00 a.m. on Tuesday, September 26 at 35.509902, -106.317988 (follow link to open in Google Maps) outside of Santo Domingo Pueblo, New Mexico.

FHLB Dallas annually returns 10 percent of its profits in the form of AHP grants to the communities served by its member institutions, like Century Bank. Vancouver Columbian
(9/25/2017 11:33 PM, Katy Sword)
The Vancouver City Council gained a little more insight into the Vancouver Affordable Housing Fund at a workshop Monday evening.

The housing fund is the result of Proposition 1, which approved a $6 million annual levy for the next seven years.

The fund currently has about $5 million in its coffers.

A total of 237 new units will be built in Vancouver, with 80 of those reserved for affordable housing. Funds will be distributed to seven projects, with awards ranging from $250,000 to $850,000.

Peggy Sheehan, Community Development Program manager, said the city didn't develop specific guidelines for projects allowing developers to ask for what they needed. The city then recommended award amounts based on available funds. Four of the seven projects will receive what was requested.

Specific Golden State metropolitan areas seeing strong year-over-year growth included San Jose (5.9 percent), San Francisco-Oakland (5.4 percent), Fresno (3.4 percent), Sacramento (3.1 percent) and Riverside-San Bernardino (2.6 percent).

Statewide growth was 2.9 percent in 2016, with a GDP total of nearly $2.5 trillion.

The center noted that the five-county Los Angeles Basin – which had 2 percent growth last year – amassed a 2016 GDP of $1.2 trillion. That alone would have ranked it fourth among states behind only California, Texas and New York.

The Bay Area's GDP was put at $781 billion.

Stephen Levy, CCSCE's director, said that the strong numbers were accompanied by a downside related to affordable housing: "Despite job growth, falling unemployment and the return of some workers to the work force, poverty adjusted for housing costs remained above 20 percent in California.

Opportunity for Comment: The City of Los Angeles

Permanent Supportive Housing Ordinance

The City of Los Angeles' Planning Department has released a draft ordinance to improve the permitting process for permanent supportive housing (PSH) developments and is seeking comment and feedback from the public. The Planning Department will be holding two public hearings on the following dates and your support for this ordinance will be vital.

Voters in the City of Los Angeles approved Measure HHH in November 2016, which will raise $1.2 billion to construct 10,000 PSH units over the next decade. As the City begins to deploy the resources to construct these units, a PSH ordinance to improve the permitting and zoning processes will be instrumental in ensuring the City meets its goals. Your comments and support as service providers, housing developers, and community members are critically important in supporting the PSH ordinance.

[CA] Housing crisis: See how state lawmakers are putting more teeth — and more money — into reform (Ontario Inland Valley Bulletin, CA)
Ontario Inland Valley Bulletin
(9/26/2017 5:05 AM, Jeff Collins)
Millions, if not billions, in new dollars will flow to housing programs under a host of housing bills adopted in the final hours of the California Legislature. New rules will make it harder for local governments to block developments.

And lawmakers put some teeth into weak, often ignored laws mandating that cities approve more housing.

On Sept. 15, the last day to approve new laws, the legislature passed 15 housing bills aimed at easing a statewide housing shortage that's fueling skyrocketing rents and home prices.

Gov. Jerry Brown said he plans to sign them.

“For millions of people it is next to impossible to buy a house or even find an apartment they can afford,” Brown said in a statement. “These 15 bills will spur the building of more housing and increase the number of Californians who can actually afford to buy or rent.”

[CA] Large swath of empty land could be annexed into Mission Trails park (San Diego Union-Tribune, CA)
San Diego Union-Tribune
(9/26/2017 4:56 AM, David Garrick)
San Diego officials want to annex into Mission Trails Regional Park a giant swath of open land called East Elliott, where previous proposals have included large housing subdivisions and a new city dump.

East Elliott’s 2,300 acres of barren hillsides and flatlands are adjacent to the north boundary of Mission Trails, a 7,200-acre open space preserve that’s popular with hikers and serves as prime habitat for endangered species.

The annexation would increase the size of the park by 31 percent, allowing additional trail connections and giving hikers and mountain bikers new areas to explore.

But unlike the park, much of East Elliott is privately owned by hundreds of different investors who bought land from the federal government in the 1960s with dreams of building custom homes or selling to a large housing developer.

Some of those owners are complaining about the proposed annexation because they still would like to see housing built on the site, especially with San Diego and the region facing an affordable housing crisis.

The city of Los Angeles is taking substantive action to provide incentives for affordable housing development. "After six months of revisions and deliberations, the Los Angeles Department of City Planning has released its official Transit Oriented Communities guidelines," reports Steven Sharp. The guidelines will provide incentives in exchange for affordable housing, including additional bonus floor area and reduced parking requirements. Additional incentives are also available for paying prevailing wages. Sharp provides tables of the incentives as well as a map of the areas where the new incentive system will be available. The program is a result of the Build Better L.A. initiative, or Measure JJJ, approved by Los Angeles voters in 2016.

[HI] Affordable housing crisis: Hopeful suggestions for the government (The Garden Island, HI)
The Garden Island
(9/24/2017 4:56 PM, Taylor Kaluahine Reid and Jim Edmonds)
Last month, we talked about what you can do to help with the affordable housing crisis — and now we talk politics. The majority of us have, at one time or another, experienced frustrations with state and county policies — especially in building, renting and paying taxes.

While trying hard to develop places Kauai families can afford, we have been working closely with the county and state, and we are very impressed with the many who are working diligently to address our housing need in Hawaii. We ask them to please pitch in to this effort — by making suggestions for us and helping to bring our suggestions to reality — when they ring true.

However, this is a desperate call to action, Kauai! Now. If you want to ensure that your children and their children have a future on Kauai, things need to change! With your help, we intend to do something about this.

For the county to aid houseless and struggling people, now:

> HUD voucher payments must be corrected to address the actual cost of rentals on the island. Educate the landlords about the benefits of renting to Section 8 tenants.

‘Snob zoning’ is racial housing segregation by another name (Washington Post)
Washington Post

(9/25/2017 9:48 AM, Elizabeth Winkler)
It's no secret that Americans live in divided spaces. The country's cities and suburbs are segregated by race and socioeconomic status. These divides are often assumed to be a result of economics — as poor and rich families alike pick neighborhoods they can afford — and of personal choice, as Americans seek to live near people with whom they have more in common.

There's a more sinister force at work, however. In many places, economic and racial segregation goes beyond market forces or personal choices. That segregation is buttressed by local laws and ordinances that effectively exclude or discourage poor and working-class people from moving into certain communities, keeping those areas primarily the domain of the white and wealthy.

Across the country, American communities employ "snob zoning" policies that forbid builders from constructing apartment buildings or impose minimum residential lot requirements. They are often presented as driven by concerns that building smaller units could change the character of a community. Some ordinances even exclude modest single-family homes in the name of preserving a neighborhood's "aesthetic uniformity." Such rules effectively impose a price floor for the cost of housing, making it impossible for people who live below a certain means to afford them, a recent report by the Century Foundation explains.

The policies are widespread in cities and suburbs across the country, the result of a century of social engineering by federal and local governments. But a survey by the Brookings Institution found they are particularly popular in the Northeast and Midwest. Towns with the most stringent rules tend to have lower density and be wealthier than those with less regulation, according to researchers at the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania.

Takeaways from Undesign the Redline (Consumer Health Foundation)
Consumer Health Foundation
(9/26/2017 5:40 AM, Yanique Redwood)
Undesign the Redline is an exhibit that connects the intentional and systematic racial housing segregation of the 1930s to political and social issues of today. I spoke on a multi-sectoral panel last week on how this history of redlining connects to the inequitable health outcomes that we see today. Here are some reflections from the discussion.

What is redlining?

Redlining occurs when lenders use discriminatory and unfair lending practices that result in reduced lending accessibility for borrowers in areas that show high populations of people of color, regardless of the credit of each individual borrower. The word redlining comes from the practice of outlining in red those geographical areas that were perceived to pose a higher mortgage risk. Redlining in the U.S. was supported by the government. Old redlining maps reveal language such as "It is 100% poor class Negroes practically all on relief. A high wall, however, prevents their spread." Redlining, therefore, prevented Blacks and other people of color from purchasing homes because they could not get access to mortgages to live in the neighborhoods to which they were relegated.

What does redlining have to do with health?

At the Consumer Health Foundation, we think very broadly about health and the social factors that drive health. Redlining and its impact on housing and education segregation and unequal wealth distribution are all social factors that have had profound impacts on the health of people of color.

[NY] Community rails against proposed Bedford Parkshelter (Bronx Times, NY)
Bronx Times
(9/25/2017 4:07 PM, Arthur Cusano)
Bedford Park residents and students from local schools joined elected officials on Tuesday, September 19, to voice opposition to a proposed men's shelter across from a 900-student public school.

Councilman Andrew Cohen led chant of "no shelter" across the street from Sam's Floor Coverings at 3041 Webster Avenue, also known as Sam's Carpet, where a third story could be added to accommodate 200 homeless men.

Proximity to local schools is a major concern surrounding the proposed shelter, most notably its location directly across the street from the large city school building that houses both P.S. 20 and M.S. 20.

In addition to those schools, P.S. 8 and M.S. 80 are both located within walking distance of the proposed shelter.

[NY] Utica breaks ground on housing for homeless veterans (WRVO Public Media, NY)

(9/26/2017 4:58 AM, Payne Horning)
New York state is helping build new housing units for homeless veterans in Utica.

Officials involved with the Central New York Veterans Outreach Center broke ground on the $3.2 million project last week. The funding will create 10 permanent and seven temporary housing units for homeless veterans in the center's headquarters, which is a former YMCA that already has older individual units in the upper portion of the building.

Jennifer Martin is the program director of the center, which serves dozens of homeless veterans each year in Oneida, Jefferson, Lewis, Herkimer, St. Lawrence, Otsego and Madison counties. Martin says the new housing units are greatly needed in central New York.

"Finding housing for homeless veterans around the area with rent that is reasonable is difficult," Martin said. "So having a place where they can go and get into easily is going to help us as case managers house our clients quickly and reduce the homeless numbers in the streets and the shelters."

In addition to offering housing, the center also provides services to homeless veterans, like finding work and accessing benefits available through the VA.

[DC] The homeless and the hungry will get a boost from this year's Helping Hand (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(9/25/2017 1:39 PM, John Kelly)
"The meek shall inherit the Earth," goes the Bible. "Women and children first," goes the lifeboat adage.

If only these things were always true. If you're poor in Washington, forget about expecting a whole planet. You'd be happy to inherit your next meal and a place to sleep. Things are even tougher if you're a homeless woman or child.

We are fortunate that in our area many nonprofit groups try to help. Today, we're announcing that three of them are the latest partners in The Washington Post Helping Hand: Bright Beginnings, N Street Village and So Others Might Eat.

Bright Beginnings provides day care and preschool to children in homeless families. This allows parents to work, and it helps children who have grown up under less-than-ideal circumstances get ready for kindergarten.

N Street Village works with homeless and low-income women in Washington, providing temporary shelter and permanent housing, along with medical and mental health services, employment assistance, and more.

As its name suggests, So Others Might Eat meets the immediate daily needs of the people it serves by providing meals. It also oversees hundreds of housing units around the city and offers job training, addiction treatment and counseling.

[MD] Kirk Stepping Down as Head of Bethesda Cares (Bethesda Magazine, DC)

Board of nonprofit organization for homeless hopes to have replacement by end of October

The Rev. Bob Perry, who served on the board for about 20 years until he left in 2013, credited Kirk with strengthening and expanding Bethesda Cares. He said it used to be a small church-oriented organization, with volunteer leaders, a part-time director and a small budget.

Now, the organization is known throughout the county and state for its work, he said.

Bethesda Cares has 12 employees and about 600 volunteers, Kirk said.

Perry, who was a pastor at North Chevy Chase Christian Church, said Kirk's "concern, compassion and understanding of issues" are exemplary.

"She planted a lot of seeds," Petitt said.

In conjunction with the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Bethesda Cares is trying to help end chronic homelessness locally by the end of the year. Kirk thinks March of 2018 might be a more realistic goal.

[FL] Editorial: Addressing the homeless issue (Ocala Star-Banner, FL)
Ocala Star-Banner
(9/25/2017 7:43 AM, Editorial)
The PPI study follows 11 others since 2000 that have examined and thoughtfully recommended solutions to critical local issues, everything from transportation to health care to criminal justice. Homelessness is a perfect fit for PPI.

The reality is that each of the existing homeless advocacy agencies provide specific and needed services. The problem is there is too little coordination.

Another massive problem is a lack of housing for the homeless. Under the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's current approach , "Housing First," the first step toward successfully helping someone out of homelessness and the accompanying issues that go with that, such as mental illness, substance abuse and unemployment, is getting them a home. Ocala/Marion County has yet to embrace, or at least enact, that plan. Without it, HUD dollars for homelessness will not come.

The keynote speaker at the PPI study kickoff breakfast was Ron Book, executive director of the Miami Homeless Trust, which has reduced homlessness there to about 1,000 people. He told the audience Ocala/Marion County needs three things to effectively address the homeless issue: leadership, a plan and money. "And if you're missing any one of the three, it will fail," Book said.

Book's right. Homelessness has been a longstanding challenge for our community. Understanding it on a deeper, statistic-driven level and investing in real answers is the only way we are going to eliminate. We tip our hats to the PPI for taking the lead on the issue and looking for real, sustainable solutions. Maintaining the status quo is simply not good for anyone.

[LA] Caddo Courthouse needs outdoor loos, not a fence: (Shreveport Times, LA)
Shreveport Times
(9/25/2017 5:44 PM, Lex Talamo)
A fence around the Caddo Parish Courthouse is temporarily on hold. Now being considered instead: outdoor public restrooms. Locations proposed for outdoor facilities have included church property and courthouse grounds, according to commission committee minutes. Caddo Parish commissioners on Sept. 21 delayed a planned vote on Sheriff Steven Prator's repeated requests for a $250,000 fence around the courthouse. The vote came at the request of Commissioner Mario Chavez, who introduced the alternative idea of building a public restroom on courthouse grounds. Chavez asked that the fence vote be delayed for three months so the commission could conduct a courthouse threat assessment - and also consider building a public restroom. Chavez said he recognizes that building outdoor restrooms would not solve the city's "homelessness problem" or resolve the public safety concerns related to people carrying or hiding weapons on courthouse grounds. It would solve sanitation concerns voiced by Prator, who has advocated since 2008 for "some kind of barrier" for the courthouse and a way to close the courthouse grounds after hours.

[WI] From the Field: Wisconsin Biennial Budget Includes Rare Increase for Homeless Services (National Low Income Housing Coalition)
National Low Income Housing Coalition
(9/25/2017 1:01 PM, NLIHC)
For the first time in more than a decade, the Wisconsin state budget includes new funding to support programs focused on ending homelessness; $2.45 million will be used for case management services, job training, and re-entry housing over the next two years. The victory this year might seem small, but considering Wisconsin's current $3.25 million in annual spending on homelessness, the new support is a sizeable increase.

Republicans control both houses of the Wisconsin legislature as well as the governor's office, so the passage of new funding to address homelessness required cultivating support from unlikely allies. The $2.45 million was in Governor Scott Walker's (R) original budget request and remained intact when he signed the biennial budget bill on September 21. The advocacy effort to increase funding for homeless programs was led by the Wisconsin Coalition Against Homelessness (WCAH). Their work on the budget involved mobilization of advocates and service providers throughout the state, including the Wisconsin Partnership for Housing Development, an NLIHC state partner.

Working with Pikes Peak United Way is the Vecino Group, Volunteers of America Colorado Branch and Ross Management, and Freedom Springs.

The land where the facility will be built was donated to Pikes Peak United Way by local developer Leroy Landhuis.

[NV] Homeless are part of solution to Nevada's skill gap, some say (Las Vegas Review-Journal, NV)
Las Vegas Review-Journal
(9/25/2017 8:28 PM, Nicole Raz)
Last Friday Venson Pace, 41, spent his day at a public library filling out job applications and researching what jobs are available. He went back to the streets, where he has been living for the past year. This Friday, Pace intends to spend his day receiving free training in cybersecurity. Hero School, a local nonprofit that works to reverse and prevent homelessness, has been offering motivational multiday events for the local homeless population roughly every quarter for 22 years. This is the first time the event comes with a day of hands-on training for a new skill, he said. "The world is changing so fast that the time that we have to reach somebody is a very short," said Tiger Todd, founder of Hero School. This year, the RedFlint experience center - a skill mill, of sorts - partnered with Hero School to offer cybersecurity training and a place to do it. RedFlint, owned by the University of Phoenix, set up shop in Las Vegas last October.

Located downtown in the Bank of America Plaza building, RedFlint is a business incubator, a startup accelerator, and a community education center, offering workshops and seminars on all things business. "We're seeing a workforce shortage in high demand industries like cybersecurity with 40,000 jobs going unfulfilled each year. This is extremely important for Nevada, which ranks fifth in the country as the most vulnerable state for cybersecurity breaches," said Dennis Bonilla, executive dean of the College of Information Systems and Technology and School of Business at the University of Phoenix. "To effectively fill this job gap, we need to educate and train more than just college students and skilled workers," Bonilla said, adding that people in the homeless community can learn the foundational cybersecurity skills and knowledge that can help them start a career in 20 minutes.

[CA] Activists protest 33-story apartment tower on the edge of L.A.'s skid row (San Diego Union-Tribune, CA)
San Diego Union-Tribune
(9/23/2017 5:01 AM, Gale Holland)
Skid row residents have long feared that upscale development spilling over from other parts of downtown Los Angeles would spark rampant gentrification and pose a threat to their 50-block neighborhood, one of the city's poorest.

Downtown residents and businesses see skid row as a prime spot to build modest and workforce housing to complement the largely expensive lofts and apartments in the rest of the central core. They also want to see the booming Arts District and Historic Core, now separated by skid row, united in one resurgent downtown, with restaurants and other commercial businesses. Even as lofts and restaurants crept into the edges of skid row, 2,000 homeless people have continued to cling to skid row streets in tents and makeshift lean-tos.

While the city and county have pledged $1.2 billion to homeless housing, and $355 million annually for services, the construction has met resistance and will take years to complete.

Now investors and developers have begun pouring hundreds of millions of dollars into skid row's southern neighbor, the scruffy-edged Fashion District , placing it next in line for the kind of growth that has transformed South Park and other downtown neighborhoods.

Tensions over competing ambitions for the area came to a head Friday, as several dozen skid row activists protested a 33-story apartment tower proposed at 7th and Maple streets, where skid row and the Fashion District meet.

The protesters say the city should house the neighborhood's homeless people before it approves another big residential development in downtown Los Angeles.

Fox News
(9/25/2017 9:29 AM, Rachael Rettner)
Nearly 450 people in San Diego have become infected with hepatitis A over the last 10 months, making it the largest outbreak of the illness in California in decades.

On Tuesday (Sept. 19), officials in San Diego said the number of hepatitis cases in the city had climbed to 444, up from 421 last week. Of those infected, 305 have been hospitalized, and 16 have died. (For comparison, the city had just 22 cases of hepatitis A in 2015.)

Also this week, Los Angeles declared its own hepatitis outbreak, with 10 cases reported so far. And Santa Cruz County, in northern California, has reported 69 cases of the virus since April. The outbreaks in all three areas are occurring primarily among people who are homeless or who use illegal drugs. But what's causing hepatitis to spread in these areas?

In general, people become infected with hepatitis A through the "fecal-oral" route — that is, when small amounts of stool from an ill person contaminate objects, food or drinks that are then touched and ingested by another person, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

Sacramento Bee
(9/25/2017 8:48 AM, Michele Steeb)
Spearheaded by the federal government nearly a decade ago, "Housing First" is now statewide policy in California. Housing First emphasizes that the primary need for the homeless is housing, and prohibits the requirement of sobriety, or any form of accountability.

While this policy has worked for some, it is not working for hundreds of thousands in California. In just the last two years, homelessness has increased by 23 percent in Los Angeles and by 27 percent in San Diego and Sacramento counties. With the lack of affordable housing, homelessness will continue to grow.

We should not be surprised. There is no one-size-fits-all medication for the homeless. Poverty, alcohol and drug addiction, a lack of education and job skills, and mental illness must be treated with the same attention that "housing first" receives.

To reduce recidivism (more than 65 percent at the time), the state dramatically increased rehabilitation services for inmates and incentives for them to participate. The recidivism rate is now 45 percent. This holistic, proven approach by the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation should be applied to the homeless with equal vigor.

More than 20 cases of hepatitis A have been reported in North County cities, including 11 in Escondido and 7 in Oceanside, according to statistics released by county health officials Friday.

Both cities, each with homeless populations of roughly 525, are working with San Diego County on measures to prevent the further spread of the virus.

County foot patrols have teamed up with the Oceanside Police Department's homeless outreach team to offer vaccinations in areas where homeless people congregate, City Manager Michelle Skaggs Lawrence said in an email.

"The county is doing the vaccinations," she said.

Vaccinations also are being offered to all of Oceanside's first-responders, such as police, firefighters and paramedics, and to others such as housing and parks and recreation workers who may come in contact with the homeless.

[CA] Fed office eyeing Solutions for Change as model to replicate (San Diego Union-Tribune, CA)
San Diego Union-Tribune
(9/26/2017 5:06 AM, Teri Figueroa)
A North County-based nonprofit that works with homeless families is among a handful of programs the federal government wants to hold up as a model of how to effectively address poverty and family homelessness.

Clarence Carter, a Trump administration appointee who heads the Office of Family Assistance, said in a phone interview last week that Solutions for Change shares his focus on moving people permanently out of homelessness and emphasizing employment.

"From everything that we have been able to glean — and we did tear up the floorboards on this — it is a model that serves homeless families well," Carter said of Solutions.

Solutions works with — and provides housing for — 163 North County families. It runs what it calls Solutions University, a full-immersion, 1,000-day program designed to teach parents self-sufficiency. Solutions also runs an aquaponics farm and sells its produce to school districts, and has spread into real estate, buying or building apartment complexes that house its families.

Ironically, while Solutions showed up on Carter's radar under the flag of the Department of Health and Human Services, the nonprofit faces funding shortfalls because it refuses to meet relatively new requirements of another federal agency: Housing and Urban Development, or HUD.

Funding priorities at HUD have changed to focus on getting homeless people into housing first, then addressing substance abuse and other issues. The approach has been embraced as effective. But organizations using money from that particular pot cannot require drug testing for their clients. Solutions, which insists on sobriety, decided to turn back the roughly $600,000 it had expected.

[CA] Effort revived to expand convention center with June citizens initiative (San Diego Union-Tribune, CA)
San Diego Union-Tribune
(9/26/2017 4:59 AM, Lori Weisberg)
San Diego tourism and business leaders are working aggressively on a renewed effort to finance a convention center expansion with a hike in the hotel room tax that would be put before voters next June.

The prospect of getting what would be a citizens initiative on the ballot will depend heavily on the willingness of organized labor and community groups, including advocates for the homeless, to sign on to the effort.

The measure being considered would include funding for both an expansion of the bayfront center, as well as homeless services. It is also possible that money for road improvements would be covered but no firm decisions have been made.

Among the local stakeholders represented in multiple meetings are hotel industry executives, San Diego Building & Construction Trades Council, the hotel workers union, the San Diego Downtown Partnership and groups advocating for the homeless and social justice.

The House Financial Services Subcommittee on Housing and Insurance will hold a hearing on HUD's Family Self-Sufficiency (FSS) Program, which is designed to help families receiving housing assistance achieve economic stability and advancement.

Since its establishment, the FSS Program has enabled families living in public housing or using Housing Choice Vouchers to access workforce training and other resources to pursue higher paying employment opportunities. Families enrolled in the FSS Program receive an interest-bearing escrow account, empowering them to save and apply that savings to work-related purchases. Witnesses include….

People living in the Centennial and Riverview high-rises in Ogdensburg can look out on magnificent views.

But these days, they are more likely to be looking into every corner of their apartment for bed bugs. The pests can multiply and spread rapidly.

They were discovered around the beginning of the year at the high-rises. Residents say a few people are already preparing to leave.

"They're panicked or upset about how things have been handled in the housing. And they're afraid," said Marilyn Luzinski, a resident of Riverview Towers.

Housing officials say bedbugs are not just a problem at the apartments. They say they are a problem all over the city of Ogdensburg. However, they also say they will do everything they can to eradicate them here.

"They seem to be getting less and less. We've had a couple of people that were quite infested with them. Now we get a phone call … well, we had one last week, it was just in her chair," said William Seymour, director of the Ogdensburg Housing Authority.

Residents of a Queens housing development have been forced to walk through a lobby flooded with sewage at least once a week for months now. Pomonok Houses resident Mecca Asia says it's a real problem. The lobby and area in front of the building also smells from the problem. Some residents call the walk through the lobby a "walk of shame." "We need a plumber," said 81-year-old Barry Ladas. A spokesperson for the New York City Housing Authority says, "This is unacceptable. We can and will do better to make sure all our residents have safe, clean homes. A Trenton man convicted of sexually assaulting a girl over several years, and who vanished from his trial in Bucks County, Pa. earlier this year, was sentenced to 11 1/2 to 23 years in state prison Friday.

Judge Diane E. Gibbons handed down the maximum sentence allowed, saying Darryl Jenkins, 53, "devastated" the young girl's Jenkins was a longtime Trenton Housing Authority employee, the office said.

He was convicted by a jury on April 3 of indecent assault of a victim under 16, unlawful contact with a minor and corrupting the morals of a minor, the office said.

HAZLETON — The city Housing Authority will spend a few bucks on legal fees in hopes of gaining thousands back.

The authority received a letter from the Pennsylvania Housing and Redevelopment Agencies and the National Association of Housing and Redevelopment officials telling them they were successful in challenging the operating reserve recapture that took place in 2012.

The 309 housing authorities that participated in the lawsuit were awarded more than $135 million. The amount of damages for the Hazleton Housing Authority and other authorities that did not participate total more than $230 million, the letter states.

The agencies asked the Hazleton authority to participate in a second lawsuit in hopes of receiving $19,421 in damages, but they need to contribute $3,000 for legal fees, Dorothy George, executive director, said in her report. These funds must be non-federal funds, she said.

[MD] Financing options for redevelopment of Perkins Homes include controversial incentives (Baltimore Sun, MD)
Baltimore Sun
(9/25/2017 4:29 PM, Sarah Gantz)
City leaders are considering millions of dollars in incentives for developers to overhaul Perkins Homes, a dated public housing project.

Harbor Point developer Beatty Development was selected in August by the Housing Authority of Baltimore City to lead a team in redeveloping the 17-acre Perkins Homes site into mixed-income residential complex.

To support the project, the city and housing agency intend to apply for a $30 million federal grant. As a condition of the federal funding, the city would be required to contribute at least three times the grant amount.

To meet its obligation of $90 million or more, the housing authority is considering seeking tax increment financing for the redevelopment. The controversial method involves the city issuing bonds to pay for project-related infrastructure and paying them off with new revenue generated by property taxes on the development.

[MD] At City Council meeting, citizens plead for crime solutions following Eastport shooting (Baltimore Sun, MD)

VIDEO. The City Council meeting Monday night struck a solemn, fervent tone as several members of the public, with a recent Eastport shooting fresh in mind, pleaded with the mayor and aldermen to wrangle crime they say is plaguing Annapolis communities.

A packed-house of constituents listened as Police Chief Scott Baker outlined the Annapolis Police Department's response to Wednesday night's incident and their strategy going forward. The police arrested three people in connection with that shooting, which resulted in the Thursday death of Michael Covert, a 36-year-old Eastport man.

"I share your outrage," Baker said, and admitted the police department is putting resources up against crime but not getting intended results. The police department has invested in cameras and has assigned two members of the Neighborhood Enhancement Team to patrol the Eastport Terrace and Harbour House area, Baker said. After the shooting, the department developed a schedule so officers can be held accountable for what happens on their shifts. Baker also asked the Housing Authority of the City of Annapolis to change their hours so staff will be available during peak crime hours on Friday nights and weekends.

"We need a partner in paroling properties," Baker said.

[VA] Region has critical lack of cheap housing (Bristol Herald Courier, VA)

David Baldwin, executive director of the Bristol Virginia Redevelopment and Housing Authority, told the panel that he has lengthy waiting lists for both subsidized public housing and the agency's other market housing.

"Although we don't experience high vacancy rates – we maintain 97 or 98 percent occupancy – I've said a lot of times people choose where they live," Baldwin said. "Even though we have hundreds on our waiting lists, we still might go through two or three applicants for every time we turn a unit over. … There are a number of tax credit properties on both sides of the state line. If they qualify, they're going to go there."

As for the retail housing market, the Tri-Cities area has seen a 15 percent decrease in the number of people selling their homes, a lack of inventory at the lower end of the scale and rising prices, according to Eric Kistner of the Northeast Tennessee Association of Realtors.

"The houses that come on the market either need more [work] so folks don't want to buy them, they're over-priced for the condition that they're in so there's a separate challenge there," Kistner said. "If they're trying to buy a $100,000 house – and you qualify for a VHDA loan -- but the property needs $20,000 in work, whether it needs a heat pump, are you making yourself better off by buying a house or putting yourself into greater debt?"

[MI] Boys & Girls Clubs of Southeastern Michigan CEO to retire (Crain's Detroit Business, MI)

(9/25/2017 2:41 PM, Annalise Frank)
The Boys & Girls Clubs of Southeastern Michigan's president and CEO of 20 years, Len Krichko, plans to retire from the nonprofit at the end of the year.

A national search is starting to find his replacement and expects to fill the position in the second quarter of 2018, Shaun Wilson, a spokesman for the organization, told Crain's in an email. An interim president and CEO will be appointed when Krichko retires, Wilson said.

During his tenure with the organization, Krichko opened the first Boys & Girls Clubs in public housing communities in Detroit and Cleveland, the release said. He helped the metro Detroit area grow from eight clubs to 10 and under his leadership it expanded from serving 7,000 children per year to about 15,000, Wilson said.

The 2100 Memorial assisted living facility just west of downtown Houston was flooded when Buffalo Bayou went over its banks. Only the first floor flooded. No apartments were affected but the floodwater temporarily shut off the electricity and tap water. More than three weeks later, all residents received notices telling them to move out within five days. Now, Lone Star Legal Aid has filed a lawsuit on their behalf. Director of litigation Rich Tomlinson doesn't buy the Housing Authority's argument that the storm rendered electrical equipment a safety threat. Numerous 2100 Memorial residents spoke out at City Council last week. In an email to News 88.7, the Housing Authority said it doesn't comment on pending litigation. On its website, it says it's helping residents move and that it understands many will not be able to make the deadline. It also says current residents will be given preference if they want to move back once the safety issues are resolved.

(9/25/2017 10:41 PM, Julia Rentsch)
Moofie Miller, director of housing with the Loveland Housing Authority, will retire Friday after serving 14 years in her role, according to an LHA press release.

Over the course of her career with the LHA, which totaled 29 years, Miller is estimated to have assisted more than 9,000 households — a total of approximately 18,000 seniors, adults and children — with their housing needs.

Prior to working at the LHA, Miller worked for the Metro West Housing Authority and the Colorado Division of Housing. Miller joined LHA in 1988 as an administrative assistant, and was promoted to administrator of both the Section 8 voucher program and the public housing program before becoming housing manager in 1994.

In this role, Miller and her team championed an effort for the LHA to rely less on assistance given by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development and instead to use Low Income Housing Tax Credits as a tool to develop new affordable housing. The program encourages the construction and rehabilitation of low-income rental housing by providing a federal income tax credit as an incentive to investors, according to the Colorado Housing and Finance Authority.

Ten years and $1 billion.

That's what it likely will take to replace the state's aging Mayor Wright Homes low-income public housing complex in Kalihi with seven times as many rental apartments in a new high-rise community for residents earning a broad range of incomes.

The construction timetable and cost estimate are in a draft environmental impact statement published earlier this month by the Hawaii Public Housing Authority, a state agency that selected Texas- based developer Hunt Cos. in 2014 to replace Mayor Wright's 364 homes with 2,500 new apartments.

The environmental report adds details to an earlier outline of how the 15-acre Mayor Wright property dotted with two- and three-story apartment buildings should be remade through the public-private partnership.

Under the latest conceptual plan, a company called MWH Partners LLC led by Hunt would construct four towers as high as 380 feet rising out of broader midrise base buildings containing some homes and retail tenants possibly including a grocery store. A central park, a community center, rooftop recreation decks and an early childhood public school also are envisioned.

Hakim Ouansafi, HPHA executive director, said the project will catalyze public and private investment to create a vibrant mixed-income community that will revolutionize public housing as we know it.

3 Ways the UN Can Keep Cities at the Center of Sustainability Goals (Next City)
Next City
(9/26/2017 5:40 AM, Peter Calthorpe)
The 21st century presents us with two new and accelerating challenges: climate change and mass urbanization. The good news is they are connected in ways that solving for both can enhance our future and shape better lives for all. Livable cities lead to lower carbon emissions and dramatic improvements in social, economic and environmental impacts. Treating them and many of the other issues identified in the UN Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) in isolation will never work; cities are the nexus of common solutions to our toughest challenges — poverty, economic development, social integration, environmental degradation, and yes, climate change.

While the UN is structured around worthy challenges — environment, water, women and poverty, to name a few — these agencies too often operate independently. The coalition created at Habitat III was a formative moment for the UN — it recognized, codified and elevated urban form to a profound, crosscutting role in the future of our global community.

The challenge is now to fulfill the vision of what's been dubbed the New Urban Agenda — to find a way to restructure UN-Habitat to become a focal organization in the effort to build better cities and ultimately better lives. The secretary general appointed me to an independent, high-level panel to evaluate the effectiveness of UN-Habitat in relation to its normative and operational work, governance structure, financial capacity and ability to work with various stakeholders across national, sub-national and local governments. At the heart of our approach were three fundamental strategies: elevate UN-Habitat, integrate its operations across the UN, and refocus its activities.

1. Elevate UN-Habitat. To take on the seminal challenge of reshaping cities around the globe, UN-Habitat must be elevated. Its governance, activities, type of support and public identity has to expand beyond its historic practice. Instead of declining budgets and limited participation by member states, it needs interaction with and support from a much larger group; hence the recommendation to shift from a governing council of 58 to universal membership and governance by the UN General Assembly. And just like cities need support from many stakeholders, the panel saw the need for expanded participation from local governments, a broader range of stakeholder groups, and a growing array of institutions. In short, UN-Habitat's role and public profile must be transformed.

[NY] Schumer, Gillibrand announce $200,000 in federal funding to Center for Youth (Rochester First,1: NY)
Rochester First
(9/25/2017 8:57 PM, Press Release)
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (WROC-TV) - U.S. Senate Minority Leader Charles E. Schumer and U.S. Senator Kirsten Gillibrand announced $200,000 in federal funding for Rochester's Center For Youth Services.

The funding was allocated through the Department of Health and Human Services' (HHS) Administration for Children and Families (ACYF). Specifically, the Center for Youth will use the funding to support their Youth Emergency Homeless Shelter.

"We must do all we can to prevent homelessness and to help provide those truly in need with shelter," said Senator Schumer. "I am proud to announce this federal funding and will continue to support programs that help the most vulnerable of our citizens."

"This funding will help the Center for Youth Services provide safe housing for teenagers in the community who need a place to live," said Senator Gillibrand. "I will continue working with my colleagues in the Senate to ensure funding for initiatives that provide a lifeline for young people in need of assistance."

"The awarding of this $200,000 federal grant to The Center for Youth's emergency homeless shelter makes it possible for our agency to support those young people, ages 12 – 18 years, who are without stable housing supports. It ensures that they have a safe place to live while they continue their education and re-establish more permanent housing options. Currently The Center for Youth is the only agency in Monroe County serving this younger homeless youth population; given that, this award could not be more important to the future of our younger youth struggling with homelessness," Dr. Elaine Spaull, Executive Director, The Center for Youth.

(9/25/2017 7:04 PM, James Brasuell)
With lessons from high-profile urban revitalization in place, organizers and philanthropists are working to ensure the 11th Street Bridge Park doesn't push low-income residents out of surrounding neighborhoods. JPMorgan Chase will donate $10 million to preserve affordable housing in Washington, D.C., reports Jonathan O'Connell. The announcement of J.P. Morgan's donation is the most recent philanthropic attention devoted to the project and its surrounding neighborhoods. "The proposed 11th Street Bridge Park that would cross the Anacostia River continues to inspire big-name philanthropists to write big checks to revitalize some of the District's poorest neighborhoods and help low-income residents prepare should an economic turnaround arrive," writes O'Connell. The Building Bridges Across the River nonprofit worked to secure the funding from JPMorgan Chase, as a response to the threat of gentrification and displacement in the wake of the project. "Organizers are already concerned that the park project will drive up rents and property values to the degree that low- and moderate-income residents of the area will be forced out once the park opens, similar to what has happened when new development arrived in other parts of the city in recent years," writes O'Connell. The article includes more details on the previous donations to the cause of preventing the worst effects of gentrification. About half of the project's funding has been raised, and construction could begin as soon as 2019.

The proposed 11th Street Bridge Park that would cross the Anacostia River continues to inspire big-name philanthropists to write big checks to revitalize some of the District's poorest neighborhoods, and help low-income residents prepare should an economic turnaround arrive.

The latest is JPMorgan Chase & Co. Over the next three years, the financial giant agreed to donate $10 million in Wards 7 and 8 of the District, including $5 million to preserve affordable housing for low-income residents as part of a proposal established by the Southeast D.C. non-profit organization planning the park, Building Bridges Across the River.

Sometimes likened to New York City's High Line public park, the Bridge Park calls for a public plaza, amphitheater, environmental education center and other amenities to be built along a 1.45-mile stretch of bridge atop four piers that once carried the 11th Street Bridge. It would connect Anacostia, one of the poorest neighborhoods in the city, with the much more affluent neighborhoods in and around Capitol Hill.

Construction is projected to cost between $50 and $55 million, about $25 million of which has already been raised. Construction is scheduled to begin in 2019.

(9/24/2017 5:44 PM, Business Wire)
JPMorgan Chase & Co. today unveiled a $10 million, three-year investment to help drive inclusive economic growth in underserved Washington, D.C. neighborhoods, most notably in Wards 7 and 8. This long-term commitment is the firm's third investment in a major U.S. city. It combines the firm's business expertise and collaboration with local business and community leaders to invest in four key drivers of inclusive growth: jobs and skills, minority-owned small business expansion, neighborhood revitalization and financial health.

"Greater Washington is one of the world's most economically influential regions yet not all residents benefit equally," said Jamie Dimon, Chairman and CEO of JPMorgan Chase. "We're investing in D.C. because we see local leaders working together and innovating to make opportunity available to all Washingtonians no matter the neighborhood they live in."

How the Firm is Creating Economic Opportunity

JPMorgan Chase makes approximately $250 million in annual philanthropic investments to create economic opportunity across the U.S. and in 40 countries around the world. To ensure the greatest impact, the firm combines data with its business expertise—including human capital, management expertise, and partnerships—to create opportunity in underserved communities.

Replacing Ridley Place and adding in mixed-income housing is one of several recommendations that will be presented to the public Thursday night as part of Newport News' plan to revitalize that section of the Southeast Community.

Britta Ayers, the city's manager of comprehensive planning, said she can't stress enough how important it is that people from the community show up — especially those who live near Ridley.

"They have a voice, and they need to be heard and this is that opportunity," Ayers said.

The recommendations that will be presented at 6 p.m. Thursday at the Marshall Early Learning Center, 734 24th St., come from the city's effort to transform the Ridley-Marshall area through the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Choice Neighborhood program.

HUD awarded a $500,000 planning grant to Newport News last summer so that the city could sketch out how it would revitalize the area, which officials have defined as one of Newport News' most blighted sections. It is bounded by 39th Street to the north, Hampton Roads Harbor to the south, Interstate 664 to the west and Marshall Avenue and the former Chase Bag property to the east.

HUD requires the resulting plan to be community-driven. Through three task forces — housing, people and neighborhood — residents, business owners and other "stakeholders" brainstormed ideas and recommendations on improving the area.

They looked at the results of a survey that was circulated within the community and identified needs that should be met.

"If that's improving an existing service, introducing a new program or service into the community," Ayers said, citing examples.

Jamie Johnson founded JLJ Construction in 2008 after spending six years flipping older houses in Richmond and surrounding areas.

"If people didn't want our houses, they started asking us to build or renovate a house for them," he said. "So I started business as a general contractor. At first, I was just doing renovations and building homes for individuals."

About 70 percent of the company's work is now focused on the state and local governments as well as private businesses and universities. The remaining 30 percent is related to work for individuals.

Besides UR, the company's clients include the city of Richmond, Henrico County, Servpro, Wilson & Associates' Funeral Service, Virginia State University and Southside Community Development & Housing Corp.

The majority of JLJ's work is in central Virginia, but it also has jobs in Hampton Roads. For instance, it is currently working on a roofing project for the Newport News Redevelopment & Housing Authority.

Eight months after the January storms, Dougherty County and other Southwest Georgia counties are still working to secure major funds to aid in recovery.

Dougherty County is currently working with Cornerstone Government Affairs, a lobbyist group with Southwest Georgia ties. County commissioners voted on Monday to extend their contract with Cornerstone for another six months, until the end of next March, at which point they will decide on a month-by-month basis whether to extend it further.

Through the state, Dougherty County is trying to obtain $100 million from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development's Community Development Block Grant Disaster Recovery Program. The state also applied for another $100 million from this program for other counties affected by the storms.

Commission Chairman Chris Cohilas said the county has a committee in place at this time to figure out how they would use that money for long-term recovery.

"We have identified general projects, such as improving and trying to really reinvest in Radium Springs and connecting it to the rest of the community and improving roads, burying power lines, things like that that make us more resilient as a community," he said.

City Council on Monday voted its support for a $1 million grant to help renovate the Variety Theatre in hopes it will spark development in the West Side neighborhood along Lorain Avenue and West 118th Street. The grant, in conjunction with the Detroit-Shoreway Development Corp., is one of the final pieces needed for funding the renovation project, which is anticipated to cost about $15 million. The project is close to securing some tax credits that will close the financing gap, said Councilwoman Dona Brady, who has helped spearhead the project. The hope is that it will ignite the same kind of growth and development seen around Gordon Square on Detroit Avenue with renovation of the Capitol Theatre there. The plan for the project is to renovate the block-long building to allow for 10 shops on the first floor and a restaurant in the lower level of the theater. The upper level of the theater would be used as a movie house. "So much happened here; it was the center of the neighborhood," said Patrick Colvin, secretary of the Friends of the Historic Variety Theatre and board president of Westown Community Development Corp., in a recent interview with The Plain Dealer. "Restoring the Variety will help rejuvenate and rebuild the neighborhood."

Council also approved agreements for ten projects that are looking at getting federal funding through the Community Development Block Grant Program and the HOME Funds through the Housing and Urban Development Program.

Lima could be getting combined 1.3 million dollars through both programs, that could provide funding for various housing programs, free manufacturing training at Rhodes State, and wellness programs at Bradfield Center.

"The Agreements were to authorize us to provide them funding, for their projects. The money will be available we hope in October, that is the beginning of our program year. However we are we are dependent on the federal government to make those funds available," commented Susan Crotty, Community Development Director, City of Lima.

Finally, Lima City Council approved the nearly 2 million dollars contracts to renovate the Chief William Davenport Hall of Justice. Tuttle Construction will be the lead contractor for that project.

Repeated phone messages left at the Local 227 office and with its president, Lee Zumbrennen, for comment were not returned.

Simlar last week provided a seniority list -- dated Sept. 18, 2017 -- which shows Mika is not on the list of 219 employees in the union, the largest collective bargaining group in Warren government.

"She didn't receive any additional benefits and additional money or promotion based on the incorrect seniority date. When it was noticed, it was immediately changed back," the acting human resources director added.

Mika currently is on the seniority list of 35 non-union full-time employees, comprised mostly of department heads appointed by the mayor.

She began working for the city as a high school co-op in 2003, as a clerical assistant in the City Attorney's Office. She became a law clerk in 2008 and transferred later that year to the Planning Department, where she worked as an aide in the Community Development Block Grant program. All of those roles were part-time jobs.

[MI] Detroit Has a New Tool for Fighting Gentrification's Displacement (Next City)
Next City
(9/26/2017 5:40 AM, Rachel Dovey)
As officials in Los Angeles and Denver implement linkage fees to grow their supply of affordable housing, Detroit leaders have selected a different tool from the same toolbox: inclusionary zoning.

Developers who receive more than a set threshold of public subsidies — $500,000 from either the city or state and federal programs — will be required to put aside 20 percent of their units (at minimum) for lower income residents going forward, the Detroit Free Press reports. Detroit City Council approved the ordinance last week, which also impacts projects involving city-owned property transferred at a rate "less than true cash value," according to the Free Press. Council approved a separate ordinance offering increased protections to seniors and low-income residents facing sudden eviction, as well.

Councilwoman Mary Sheffield championed both ordinances, and said at a press conference last week that they were an attempt to fight rising rents and the displacement that so often follows.

"The gentrification that we see in New York, D.C., Chicago and Boston is not welcome in Detroit," she said.

The proposal originally stipulated that a minimum of 10 percent of the units would be reserved for households at or below 80 percent of the average median income, with another 5 percent going to those at 60 percent or less and a further 5 percent for those at 50 percent or less, the Detroit News reports. But because that formula was "indifferent to the source of funding a particular project may receive," Council approved an amendment that further broke down the tiers with financial sourcing in mind.

Huge week for tax reform (Politico)
Politico
(9/25/2017 8:45 AM, Ben White)
The "Big Six" plan to release a blueprint on Wednesday with a corporate rate of 20 percent, a compromise from President Trump's desire for 15 percent. That number will probably have to go a little higher to make the math work. The top individual rate is likely to go down to 35 percent from 39.6 percent in the Big Six blueprint with three total brackets down from seven. But the numbers aren't final yet. POLITICO's Nancy Cook and Brian Faler have some more details here.

Trump on Sunday night: "We have a tax plan that is totally finalized. I think it'll be terrific. I think it's going to go through."

Trump also once again went with the 15 percent figure that nobody — nobody — working on tax reform thinks is possible: "We'll see what happens. But I hope it's going to be 15 percent. But it's going to be substantially lower so we bring jobs back into our country."

While the mortgage interest and charitable giving deductions are likely safe, most others are on the chopping block though the Big Six will probably avoid too much detail to stave off lobbying campaigns.

The Treasury Secretary is close to the president and the GOP is determined to pass a revamp; he also faces intraparty divisions and his own relative inexperience Steven Mnuchin is facing the biggest test of his short political career.

The Treasury secretary has been working for months to bridge divides between an impulsive president and a fractious Congress to deliver on the Republican Party's promise of a simpler tax code with lower rates.

He has a powerful tailwind. Both Donald Trump and Republican lawmakers have promised a tax overhaul, which now remains one of their biggest domestic policy priorities since their efforts to repeal or overhaul the Affordable Care Act have so far fallen flat.

Stacked against Mr. Mnuchin, as negotiations near the make-or-break stage, are unresolved intraparty disagreements over how much lost tax revenue is acceptable and how tax cuts should be apportioned among companies, high-income earners and the middle class. Lobbyists stand ready to resist almost any proposed changes.

Equifax's breach is not its first brush with concerns over handling of personal data (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(9/25/2017 12:25 PM, Renae Merle)
After working largely out of the spotlight for decades, America's thousands of credit reporting companies found themselves in trouble in the late 1960s as lawmakers grew concerned about the massive troves of sensitive information the firms had collected on private citizens.

The target of many of these complaints was one company, Atlanta-based Retail Credit Co. — now known as Equifax.

Among the company's critics was an insurance executive named James T. Baker, who told a Senate committee in 1968 that he was having trouble finding a job after the company put a derogatory note in his file, alleging he had been fired for breaking the rules at his former employer. The note was incorrect, but the company refused to change it, Baker told the committee, according to media reports at the time.

The backlash against the industry led to landmark legislation, the Fair Credit Reporting Act of 1970, that now governs the way credit rating agencies operate. But it did little to restrain Equifax's ambition.

Equifax and Wells Fargo reveal what's offensively wrong with forced arbitration (New York Daily News, NY)
New York Daily News
(9/26/2017 5:07 AM, Ali Naini)
As most everyone has belatedly learned, Equifax, one of the "Big Three" credit reporting agencies, experienced a massive hack in July. The result: exposure of Social Security numbers, credit card accounts, birth dates and other personal information of 143 million Americans. In response to this egregious failure to safeguard the data in its possession, Equifax offered one year of "free" credit monitoring to consumers — but only if they waived their right to sue Equifax in class-action suits, and agreed to arbitration instead, for claims involving the credit monitoring service. How's that for atonement?

Not sufficient. After heavy criticism, the company backtracked, but its change of heart does nothing to address the underlying problem with forced arbitration clauses like the one Equifax tried to foist onto the real victims of the hack.

These clauses are now ubiquitous, appearing in agreements for bank accounts, credit cards, pay-day loans and credit report monitoring, among other places. After years of congressionally mandated study and careful review of thousands of comments, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, or CFPB, in July issued a regulation preventing banks and other companies from requiring mandatory arbitration and class-action waivers in their agreements with consumers.

But the House of Representatives has voted to kill the regulation, and the Senate may soon do the same. The Equifax incident, among others, shows why that would be a terrible decision for Americans.

Thank Equifax for that fake new mortgage on your house, stolen tax refund (Fresno Bee, CA)

(9/24/2017 5:12 PM, Tim Johnson, McClatchy DC)
WASHINGTON - For up to 143 million U.S. citizens who lost personal data in the breach of the Equifax credit bureau, here's how criminals might take advantage:

They might try to buy a gun in your name. Or get a second mortgage on your house. They could lease a car by impersonating you, and crash it. They might steal your tax refund or Social Security check. Maybe they'll get your health records.

That's just for starters. For victims of the breach, headaches may recur for years. U.S. consumers are stricken by a new reality: Companies that gather personal data on them often are unable to protect that data.

The breach, which Equifax announced Sept. 7, sent a ripple through the business world. A new shock came Wednesday when the Securities and Exchange Commission said that it had been hacked, too, amounting to a one-two blow of confidence to the financial system. Hearings are already scheduled on Capitol Hill, and plenty of hand-wringing is unfolding in boardrooms. Calls for regulatory reform mount. A hopeful few see a silver lining.

CFTC speech is, for the most part, raising a white flag

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission has found a solution to its problem of chronic underfunding — it will let the industry do the investigating.

That's not an overstatement. The head of the CFTC's enforcement division will lay that framework out in a speech on Monday night, according to a draft received by the New York Times.

The thrust is that companies that self-report will receive a discount on their penalty of about 75%, and in what are called rare cases in the report, relief from penalties altogether.

Discounts aren't new. All regulators, including the CFTC and the Securities and Exchange Commission, offer discounts for cooperation.

The Angel Oak family of companies expects to originate $1.1 billion worth of non-qualified mortgages this year, a figure that represents an almost 74 percent gain from 2016.

According to an upcoming press statement from the privately held non-agency lender, wholesale lending through loan brokers will account for the largest chunk of its volume at $850.0 billion. Retail and correspondent acquisitions will account for $125 million each.

It's possible that Angel Oak will be the largest non-QM funder this year, depending on where Caliber Home Loans and Citadel Servicing Corp. come in.

Through the first three quarters of 2017, AO is looking at $761.5 million in non-QM originations, a figure that includes an estimate for the quarter about to end.

Competition Lowers Credit Standards and Profit Expectations (Mortgage News Daily)
Mortgage News Daily
(9/25/2017 12:14 PM, Jann Swanson)
Since the fourth quarter of 2016, lenders have increasingly reported to Fannie Mae that they have been loosening their home mortgage credit standards. The company's third quarter 2017 Mortgage Lender Sentiment Survey has those responses at a survey high. Fannie Mae attributes the apparent easing in part to increased competition.

Across all loan types - GSE Eligible, Non-GSE Eligible, and Government - the net share of lenders who reported easing rather than tightening credit standards over the prior three months was up, ranging from a net of 12 percent for government loans to 25 percent for GSE eligible loans. Very few lenders said they were tightening standards - between 1 and 3 percent across loan types.

When asked about their intentions for the next three months there were similar responses. While on net, expectations of future credit easing were essentially unchanged from the prior quarter, the net share expecting to ease standards for GSE Eligible loans over the next three months reached a survey high of 18 percent. Non-GSE Eligible and Government loans had nets of 13 percent and 10 percent respectively. On a year-over-year basis, expectations of easing showed marked improvement for all loan types.

"Lenders further eased home mortgage credit standards during the third quarter, continuing a trend that started in late 2016. In particular, both the net share of lenders reporting easing on GSE-eligible loans for the prior three months and the share expecting to ease standards on those loans over the next three months increased to survey highs," said Doug Duncan, senior vice president and chief economist at Fannie Mae. "Lenders' comments suggest that competitive pressure and more favorable guidelines for GSE loans have helped to bring about more easing of underwriting standards for those loans. We believe that GSE attempts to relieve repurchase concerns and expand credit for creditworthy borrowers have contributed to the easing trend.

Loan demand was down. The net share of lenders reporting growth in the demand for purchase mortgages of all three loans types was lower than in the third quarters of both 2015 and 2016. Despite the roller-coaster appearance of the graph depicting forward-looking expectations for demand, Fannie Mae notes the net share of lenders expecting increased demand is relatively stable for the same quarter year over year.

GSE Seller Buybacks Edged Higher in 2Q17, but YOY… (Inside Mortgage Finance)
Inside Mortgage Finance
(9/25/2017 12:07 PM, John Bancroft)
Mortgage lenders that sell loans to Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac saw a modest increase in the volume of loans they repurchased from the GSEs during the second quarter of 2017, according to a new Inside The GSEs analysis of disclosure reports filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

During the second quarter, lenders repurchased or made indemnifications on $244.44 million of single-family loans pooled in Fannie and Freddie mortgage-backed securities. That was up 2.5 percent from the first three months of the year.

On a year-to-date basis, seller buybacks totaled $483.01 million, a 14.5 percent drop from the first six months of 2016.

All of the uptick in seller buybacks came from Fannie, where repurchases surged 21.5 percent from the first to the second quarter. Most of that represented buybacks of $105.40 million of loans related to MBS issued in 2016, up from $66.26 million of repurchases on that cohort recorded in the first quarter. For the full story and exclusive buyback tables, see the new edition of Inside The GSEs, now available online.

High home prices may be hitting their limit (CNBC)
CNBC
(9/25/2017 12:00 PM, Diana Olick)
VIDEO. There is so much demand for housing and so few homes for sale that prices have nowhere to go but up — unless of course they get so high that potential buyers have no choice but to back away. That may be what is happening now.

After hitting a peak in March of this year, price gains month to month have been coming down. In July, the latest reading on home prices, the price gain compared with a year ago stabilized at 6.2 percent. That annual gain had been accelerating in every other month this year, according to Black Knight Financial Services.

Historically, home prices have always lagged sales, and sales have been falling for the past several months. While prices are not falling, the gains are cooling.

National home price reports don't speak to the thousands of local housing markets, but some of the nation's biggest areas are seeing changes. In Southern California, prices are still up considerably from a year ago but seem to have stalled, according to CoreLogic, a real estate consulting and analytics firm. The biggest problem is lack of supply in more affordable price ranges.

Southern California's median sale price stayed largely still this summer, hovering right around $500,000 between June and August, said Andrew LePage, a research analyst at CoreLogic.

The cheapest places to retire (CNBC)
CNBC
(9/25/2017 11:04 AM, Jessica Dickler)
If, like most Americans, your retirement savings are falling short, pack your bags. You'll be better off living in Birmingham, Alabama, Memphis, Tennessee, or Detroit.

Using criteria such as groceries, housing, utilities, transportation and health care, GoBankingRates found the cheapest places to retire in the country's 150 biggest cities.

At the foothills of the Appalachian Mountains, Birmingham was the least expensive place to live out your golden years, the personal finance website said, thanks to low health-care and transportation costs in addition to affordable housing.

Overall, Americans are increasingly optimistic about their financial future, according to a separate report by Allianz Life.

Dream rental turns into house of horror for woman conned by bogus landlord (USA Today)
USA Today
(9/26/2017 12:38 AM, Cary Spivak)
VIDEO. When Alishia Evans rented a home on the 5700 block of N. 81st St. in Milwaukee, it seemed like a dream come true — a good neighborhood, affordable rent and ample living space.

The dream, however, turned into a nightmare a few days after moving in, when Evans, her fiance and her 12-year-old daughter were ordered out of the house at gunpoint by Milwaukee police.

That is when Evans learned that the man who said he was the landlord actually had no connection to the house and no right to rent it and collect $2,000 from Evans and her fiance, Levon Osuji.

"He was so believable," Evans said of the man who showed the house, gave the couple the keys and took their money orders.

Evans, 31, and Osuji, 25, went from renting a three-bedroom northwest side home to finding their belongings tossed onto the curb and eventually being forced to sleep in a Nissan Sentra. Their tale involves a con man, the Milwaukee Police Department, a property manager and her client, Freddie Mac — the giant quasi-government agency that buys billions of dollars in mortgages from lenders.

[NY] Housing market near Indian Point shows positive (Journal News, Westchester, NY)
NY Journal News
(9/25/2017 4:15 PM, Akiko Matsuda)
VIDEO. Earlier this year, the news of closing the Indian Point nuclear power plant shook its host communities in northern Westchester where the facility has been the major taxpayer, prime employer and generous charitable donor for more than half a century.

Residents of the village of Buchanan, the Hendrick Hudson school district and the town of Cortlandt have braced for impact since the January announcement, fearing that "for sale" signs may become ubiquitous as homeowners try to leave before higher taxes hit.

Don Dwyer, a real estate agent who lives in the Montrose hamlet of Cortlandt, says thus far, the opposite has proved true.

"Metrics show very clearly there's no exodus from this area in any shape or form," said Dwyer, an associate broker with Better Homes and Gardens Rand Realty. "We're seeing a number of people who want to move into this community for a variety of reasons, and they are having a difficult time buying homes because most of the homes are going into contract within 30 days."

If things proceed as they did at Entergy's other nuclear facility, the Vermont Yankee nuclear power plant that ceased operation in December 2014, the transition would be gradual.

[NY] Realtors: Capital Region housing market remains hot (Saratogian, Saratoga Springs, NY)
Saratogian
(9/25/2017 3:00 PM, Staff report)
Just as summer temperatures have yet to cool off as the Capital Region moves into fall, the local real estate market remains hot, as well, according to local Realtors.

In its monthly report, the Greater Capital Association of Realtors said both the number of sales and sale prices were up significantly in August, as compared to August 2016. According to the trade association, the number of pending sales around the six-county region in August increased by 4 percent year-over-year, to 1,208 last month, while the median sales price — the point at which an equal number of sales were made at higher and lower prices — climbed 8 percent, to more than $215,000.

"The Capital Region's housing market is busy," said Joel Koval, the group's president. "While there was an 8 percent rise in sales prices over August of 2016, it's also notable that our region's wages and other factors that impact home-buying ability have remained stable."

[NC] Wells Fargo in settlement talks in Charlotte class-action case, filing says (Charlotte Observer, NC)
Charlotte Observer
(9/25/2017 2:37 PM, Rick Rothacker)
Wells Fargo has agreed to "good faith class settlement negotiations" to resolve a lawsuit that alleges the bank was making "stealth" mortgage modifications that could vastly increase homeowners' borrowing costs, according to a filing Monday in federal bankruptcy court in Charlotte.

Gaston County homeowners Christopher and Allison Cotton gained national attention in June when they filed their class-action lawsuit in federal bankruptcy court here against the San Francisco-based bank. The case was another black eye for Wells as it tries to recover from a major scandal over its consumer banking sales practices.

[FL] How Florida heeded building codes - until now (Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel, FL)
Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel
(9/25/2017 4:15 PM, Jeremy Stewart)
Building codes matter - we learned that from Hurricane Andrew. Florida has made itself the strongest code in the nation. We are now the gold standard. That's why the Legislature's nearly unanimous support of the Code Development Modernization Bill (HB 1021 from the 2017 Legislative Session) is crucial to moving forward. Florida needs to be the master of its own, superior building codes. Prior to the passage of the Modernization Bill, the Florida Building Commission would automatically accept the International Codes Council's building code standards for the new cycle. Here's the problem with that: the ICC is a model code developed with all 50 states in mind, including regulations on snow loads on roofs and earthquake standards. Therefore it is less stringent on key hurricane and storm resilience standards, such as wind loads and roofing attachments. The FBC spends months pulling out what doesn't apply to Florida, reviewing what does, and determining if anything new needs to be added based on recent discoveries - they would do this every cycle.

Last cycle, the Florida Building Commission considered more than 600 amendments to the model ICC code. Progress in policy does not equate to weakness in standards. Detractors have made outrageous claims suggesting the passage of the Modernization Bill weakens the code, immediately increases insurance rates, and returns the building code to pre-hurricane

Andrew days. Opponents have even pulled and published an un-contextualized quote from 2005 by a deceased Florida Home Builders Association employee to support their position. Moving forward, Florida stands strong on the code it currently has in place - as in right now, not pre-Andrew - and the bill requires the FBC to consider the ICC and other national codes during the review cycle. The bill mandates that the FBC ensure the code is compliant with the Federal Emergency Management Agency, Housing and Urban Development, and National Flood Insurance Program standards- something absent from the previous process. The FBC is prohibited from weakening wind-load or water intrusion standards all while maintaining enhanced education and code enforcement.

[IL] Rockford's housing market doing better than Illinois overall (Rockford Register Star, IL)
Rockford Register Star
(9/26/2017 4:58 AM, Susan Vela)
ROCKFORD — The city's housing market continues to outpace the rest of Illinois in sales gains and year-over-year price increases, the Rockford Area Realtors said today in a press release.

Winnebago County is among 34 of 102 Illinois counties that reported sales gains for July 2017 over July 2016. It's also included in the 53 Illinois counties showing year-over-year price increases, according to data collected by the Realtors group.

Exactly 460 Rockford area properties were sold in August, up from 454 homes sold in August 2016. Home sales were up 1.3 percent, compared to down 3.9 percent for the entire state. Median prices went up 7 percent, which was 2 percentage points more than the state overall.

Last month, the three-month rolling average price of a Rockford home was $133,079, the highest average price of the year, and the highest average for any month dating back to December 2008, when prices hit $136,400, according to the Realtors association.

Los Angeles Times
(9/25/2017 3:51 PM, Phillip Molnar)
Home prices in San Diego County hit new price peaks in the first half of 2017, surpassing numbers seen during the housing boom.

The median home price reached $545,000 in June, the highest in the region's history, and marked the culmination of increases in the first six months of the year.

Most notably, the number of homes for sale dropped sharply this year. There were 28,725 home listings in the first half, down from 33,890 the same time in 2016, said the Greater San Diego Association of Realtors.

The reduction in listings makes it even tougher for first-timers to get in a home, said Mark Goldman, real estate lecturer at San Diego State University.

[PR] Desperation In Puerto Rican Town Where 60 Percent Are Now Homeless (National Public Radio)
National Public Radio
(9/25/2017 11:35 PM, Greg Allen and Marisa Penaloza)
AUDIO. Irma Rivera Aviles, like nearly 200 others, are stuck at shelter in Cataño, Puerto Rico where conditions are getting worse daily. Nearly a week after Hurricane Maria rampaged through the country, she's desperately pleading for help, "The governor needs to come here and take a look at our critical situation" she says, "the bathrooms flooded and aren't working, sewage is overflowing, the generator is broken and we are here in the dark."

"We desperately need water, power and ice," she says.

In Cataño, a small town near San Juan, about 60 percent of the population of 27,000 is now homeless and the "situation is extremely precarious," says utility supervisor Hector Merced.

"Cataño is devastated, it's flooded," Merced says.

The water rose quickly when Hurricane Maria hit last Wednesday. Cataño is a low-lying community on Puerto Rico's northern coast on the Bahia de San Juan.

[PR] Hurricane Maria Caused as Much as $85 Billion in Insured Losses, AIR Worldwide Says (Wall Street Journal)
Wall Street Journal
(9/25/2017 4:53 PM, Nicole Friedman)
Hurricane Maria caused an estimated $40 billion to $85 billion in insured losses, mostly in Puerto Rico, catastrophe-modeling firm AIR Worldwide said Monday.

Maria was the worst storm to hit Puerto Rico since 1928 and devastated the island, causing widespread property damage and power outages. The storm also caused extensive damage in Dominica.

More than 85% of the insured loss is in Puerto Rico, AIR said. The firm's preliminary damage estimate is higher than the firm's estimates for Hurricane Harvey, which made landfall in Texas in August, and Hurricane Irma, which passed through the Caribbean before reaching Florida earlier this month.

Harvey caused more than $10 billion in insured losses, AIR said, not including losses borne by the National Flood Insurance Program, which provides most residential flood insurance. Irma caused $32 billion to $50 billion in insured losses in the U.S. and the Caribbean, according to AIR.

[PR] In Battered Puerto Rico, Governor Warns of a Humanitarian Crisis (New York Times)
New York Times
(9/25/2017 6:00 PM, Frances Robles, Lizette Alvarez and Nicholas Fando)
SAN JUAN, P.R. — Gov. Ricardo A. Rosselló of Puerto Rico said on Monday that the island was on the brink of a "humanitarian crisis" nearly a week after Hurricane Maria knocked out its power and most of its water, and left residents waiting in excruciating lines for fuel. He called on Congress to prevent a deepening disaster.

Stressing that Puerto Rico, a United States territory, deserved the same treatment as hurricane-ravaged states, the governor urged Republican leaders and the federal government to move swiftly to send more money, supplies and relief workers. It was a plea echoed by Puerto Rico's allies in Congress, who are pushing for quick movement on a new relief bill and a loosening of financial debt obligations for the island, which is still reeling from a corrosive economic crisis.

"Puerto Rico, which is part of the United States, can turn into a humanitarian crisis," Governor Rosselló said. "To avoid that, recognize that we Puerto Ricans are American citizens; when we speak of a catastrophe, everyone must be treated equally."

And Mr. Rosselló did not mince words about the potential impact on the mainland, where Puerto Ricans are expected to arrive in droves to escape the post-Maria hardships they will face on the island, including a shortage of already hard-to-find jobs.

[PR] Maria Cripples Puerto Rico's Main Airport, Leaving Thousands Stranded (Wall Street Journal)
Wall Street Journal
(9/25/2017 9:33 PM, José de Córdoba and Arian Campo-Flores)
Only about 10 commercial flights leaving to the U.S. mainland a day, down from 176 daily flights normally

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico—After Hurricane Maria knocked out radar systems and power, the U.S. territory's main airport is struggling to get thousands of stranded passengers off the island.

Agustín Arellano, chief executive of Aerostar Airport Holdings LLC, which operates the airport, said only about 2,000 passengers are flying out every day despite standby lists that are in the tens of thousands. That is down from an average of 15,000 passengers departing daily prior to Maria.

"Our limitations are airspace, and we are missing radar," he said. "We are trying to get radar and equipment to be able to have communication with Miami."

The airport is relying on 21 generators to supply power to the control tower, tower radar, some terminal lighting, navigation equipment and the equipment necessary to screen baggage. There is no air conditioning, Mr. Arellano said, and only one food-and-beverage concession is operating.

[PR] Trump declares Puerto Rico is in 'deep trouble' as questions mount about his commitment (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(9/25/2017 10:15 PM, John Wagner)
President Trump, facing mounting questions about his commitment to Puerto Rico's recovery, took to Twitter Monday night, saying the U.S. territory is "in deep trouble," in part because of problems that predated Hurricane Maria.

Trump said Puerto Rico was already suffering from "broken infrastructure," including an old electrical grid, which he said was "devastated" by Hurricane Maria, as well as "massive debt."

"Food, water and medical are top priorities — and doing well," Trump said in his series of tweets, which credited the Federal Emergency Management Agency. He noted that, by contrast, Texas and Florida, hit by earlier hurricanes, "are doing great."

Monday night's tweets were the first from Trump about Puerto Rico since Wednesday, when the hurricane made landfall and Trump declared "we are with you."

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT
SITUATION REPORT
25 September 2017, 2:00 PM EDT

Puerto Rico and U.S. Virgin Islands

Overview. On Sunday, 10 Sept 2017, Hurricane Irma slammed into the Eastern Caribbean as a Category 4 storm, devastating many of the tiny islands in its path before barreling into Florida.

Less than two weeks later Hurricane Maria hit many of the same Caribbean islands recently damaged by Hurricane Irma, to include St. Croix, St. Thomas, and the U.S. territory of Puerto Rico. Early morning, on 20 Sept, Maria rammed directly into Puerto Rico as a powerful Category 4 storm with 140 mph winds. It is the strongest storm to hit the island in 80 years.

Situation. At 11:00 AM EDT, Hurricane Maria was located 315 miles south-southeast of Cape Hatteras, NC. Maximum sustained winds were 80 mph. Hurricane-force winds extend outward up to 70 miles from the center and tropical-storm-force winds extend outward up to 230 miles. The Hurricane may track less than 200 miles east of the Outer Banks early Wednesday. Tropical storm force winds may begin impacting eastern North Carolina later today, and eastern Virginia and the Delmarva Tuesday into Wednesday

PRIORITIES FOR HUD

- Protect the health and safety of HUD employees. HUD regional offices are closely monitoring the storm and guidance provided by state and local officials to protect the health and safety of HUD personnel. HUD offices will make decisions on office closures based on local information. Office of Field Policy and Management (FPM) is tracking and reporting office closures.
    - The OFO Disaster team talked to the Puerto Rico Field Office Director this morning. All PIH staff are accounted for. He reports that the HUD office generator is running out of fuel and his staff also do not have fuel to put in their cars to get to the HUD building, he advises potential office shut down in 24 hours. In addition to Fuel, food and water the HUD office also has a need for a Burner Gas Stove with a propane tank and C and D batteries to continue listening to AM news radio.

- Many HUD employees in Puerto Rico are still unaccounted for due to catastrophic destruction of cell phone towers and power grids. HUD managers, supported by HUD OIG personnel, continue to search for the unaccounted HUD employees.

- Assess potential impacts to HUD programs and clients:

Multifamily Housing	Properties	Units	Assisted Units	Properties w/ Moderate or Major Damage	Residents Displaced/ Evacuated	Residents Returned
Virgin Islands	17	1,474	1,468	2	3	0
Puerto Rico	203	21,013	19,859	5	0	0
Total	220	22,487	21,327	7	3	0

Current as of 21 Sept. These numbers are based on all HUD properties; they will be updated as the data is collected

Public and Indian Housing	Number of Housing Authorities in the Impacted (PDD) Area	Total Number of Housing Authority Properties Impacted (PDD) Area
Virgin Islands	2	191
Puerto Rico	19	0
Total	52	405

- Coordination of long-term recovery efforts

Actions Taken

- Work to assist impacted families on the island will remain very challenging given the disruptions in electricity, cellular service, and office structures. The local housing authority, Virgin Islands Housing Authority (VIHA), is working under tents with paper and pencils for residents to complete forms.
- PIH is conducting outreach to all PHAs to track PH and HCV storm impact data, including residents, units and staff. PIH will begin reporting on impacted counties as data comes in.
- The PD&R GIS team updated the Maria map at https://hud.maps.arcgis.com/home/webmap/viewer.html?webmap=def97dad8c34449dbcce9450c0ea2d79
- For disaster recovery TA, SNAPS focuses on persons who were homeless before the disaster, as well as McKinney-funded projects. The TA provider Cloudburst Group is the designated disaster response TA provider for SNAPS, and SNAPS has a pre-approved work plan with Cloudburst for disaster outreach. Whenever a "disaster" occurs (declared or not), SNAPS tasks Cloudburst to reach out to HUD-funded recipients and subrecipients, as well as HMIS organizations, before the situation on the ground gets bad to see what they need. Cloudburst will then reach out again after the disaster to do the same thing. If further support is needed, SNAPS will assign another TA provider to do additional TA activities.
- To support Housing Counselors in the aftermath of Hurricanes Harvey and Irma, the Office of Housing Counseling used Community Compass TA funds to create and update content for a Harvey/Irma resources page (https://www.hudexchange.info/programs/housing-counseling/topics/hurricane-harvey-irma/) on the HUD Exchange, which will be updated as new information becomes available. Housing Counseling also has a Disaster Recovery Toolkit (https://www.hudexchange.info/programs/housing-counseling/topics/) page on the HUD Exchange.

- In addition to the content on the HUD Exchange, the Office of Housing Counseling is approximately 90 days out from debuting the new online Disaster Response and Recovery Toolkit. This toolkit will provide general information on disaster responses for Housing Counseling Agencies. This toolkit is also being funded by Community Compass TA funds.

Next Steps

- Displaced public housing families receiving tenant protection vouchers from VIHA will need to be able to work with housing authority staff for in-person program briefings. Given the current conditions, it may make more sense to relocate these families to shelters in San Juan. The state voucher agency in Puerto Rico is willing to help. Can there be any kind of transportation for this available? Will there be shelter space in PR for the displaced families? PIH staff will continue to discuss this options with Puerto Rico state housing officials and VIHA.

Issues/Challenges

- VIHA has not reached the approximately 1,300 existing voucher families in their program, but will continue their efforts. Given funding restrictions, VIHA cannot use public housing funds to assist existing voucher holders with relocation if these families need to move either on or off the island.
- PIH remains concerned that current families with vouchers will not find suitable private rentals, and will not have a way to leave the island in the near term if they want to use their voucher on the mainland. Also, it would be helpful if private landlords participating in the voucher program could access to funds to repair their rental units.

AVAILABLE HUD DISASTER ASSISTANCE

- Assist the state and local governments in re-allocating existing federal resources toward disaster relief. HUD's Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) and HOME programs give the state and local communities the flexibility to redirect millions of dollars in annual formula funding to address critical needs, including housing and services for disaster victims. HUD is currently contacting State and local officials to explore streamlining the Department's CDBG and HOME programs to expedite the repair and replacement of damaged housing.
- Grant immediate foreclosure relief. HUD has granting a 90-day moratorium on foreclosures and forbearance on foreclosures of Federal Housing Administration (FHA)-insured home mortgages.
- Make mortgage insurance available. HUD's Section 203(h) program provides FHA insurance to disaster victims who have lost their homes and are facing the daunting task of rebuilding or buying another home. Borrowers from participating FHA-approved lenders may be eligible for 100 percent financing.
- Make insurance available for both mortgages and home rehabilitation. HUD's Section 203(k) loan program enables those who have lost their homes to finance the purchase or refinance of a house along with its repair through a single mortgage. It also allows homeowners who have damaged houses to finance the rehabilitation of their existing single-family home.
- Offer Section 108 loan guarantee assistance. HUD will offer state and local governments federally guaranteed loans for housing rehabilitation, economic development and repair of public infrastructure.
- Provide information on housing providers and HUD programs. HUD will share information with FEMA and the state on housing providers that may have available units in the impacted counties. This includes Public Housing Agencies and Multi-Family owners. HUD will also connect FEMA and the state to SMEs to provide information on HUD programs and providers.

Actions Taken

- As of 9/24/17, 401,096 people in Florida are registered with FEMA and received $234,000,000 in housing assistance.
- There are 3 HUD staff deployed across FEMA Joint Field Offices (JFO), American Red Cross Shelters (ARC), Disaster Recovery Centers (DRC), and Temporary Sheltering Assistance (TSA) work-sites in Florida.
- HUD is waiting for FEMA to execute a Mission Assignment (MA) that activates the Department under Emergency Support Function-6 (ESF6). After execution of this MA, HUD will deploy additional staff to the FEMA Joint Field Office (JFO) and other work-sites throughout the Florida.
- 20 disaster shelters are open housing 1,226 people (-447 from last report).
- 4 Disaster Recovery Centers are open in Florida.
- 6,348 households (+707 from last report) are checked into hotels under FEMA's Temporary Sheltering Assistance (TSA) program in Florida. The number of HUD clients in FEMA TSA is not known. However, in the future, FEMA registrant data will be matched to HUD program data to identify HUD clients.
- 2 HUD staff are coordinating the Housing Recovery Support Function (RSF) at the FEMA Joint Field Office (JFO) in Orlando.
- HUD staff are providing information on HUD resources and running to ground questions about HUD properties that may have been impacted by Hurricane Irma. Staff are also beginning to coordinate with FEMA on shelter populations.
- The Housing RSF team met with Federal Disaster Recovery Coordinators (FDRC) in Tallahassee and Orlando to discuss staffing and preliminary deliverable plan.
- To support Housing Counselors in the aftermath of Hurricanes Harvey and Irma, the Office of Housing Counseling used Community Compass TA funds to create and update content for a Harvey/Irma resources page (https://www.hudexchange.info/programs/housing-counseling/topics/hurricane-harvey-irma/) on the HUD Exchange, which will be updated as new information becomes available. Housing Counseling also has a Disaster Recovery Toolkit (https://www.hudexchange.info/programs/housing-counseling/topics/) page on the HUD Exchange.
- In addition to the content on the HUD Exchange, the Office of Housing Counseling is approximately 90 days out from debuting the new online Disaster Response and Recovery

Toolkit. This toolkit will provide general information on disaster responses for Housing Counseling Agencies. This toolkit is also being funded by Community Compass TA funds.
- For disaster recovery TA, SNAPS focuses on persons who were homeless before the disaster, as well as McKinney-funded projects. The TA provider Cloudburst Group is the designated disaster response TA provider for SNAPS, and SNAPS has a pre-approved work plan with Cloudburst for disaster outreach. Whenever a "disaster" occurs (declared or not), SNAPS tasks Cloudburst to reach out to HUD-funded recipients and sub-recipients, as well as HMIS organizations, before the situation on the ground gets bad to see what they need. Cloudburst will then reach out again after the disaster to do the same thing. If further support is needed, SNAPS will assign another TA provider to do additional TA activities.

Next Steps
- FPM regional staff are standing up logistics for larger staff deployments including landing sites where teams can in-bound in Atlanta, Jacksonville and Miami.
- Numerous requests are being received across Florida from FEMA on available HUD resources, potential impacted HUD buildings, and displaced HUD clients. HUD staff in the state are responding and providing information. After HUD JFO team is set up, questions will be routed through that structure.

- Assist the state and local governments in re-allocating existing federal resources toward disaster relief. HUD's Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) and HOME programs give the state and local communities the flexibility to redirect millions of dollars in annual formula funding to address critical needs, including housing and services for disaster victims. HUD is currently contacting State and local officials to explore streamlining the Department's CDBG and HOME programs to expedite the repair and replacement of damaged housing.
- Grant immediate foreclosure relief. HUD has granting a 90-day moratorium on foreclosures and forbearance on foreclosures of Federal Housing Administration (FHA)-insured home mortgages.

The Honorable Benjamin S. Carson
Secretary
U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development
451 7th Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20410

Dear Mr. Secretary:

Congress passed the Federal Records Act of 1950 to provide the framework for records management for federal government agencies. Many emails from federal employees are considered records under the Act and therefore subject to certain recordkeeping requirements. This Committee has legislative jurisdiction over the Federal Records Act, as well as the Presidential Records Act and Freedom of Information Act.[1] As technology has changed and the use of email and other modern forms of electronic communication have become ubiquitous, the Committee has been active in updating portions of these laws. These updates include the Presidential and Federal Records Act Amendments of 2014 and the FOIA Improvement Act of 2016.[2]

As part of our regular oversight duties, the Committee, from time to time, inquires of the Executive Branch departments and agencies about their compliance with these federal laws.[3] With numerous public revelations of senior executive branch employees deliberately trying to circumvent these laws by using personal, private, or alias e-mail addresses to conduct official government business, the Committee has aimed to use its oversight and investigative resources to prevent and deter misuse of private forms of written communication.[4] Based on yesterday's Politico reporting regarding private email use for official government business by a senior member of the President's staff,[5] today we write towards a similar end.

As a follow-up to the Committee's request to your agency on March 8, 2017, please provide the following documents and information by October 9, 2017:

1. Have you or any non-career official at your agency ever used a personal email account to conduct official business? If so, please identify the individual and the account used, and provide evidence of measures to ensure compliance with federal law.

2. Have you or any non-career official at your agency ever used an alias email account to conduct official business? If so, please identify the individual and the account used, and provide evidence of measures to ensure compliance with federal law.

3. Have you or any non-career official at your agency ever used text messages, phone-based message applications, or encryption software to conduct official business? If so, please identify the individual, cellular number and account used, and provide evidence of measures to ensure compliance with federal law.

4. Please identify any changes to the agency's policies or directives for any of the following areas since January 1, 2017:

    a. Policies referring or relating to the use of non-official electronic messaging accounts, including email, text message, messaging applications, and social media platforms to conduct official business, including but not limited to archiving and recordkeeping procedures;

    b. Policies referring or relating to the use of official text message or other messaging or communications applications, and social media platforms to conduct official business, including but not limited to archiving and recordkeeping procedures; and

    c. Policies and procedures to ensure all communications related to the creation or transmission of federal records on official electronic messaging accounts other than email, including social networking platforms, internal agency instant messaging systems and other communications applications, are properly captured and preserved as federal records.

An attachment to this letter provides additional instructions about responding to this request. Thank you in advance for responding fully and in a timely manner. As part of our regular oversight duties, the Committee, from time to time, inquires of the Executive Branch departments and agencies about their compliance with these federal laws.[3] With numerous public revelations of senior executive branch emplo ees deliberatel tr ing to circumvent these laws b using personal, private, or alias e-mail addresses to conduct official government business, the Committee has aimed to use its oversight and investigative resources to prevent and deter misuse of private forms of written communication.[4] Based on esterda 's Poli ico reporting regarding private email use for official government business b a senior member of the President's staff,[5] toda we write towards a similar end.

The Honorable Benjamin S. Carson
Secretary
U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development
451 7th Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20410

Dear Mr. Secretary:

Congress passed the Federal Records Act of 1950 to provide the framework for records management for federal government agencies. Many emails from federal employees are considered records under the Act and therefore subject to certain recordkeeping requirements. This Committee has legislative jurisdiction over the Federal Records Act, as well as the Presidential Records Act and Freedom of Information Act.[1] As technology has changed and the use of email and other modern forms of electronic communication have become ubiquitous, the Committee has been active in updating portions of these laws. These updates include the Presidential and Federal Records Act Amendments of 2014 and the FOIA Improvement Act of 2016.[2]

As part of our regular oversight duties, the Committee, from time to time, inquires of the Executive Branch departments and agencies about their compliance with these federal laws.[3] With numerous public revelations of senior executive branch employees deliberately trying to circumvent these laws by using personal, private, or alias e-mail addresses to conduct official government business, the Committee has aimed to use its oversight and investigative resources to prevent and deter misuse of private forms of written communication.[4] Based on yesterday's Politico reporting regarding private email use for official government business by a senior member of the President's staff,[5] today we write towards a similar end.

3. Have you or any non-career official at your agency ever used text messages, phone-based message applications, or encryption software to conduct official business? If so, please identify the individual, cellular number and account used, and provide evidence of measures to ensure compliance with federal law.

4. Please identify any changes to the agency's policies or directives for any of the following areas since January 1, 2017:

    b. Policies referring or relating to the use of official text message or other messaging or communications applications, and social media platforms to conduct official business, including but not limited to archiving and recordkeeping procedures; and

    c. Policies and procedures to ensure all communications related to the creation or transmission of federal records on official electronic messaging accounts other than email, including social networking platforms, internal agency instant messaging systems and other communications applications, are properly captured and preserved as federal records.

INTERGOVERNMENTAL SERVICE AGREEMENT

INTERGOVERNMENTAL SERVICE AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE
UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY
FEDERAL EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT AGENCY
AND
THE STATE OF TEXAS GENERAL LAND OFFICE

I. Parties:

The parties to this Intergovernmental Service Agreement ("Agreement") are the Department of Homeland Security Federal Emergency Management Agency ("FEMA") and the State of Texas General Land Office ("State").

II. Authority:

This Agreement is authorized by:

A. Homeland Security Act of 2002, Pub. L. No. 107-296 (2002) (codified as amended at 6 U.S.C. § 101 et seq.)

B. Sections 306 and 408 of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, Pub. L. No. 93-288 (1974) (codified as amended at 42 U.S.C. §§ 5149 and 5174) ("Stafford Act")

C. Department of Homeland Security Delegation of Authority No. 9001.1, Delegation to the Administrator of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (Dec. 10, 2010)

D. Title 44 of the U.S. Code of Federal Regulations, Chapter I, Part 206.

E. Texas Disaster Act of 1975 (Tex. Gov't Code § 418)

F. Federal Grant and Cooperative Agreement Act, 31 U.S.C. § 6301 et seq.

III. Background:

On August 25, 2017, the President declared major disaster DR-4332 for the State pursuant to his authority under the Stafford Act. (82 FR 42691 (Sept. 11, 2017.) This declaration authorized FEMA to provide financial assistance and direct services, under Section 408 of the Stafford Act, to individuals and households "who, as a direct result of a major disaster, have necessary expenses and serious needs in which the individuals and households are unable to meet such expenses, or needs through other means," such as insurance. FEMA may provide direct temporary housing when there are a lack of available housing resources. In addition, FEMA may authorize Permanent Housing Construction (PHC) in the form of direct or financial assistance when there are no alternate housing resources available and temporary housing assistance is not available, is infeasible, or not cost effective.

FEMA determined that due to the significant damage caused by Hurricane Harvey in the State, the exigent need for housing requires the provision of direct housing assistance to eligible survivors under Section 408. FEMA is in need of support to execute the direct housing mission for DR-4332, and the State has expressed a desire and the capability to provide the needed support.

IV. Purpose:

A. The purpose of this Agreement is to establish an agreement between FEMA and the State for the provision of direct housing assistance, under section 408 of the Stafford Act, to individuals and households who are displaced from their pre-disaster residences, or whose pre-disaster primary residences are rendered uninhabitable as a result of damage caused by Hurricane Harvey, and who are unable to meet the expenses associated with procuring housing by other means.

B. This Agreement sets forth the responsibilities of FEMA and the State and states the services that the State shall perform satisfactorily in order to receive payment from FEMA.

V. Services and Period of Performance:

A. The State shall provide assistance to FEMA in the delivery of direct temporary housing, and direct permanent housing construction assistance to Hurricane Harvey survivors residing within the areas declared by DR-4332. See Attachment 1, Program Implementation and Conditions.

B. Performance Period: The period of performance shall be for 18 months from the date of the disaster declaration (August 25, 2017). FEMA may, at the State's request, extend the period of performance if FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery determines that due to extraordinary circumstances an extension would be in the public interest.

C. Procurement Standards: The State will generally comply with the procurement standards detailed in 2 CFR 200.317-326 in conjunction with state emergency procurement law.

D. Similar Agreements: To the extent a similar agreement is executed between FEMA and another state for the provision of direct temporary housing and direct permanent housing construction assistance with terms and conditions that are more favorable than those offered to the State of Texas General Land Office, the more favorable terms and conditions will immediately apply to this Agreement upon approval by the State of Texas General Land Office.

VI. Issuance of Orders

A. For the purpose of this Agreement, the FEMA Contracting Officer may issue orders on either a firm-fixed-price basis, or a total not-to-exceed basis (time and materials) or a combination of both. Terms and conditions applicable to any order shall be as described in this Agreement.

B. The intent is to allow the State, and its local partners, to begin work on discrete projects as the specific need and capacity are identified, defined, and established. The State, within the general scope of this Agreement, may propose projects based on program service line item(s), political subdivision(s), or any combination thereof.

C. FEMA will obtain written technical and cost program proposals from the State. The proposal generally shall include the following, as appropriate to the task:

1. Task to be performed;
2. Scope of task;
3. Time for completion or target date;
4. A detailed cost estimate;
5. Other pertinent information, such as technical/management approach;
6. QA/QR [Quality Assurance/Quality Review] plan;
7. Total firm-fixed-price or ceiling price (for Time and Material); and
8. Any other requirements specific or unique to the project.

D. FEMA will evaluate the State's proposals, and negotiate and memorialize appropriate cost and quality control mechanisms in a timely manner, as necessary.

E. Only upon receipt of an executed order, signed by the Contracting Officer, shall the State commence work. All orders are subject to the terms and conditions of this contract. In the event of conflict between an order and the Agreement, the Agreement shall control.

F. The State shall notify the Contracting Officer within 24 hours if any significant difficulties with regard to performance according to the terms of the order are anticipated or any time significant difficulties in performance arise.

G. If at any time during the performance of a time and materials order it appears that additional funds will be required to complete performance, the State shall promptly notify the Contracting Officer in writing. Such notification shall include the costs expended, an estimate of costs required to complete the order, and an explanation of why the originally negotiated estimated costs were not adequate. The Government shall have the right to require the State to continue performance up to the originally estimated cost level and to suspend work thereafter, negotiate a new set of work priorities to be completed within the remaining funds, to modify the order, increasing the estimated cost to the level appropriate for completion of the work, or to modify the order to reduce the total to coincide with actual work accomplished.

VII. Rates and Ceiling:

A. FEMA agrees to pay the State for documented, reasonable, and allowable, and allocable costs related to assistance provided to applicants, in accordance with the terms of Attachment 1, Federal law, and FEMA regulation and policy.

B. 2 CFR Part 200. The State, by execution of this Agreement, certifies that the pricing established under this Agreement is in compliance the Cost Principles in 2 CFR Part 200, Subpart E, and includes only allowable costs of performance under this Agreement.

C. The State shall not exceed the total ceiling price in services for FEMA without written modification by a FEMA Contracting Officer, such written modification to be provided in a timely manner. Any such modification shall be reviewed by FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery prior to approval.

If at any time the State has reason to believe that the payments and material costs that will accrue in performing this Agreement in the next succeeding 30 days, if added to all other payments and costs previously accrued, will exceed 80 percent of the ceiling price in the Schedule, the State shall notify the Contracting Officer giving a revised estimate of the total price to FEMA for performing this contract with supporting reasons and documentation.

D. FEMA is not obligated to pay the State any amount in excess of the ceiling price, and the State shall not be obligated to continue performance if to do so would exceed the ceiling price set forth in the Schedule, unless and until the Contracting Officer notifies the State in writing that FEMA has approved the increase in the ceiling price and specifies in the notice a revised ceiling approved by FEMA.

E. If at any time during the performance of this contract, the State has reason to believe that the total price to FEMA for performing this contract will be substantially greater or less than the stated ceiling price, the State shall so notify the Contracting Officer, giving a revised estimate of the total price for performing this contract, with supporting reasons and documentation. FEMA generally will not approve a total price that exceeds the stated ceiling price.

FEMA may approve such an excess only if the supporting reasons and documentation provided by the State demonstrate extraordinary circumstances.

F. If at any time during performance of this contract, FEMA has reason to believe that the work to be required in performing this contract will be substantially greater or less than the stated ceiling price, the Contracting Officer will so advise the State, given the then revised estimate of the total amount of effort to be required under the contract.

VIII. Program Service Cost Controls

A. Each program assistance service line item has a per applicant household cap established.

B. The program service cost-control methods will be applied, as detailed in Attachment 1.

C. Only the Contracting Officer may approve exceptions to the program service cost caps which exceed the amounts or justifications described in Attachment 1.

IX. Administrative Costs

A. State administrative costs for the direct housing program will be calculated and managed for purposes of this agreement in an analogous manner to the current PA model delineated in 44 CFR 207.7(b) and (c).

B. Administrative Costs means any direct and indirect costs, administrative expenses, and any other expenses not directly chargeable to a specific project that are reasonably incurred by the State and municipalities in administering and managing this mission. Indirect costs means costs that are incurred by the State and municipalities for a common or joint purpose benefiting more than one cost objective that are not readily assignable to the cost objectives specifically benefited.

C. Administrative costs are not intended to cover direct costs of managing specific projects because these costs generally are eligible as part of the cost accounting for each project.

D. Administrative costs will be actual costs, capped at 6% of the final program costs.

E. The State must submit an administrative plan and include procedures for sub-recipient administrative costs amount or percentage determination, pass through, closeout, and audit. The State will submit this initial administrative cost funding request/invoice before any administrative fees for the direct housing program can be disbursed.

F. An initial 25% of the State's total projected administrative cost amount will be disbursed upon the submission and approval of the plan with additional funds obligated and released as program requirements stabilize. The State may submit a funding request for additional administrative costs, upon a showing of need and a revised administration plan. FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery may approve or deny such request at his discretion.

G. Final administrative costs accounting will be verified upon agreement closeout, and based on actuals, not initial projection amounts. Any surplus is subject to reimbursement to FEMA.

X. Program Funding

A. FEMA will obligate funds to the State upon approval and issuance of project orders under Section VI. This money will be drawn down upon via the invoicing procedures contained herein.

B. Approved proper invoices will draw down against obligated projects on a reimbursable basis.

C. If the State requires additional funding to ensure compliance with the Prompt Payment Act requirements, Tex. Govt. Code 2251, are being met, it shall submit a written request to the Contracting Officer detailing the need and proposed solution.

XI. Invoicing and Payment:

A. Subject to the availability of funds from the Disaster Relief Fund (DRF), FEMA will provide funding to the State in accordance with this Agreement.

B. The State shall submit a project management plan package to include performance schedule and cost estimates for work to be performed under each program, as outlined in Attachment 1. The package will be reviewed by FEMA for acceptance. Upon determination of acceptance, a proper invoice for the amount accepted by FEMA will be submitted by the State for payment. The original invoice payment request shall be submitted via email as provided in the attached invoice instructions below. The FEMA Point of Contact for payment issues is Dennis C. Clements.

C. Each invoice submitted shall contain the following information:

1. The date of invoice submission;
2. Invoice date and number;
3. Agreement number;
4. Detail of the Services provided and work completed;
5. Breakdown of the political subdivisions at which services were provided;

7. Itemized listing of all other charges;
8. Supporting documentation;
9. Name, title, and phone number of person to notify in event of defective invoice;
10. Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN).

D. Attachments 3 and 4 are the approved and required Invoice templates for use by the State in submitting for payment.

E. FEMA shall review the invoice and make payment on a proper invoice within 10 business days of receipt.

F. For any improper or questioned invoice, FEMA will review and deny or resubmit with 14 business days.

Replacement services requested, due to fault or negligence of performance, in excess of the associated cap or cost-control method will be ineligible for reimbursement.

F. If this Agreement is terminated, within 4 months of the notice of termination, the State must submit a final invoice for services provided and administrative costs incurred up until the date of termination. The Federal Government shall not be liable to the State for damages incurred for early termination.

    e. The State will identify, assess, make final selection, and begin the process to contract with eligible MLR properties within 60 days of execution of IGSA, unless extended by FEMA.
    f. The State will ensure any applicant placed into an MLR unit will be provided temporary housing within 120 days of FEMA approval of the final housing solution for each applicant.
    g. On commercial park locations or private sites, upon approval of the EHP review by FEMA, the State within 15 days of receipt will place and make ready for occupancy the RV or MHU. The State will then have 5 days to license the applicant into the unit.
    h. The State will ensure any applicant provided with Permanent Housing Construction in the form of repairs will have all repairs complete within 90 days from start of repair work for each applicant.
    i. The State will begin to conduct continued assistance verifications within 30 days of providing the applicant with temporary housing for submission to FEMA.
    j. The State will begin to coordinate with FEMA on the end of program or potential need for an extension of the program within 90 days of February 25, 2019.

Duplication of Benefits

1. A duplication of benefit (DOB) may occur when an insured direct temporary housing occupant receives Additional Living Expense (ALE) or Loss of Use (LOU) insurance benefits that cover the cost of renting alternative housing. When FEMA identifies a DOB with ALE or LOU while making an eligibility determination, FEMA will initiate steps to collect the ALE or LOU benefits for housing costs. FEMA will base the amount of the monthly payment on the ALE or LOU amount not to exceed the Fair Market Rent (FMR) rate established by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the size (number of bedrooms) and location of the housing unit. FEMA will only collect payments until the total amount of the ALE or LOU insurance has been exhausted or the occupant vacates the direct THU, whichever is first. The State will inform FEMA when an applicant with ALE is placed in and vacates a direct temporary housing assistance option.

2. PHC represents a DOB with financial housing assistance: Applicants determined eligible for PHC who choose to receive PHC must provide documentation of the use of any previously provided FEMA financial housing assistance for Repair, and return all unused, previously provided financial housing assistance for Repair or Replacement to FEMA.

3. Right of Recoupment: The State agrees that FEMA may seek reimbursement for any identified DOB, including through the reduction of future disaster relief awards to applicants, the State, or other parties to this agreement.

Compliance with Environmental and Historic Preservation Laws and Executive Orders

1. FEMA will provide the State a matrix of Environmental and Historic Preservation Compliance requirements, including the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), the National Historic Preservation Act, and Executive Order 11988 Floodplain Management (44 CFR Part 9) to help inform the choice of best housing option for the applicant's location.

2. FEMA is responsible for compliance with a number of environmental and historic preservation laws. These responsibilities cannot be delegated to the State. FEMA will work with the State to gather the necessary information to ensure compliance.

Direct Temporary Housing Terms and Conditions

Eligibility Conditions

1. All eligibility determinations by FEMA for Direct Temporary Housing Assistance and continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance will be made by FEMA in accordance with the Stafford Act, and implementing regulations, and IHPUG.

Continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance Conditions

1. The State will monitor the progress that Direct Temporary Housing occupants are making towards obtaining and occupying permanent housing within the 18 month period of assistance, based on the conditions outlined by FEMA's regulations at 44 C.F.R § 206.117(b)(1)(ii)(G).

2. The State will provide FEMA with a recommendation for continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance to individuals and households based on these conditions until February 25, 2019.

3. FEMA will make the final determination on an applicant's eligibility for continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance based on the State's recommendation.

Termination of Direct Temporary Housing Assistance Conditions

1. The State may recommend to FEMA to terminate an occupant's Direct Temporary Housing Assistance for any reason not prohibited by the Stafford Act, FEMA's regulations at 44 C.F.R § 206.117(b)(1)(ii)(G), or IHPUG.

2. FEMA must approve all terminations and appeal decisions in a timely manner before the applicant is notified.

3. The State shall utilize FEMA templates to notify the applicant of the termination and provide FEMA with copies of all termination notices, appeals, and appeal decisions within seven days of the date issued to ensure FEMA is able to record these documents in NEMIS.

Direct Lease Conditions

1. The State may lease to Eligible Applicants, existing residential property, not typically available to the general public, for use as temporary housing for eligible individuals and households.

2. The State may lease properties that comply with Housing Quality Standards (HQS) established by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), to provide complete and independent living facilities for one or more persons, including permanent provisions for living, sleeping, cooking, and sanitation. All utilities, appliances, and other furnishings must be functional.

3. The State shall evaluate properties according to the following factors:
    a. Cost to the federal government: The State shall lease properties with per-unit rent at or below the Fair Market Rent (FMR) established by HUD. If the State is unable to obtain sufficient rental resources, the State shall conduct an analysis of prevailing market rates and may increase leases to properties with per-unit rent of up to 125% of FMR. Properties with per-unit rent above 125% of the Fair Market Rate established by HUD must be approved by FEMA;

b. Landlord's demonstrated ability to manage and provide maintenance services;
c. Proximity to community and wrap-around services, such as accessible public transportation, schools, fire and emergency services, grocery stores, health care services, etc.;
d. When selecting available properties, the State may prioritize properties that are already accessible, include accessibility features, or can be easily made accessible; and are in proximity to accessible public transportation.

4. The estimated monthly cost per unit is up to $1,300 unless approved by FEMA.
    a. The State can also provide one month's cost for a security deposit for each unit.

5. Within 7 business days of completion, the State must provide FEMA the following documentation:
    a. A copy of the inspection record confirming the property complies with HQS;
    b. A copy of the lease contract specifying the monthly rent rates.
    c. A copy of the lease agreement signed between the applicant and the property and the applicant and the State, for each applicant.

Multi-Family Lease and Repair (MLR) Conditions

1. The State may enter into lease agreements with owners of multi-family rental properties located in Individual Assistance designated counties to house Eligible Applicants and make repairs or improvements to existing multi-family housing units in order to provide temporary housing to Eligible Applicants.

2. Per the Stafford Act, under the terms of any lease agreement for property entered into under MLR, the value of the improvements or repairs shall be deducted from the value of the lease agreement and may not exceed the value of the lease. To determine the cost-effectiveness of the potential MLR property, the State will deduct the estimated cost of repairs and improvements from the value of the lease as follows:
    a. The State will determine the estimated cost of repairs or improvements by performing an independent cost estimate for the necessary repairs and improvements, or receive an estimated cost for repairs and improvements from the building contractor.
    b. The State will determine the value of the lease agreement by multiplying the monthly FMR by the number of units, and then multiplying the number of months remaining between the date the repairs are completed and the end of the 18 month period of assistance, which is February 25, 2019.
    c. The estimated total cost per unit is up to $21,000 unless approved by FEMA.

i. This includes a minimal monthly maintenance cost per unit for the operation of the property.
ii. The State can also provide one month's cost for a security deposit for each unit.
iii. FEMA may approve an increase to the cap up to 25% for access and functional needs-related costs.

3. Properties located within a floodway, coastal high-hazard area, or Coastal Barrier Resource Unit are not eligible for this program.

4. Prior to leasing a property, the State shall provide for each property an initial inspection report to include:
    a. Location, physical address and latitude and longitude;
    b. Date of construction, and
    c. An exterior photo.

5. The State shall provide the following documentation to FEMA within 7 days of leasing a property for temporary housing:
    a. Completed property inspection report;
    b. Itemized repair cost estimate;
    c. The state or local government's valuation of the lease, including methodology used;
    d. Copy of the tenant lease and application requirements; and
    e. A copy of the executed lease agreement and repair contracts, specifying the expenditures for repairs, rent, property management, and maintenance.

6. Within 14 days of completion, the State must provide FEMA the following documentation:
    a. Paid invoices documenting the expenses incurred for repairs and improvements;
    b. A copy of the occupancy certificate issued by the local government; and
    c. A copy of the lease agreement signed between the applicant and the property and the applicant and the State, for each applicant.

7. All repairs shall be made in a manner consistent with current local building codes, standards, permitting, inspection requirements, and all applicable environmental planning and historic preservation (EHP) laws and regulations. Items will be repaired when feasible, but may be replaced when cost-effective to the government or when necessary to ensure the health and safety of the occupant. The State will be responsible for obtaining local permits, but can delegate this responsibility.

RV Conditions (currently only approved for DR-4332-TX)

1. The State may provide and place RVs certified to comply with the Recreation Vehicle Industry Association (RVIA) standards established on July 1, 2012.

2. The State will notify disaster survivors with access and functional needs who request a RV that a reasonable modification may be available upon request. If survivors are unable to occupy an RV due to access and functional needs:
    a. The State, with approval from FEMA, may make other forms of direct temporary housing assistance available, which meets the survivor's access and functional needs, including Uniform Federal Accessibility Standards (UFAS)-compliant MHUs if needed.
    b. Should the State require UFAS-compliant MHUs, FEMA will provide them on behalf of the State.

3. Any RVs the State procures must meet current California Air Resource Board (CARB) standards or are certified compliant with the Toxic Substances Control Act (TSCA) Title VI requirements for formaldehyde emissions from composite wood products found in RVs.[1]

4. The estimated cost per unit is up to $55,000 unless approved by FEMA. This cost includes procurement, hauling and installing the unit, and any maintenance and deactivation costs.

5. The State shall provide, on a weekly basis, the following documentation for RVs procured for use as temporary housing:
    a. A copy of Purchase Order and Bill of Sale.

6. The State shall be responsible for disposing of RVs provided under this IGSA in accordance with Section 408(d)(2) of the Stafford Act. The State must provide documentation of the method of disposal for all units. The State shall return the proceeds from any sale of the units to FEMA.

MHU Conditions

1. The State may procure, haul, and install MHUs as a form of Direct Temporary Housing Assistance.

[1] On December 12, 2016, the EPA issued a final rule mirroring the CARB standards as required by the Formaldehyde Standards for Composite Wood Products Act, Pub. L. 111-199 (2010), 15 U.S.C. § 2601 note. The rule will take effect in December 2017; however regulated entities may voluntarily label compliant products as soon as compliance can be achieved. See 40 CFR Part 770.

2. The number of bedrooms in the MHU must accommodate the applicant's household composition, as recorded during the FEMA inspection.

3. Units must comply with 24 C.F.R. Part 3280 Manufactured Home Construction and Safety Standards ("HUD code").

4. The estimated cost per unit is up to $92,000 unless approved by FEMA.
    a. This cost includes procurement, hauling and installing the unit, and any maintenance and deactivation costs.
    b. FEMA may approve an increase to the cap up to 25% for access and functional needs-related costs.

5. Any UFAS MHU provided for an Eligible Applicant with a disability or other access and functional needs will be provided by FEMA, and must be installed with a functioning Tank and Pump System prior to occupancy.

6. Any FEMA-sourced MHU provided for an eligible applicant must be installed with a functioning Tank and Pump System prior to occupancy except where to do so would cause a delay in allowing the applicant to take occupancy, in which case the Tank and Pump System shall be installed at the earliest possible date after occupancy. This requirement for the installation of a Tank and Pump System does not apply to any state-sourced MHU provided to an Eligible Applicant.

7. The State shall provide FEMA, on a weekly basis, the following documentation for MHUs procured for use as temporary housing:
    a. A copy of Purchase Order and Bill of Sale.

8. The State shall be responsible for disposing of MHUs provided under this IGSA in accordance with Section 408(d)(2) of the Stafford Act. The State must provide documentation of the method of disposal for all units. The State shall return the proceeds from any sale of the units to FEMA.

RV and MHU Site Conditions

1. The State may provide RVs and MHUs to eligible applicants and place them on private and commercial sites.
    a. The estimated monthly cost per pad lease is up to $600 unless approved by FEMA.

2. Placement of RVs and MHUs as post-disaster temporary housing in a SFHA/1-percent annual chance year floodplain must comply with 44 C.F.R. Part 9 and FEMA Directive/Instruction 108-1, Environmental Planning and Historic Preservation Responsibilities and Program Requirements, and the abbreviated decision-making process under 44 C.F.R. §9.13 when considering the placement of RVs and MHUs on private and commercial sites in a floodplain.

a. Pursuant to 44 CFR §9.13 (d)(2), no MHUs or other readily-fabricated dwellings can be placed within a floodway, coastal high-hazard area, even under the abbreviated decision-making process. No MHUs or other readily-fabricated dwellings can be placed within a Coastal Barrier Resource Unit.
b. In accordance with 44 C.F.R. §9.13(d)(4)(i), MHUs placed on a private or commercial site in a SFHA must be elevated to the fullest extent practicable up to the Base Flood Elevation (BFE) and adequately anchored.
    i. The State shall evaluate RV and MHU placement sites individually, and make a determination regarding a site's suitability for RV or MHU placement based on the best available flood hazard information for that site.
c. RVs will not be placed in the regulatory Floodway or Coastal High Hazard Areas.
d. RVs will only be placed in the SFHA if no other housing options are available. In order to reduce the risk of loss of life of the occupants, RVs may be placed in the SFHA only where base flood depths are sufficiently shallow to allow for timely and safe evacuation from the RV on foot. RVs placed in the SFHA will be adequately anchored.
e. Prior to placement, the State shall provide for each RV and MHU a completed Request for Site Inspection Report (FEMA form 010-0-9), to include, latitude and longitude of the proposed location.
f. Placement of MHUs or other readily fabricated dwellings must be in accordance and compliance with Texas Manufactured Housing Division regulations.
g. Repairs to commercial sites shall be limited to reasonable and cost-effective repairs or improvements necessary to make the site functional (such as an electrical service upgrade), including those necessary to meet reasonable accommodations for people with disabilities.
    i. The estimated cost per pad improvement is up to $7,500 unless approved by FEMA.

3. Prior to building a MHU Group Site, the State must request and receive approval from FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery.
    a. The development of a MHU Group Site(s) is authorized only when the placement of MHUs on private sites are not feasible or if the use of existing commercial sites are not feasible for the eligible applicant.
    b. The State will prioritize sites provided by the State and local government at no cost before leasing a site from a private party.
    c. When considering the placement of MHU at potential group sites, the State must coordinate with the Environmental Planning and Historic Preservation Program.

d. FEMA, including Environmental Planning and Historic Preservation, approval must be obtained prior to any site lease and site construction activity.
e. The estimated cost per pad is up to $50,000 unless approved by FEMA.

Permanent Housing Construction Repairs: Terms and Conditions

Eligibility Conditions

1. Applicants may be eligible for PHC assistance after a FEMA determination that all other forms of temporary housing are not available, feasible, or cost effective.

2. PHC assistance shall only include repairs (PHC-Repairs) not PHC-Replacement. Reference "Attachment 2: Detailed Eligible Permanent Housing Construction-Repairs," for eligible repair items.

3. At the State's recommendation, FEMA may approve PHC Repair for eligible applicants whose homes are feasible to repair when:
    a. The repairs are estimated to be completed within 90 days or less from the start of the repair work;
    b. The damages are less than fifty percent of the market value prior to the disaster; and
    c. The estimated labor and materials costs are up to $60,000 unless approved by FEMA. FEMA generally will not approve a total price that exceeds this amount.
        i. FEMA may approve an increase to the cap up to 25% for access and functional needs-related costs.

4. PHC-Repair is not eligible when the State identifies:
    a. The home requires repairs to structural elements (e.g. foundation, frame) or other items requiring architectural or engineering services;
    b. The home requiring repairs with estimated costs that exceed fifty percent of the market value of the structure before the damage occurred; or
    c. The home is determined to be "repetitive loss or severe repetitive loss", as identified by the National Flood Insurance Program, and the cost to be brought into compliance with the local floodplain exceeds the maximum allowable costs for PHC-Repair.

5. Any home located within a SFHA shall not be considered for PHC repairs unless in accordance with applicable federal, and local laws, regulations, and ordinances, and can be repaired within the PHC cost limits.

6. Applicants determined eligible by FEMA for PHC may choose either to:
    a. Receive PHC, provide documentation of the use of any previously provided financial housing assistance for Repair, and return all unused, previously provided financial housing assistance for Repair or Replacement to FEMA; OR

b. Receive Direct Temporary Housing Assistance, if available, and keep any financial housing assistance for Repair or Replacement that FEMA previously provided.

7. In order to be referred to the State for PHC, eligible applicants who choose to receive PHC assistance must sign an acknowledgement of the following terms and conditions:
    a. The applicant agrees to participate in the State program, including right of entry;
    b. The applicant agrees to obtain and maintain flood insurance coverage on the home for at least the value of the repairs provided the home is located in an SFHA. FEMA will not contribute to the cost of flood insurance premiums; and
    c. An applicant's decision to accept or decline PHC shall be considered final; FEMA will not re-consider an applicant for Direct Temporary Housing Assistance or PHC after they have declined either form of assistance. Applicants who accept PHC will not be considered for any additional FEMA Housing Assistance, including financial Temporary Housing Assistance.

8. The State and FEMA agree that applicants for PHC-Repair should not include those applicants whose properties may eventually be eligible for elevation or a buy-out. The State and FEMA will work together to ensure applicants eligible for PHC-Repair are reviewed for potential future mitigation, elevation, or home buy-out programs and, to the maximum extent possible, minimize PHC-Repair approval for those applicants.

9. The State and FEMA's responsibility to provide Direct Housing Assistance to the applicant ends once the completed PHC-Repairs are accepted by the applicant.

PHC Repair Conditions

1. Under PHC, the State will not repair or replace items eligible under Other Needs Assistance for Personal Property, such as furnishings and appliances.

2. The State will need to ensure that there is no duplication of benefits between emergency work provided under the Sheltering and Temporary Essential Power (STEP) program and PHC-Repair assistance, and report to FEMA on the mechanism for doing so within thirty (30) days of initiating the PHC-Repair program. FEMA will only reimburse for specific line items repairs for a property under PHC or STEP, not under both options.

3. PHC-Repairs are limited to real property components eligible under FEMA Housing Assistance that were damaged by the disaster and functional before the declared event. The State shall only perform repairs necessary to restore the pre-disaster residence to a habitable condition. The completed repairs shall ensure the pre-disaster residence is restored to a safe, sanitary, and functional condition.

4. All repairs shall be made in a manner consistent with current local building codes, standards, or minimal acceptable construction industry standards by the area, permitting, inspection requirements, and all applicable environmental planning and historic preservation (EHP) laws and regulations. Items will be repaired when feasible, but may be replaced when cost-effective to the government or when necessary to ensure the health and safety of the occupant. The State will be responsible for obtaining local permits, but can delegate this authority.

5. Prior to repairing a property, the State shall provide for each property an initial inspection report to include:
    a. Location, physical address and latitude and longitude;
    b. Date of construction, and
    c. An exterior photo.

6. Repairs shall be made using materials of average quality used in new construction, in accordance with 44 C.F.R. § 206.117(b)(4)(iii), and taking into account the accessibility needs of the occupant.

7. Repairs to accessibility features and accessible routes will be guided by the Americans with Disabilities Act Accessibility Guidelines (ADAAG) and HUD Design Details for Accessible Disaster Relief Housing.

8. The State shall provide to FEMA the following documentation within 7 business days of completing PHC Repairs for an applicant:
    a. Completed property inspection report;
    b. Itemized repair cost estimate;
    c. Executed repair contract or work order, including itemized list of repairs performed;
    d. A copy of the occupancy certificate issued by the local government.

INTERGOVERNMENTAL SERVICE AGREEMENT

INTERGOVERNMENTAL SERVICE AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE
UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY
FEDERAL EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT AGENCY
AND
THE STATE OF TEXAS GENERAL LAND OFFICE

I. Parties:

The parties to this Intergovernmental Service Agreement ("Agreement") are the Department of Homeland Security Federal Emergency Management Agency ("FEMA") and the State of Texas General Land Office ("State").

II. Authority:

This Agreement is authorized by:

A. Homeland Security Act of 2002, Pub. L. No. 107-296 (2002) (codified as amended at 6 U.S.C. § 101 et seq.)

B. Sections 306 and 408 of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, Pub. L. No. 93-288 (1974) (codified as amended at 42 U.S.C. §§ 5149 and 5174) ("Stafford Act")

C. Department of Homeland Security Delegation of Authority No. 9001.1, Delegation to the Administrator of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (Dec. 10, 2010)

D. Title 44 of the U.S. Code of Federal Regulations, Chapter I, Part 206.

E. Texas Disaster Act of 1975 (Tex. Gov't Code § 418)

F. Federal Grant and Cooperative Agreement Act, 31 U.S.C. § 6301 et seq.

III. Background:

On August 25, 2017, the President declared major disaster DR-4332 for the State pursuant to his authority under the Stafford Act. (82 FR 42691 (Sept. 11, 2017.) This declaration authorized FEMA to provide financial assistance and direct services, under Section 408 of the Stafford Act, to individuals and households "who, as a direct result of a major disaster, have necessary expenses and serious needs in which the individuals and households are unable to meet such expenses, or needs through other means," such as insurance. FEMA may provide direct temporary housing when there are a lack of available housing resources. In addition, FEMA may authorize Permanent Housing Construction (PHC) in the form of direct or financial assistance when there are no alternate housing resources available and temporary housing assistance is not available, is infeasible, or not cost effective.

FEMA determined that due to the significant damage caused by Hurricane Harvey in the State, the exigent need for housing requires the provision of direct housing assistance to eligible survivors under Section 408. FEMA is in need of support to execute the direct housing mission for DR-4332, and the State has expressed a desire and the capability to provide the needed support.

IV. Purpose:

A. The purpose of this Agreement is to establish an agreement between FEMA and the State for the provision of direct housing assistance, under section 408 of the Stafford Act, to individuals and households who are displaced from their pre-disaster residences, or whose pre-disaster primary residences are rendered uninhabitable as a result of damage caused by Hurricane Harvey, and who are unable to meet the expenses associated with procuring housing by other means.

B. This Agreement sets forth the responsibilities of FEMA and the State and states the services that the State shall perform satisfactorily in order to receive payment from FEMA.

V. Services and Period of Performance:

A. The State shall provide assistance to FEMA in the delivery of direct temporary housing, and direct permanent housing construction assistance to Hurricane Harvey survivors residing within the areas declared by DR-4332. See Attachment 1, Program Implementation and Conditions.

B. Performance Period: The period of performance shall be for 18 months from the date of the disaster declaration (August 25, 2017). FEMA may, at the State's request, extend the period of performance if FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery determines that due to extraordinary circumstances an extension would be in the public interest.

C. Procurement Standards: The State will generally comply with the procurement standards detailed in 2 CFR 200.317-326 in conjunction with state emergency procurement law.

D. Similar Agreements: To the extent a similar agreement is executed between FEMA and another state for the provision of direct temporary housing and direct permanent housing construction assistance with terms and conditions that are more favorable than those offered to the State of Texas General Land Office, the more favorable terms and conditions will immediately apply to this Agreement upon approval by the State of Texas General Land Office.

VI. Issuance of Orders

A. For the purpose of this Agreement, the FEMA Contracting Officer may issue orders on either a firm-fixed-price basis, or a total not-to-exceed basis (time and materials) or a combination of both. Terms and conditions applicable to any order shall be as described in this Agreement.

B. The intent is to allow the State, and its local partners, to begin work on discrete projects as the specific need and capacity are identified, defined, and established. The State, within the general scope of this Agreement, may propose projects based on program service line item(s), political subdivision(s), or any combination thereof.

C. FEMA will obtain written technical and cost program proposals from the State. The proposal generally shall include the following, as appropriate to the task:

1. Task to be performed;
2. Scope of task;
3. Time for completion or target date;
4. A detailed cost estimate;
5. Other pertinent information, such as technical/management approach;
6. QA/QR [Quality Assurance/Quality Review] plan;
7. Total firm-fixed-price or ceiling price (for Time and Material); and
8. Any other requirements specific or unique to the project.

D. FEMA will evaluate the State's proposals, and negotiate and memorialize appropriate cost and quality control mechanisms in a timely manner, as necessary.

E. Only upon receipt of an executed order, signed by the Contracting Officer, shall the State commence work. All orders are subject to the terms and conditions of this contract. In the event of conflict between an order and the Agreement, the Agreement shall control.

F. The State shall notify the Contracting Officer within 24 hours if any significant difficulties with regard to performance according to the terms of the order are anticipated or any time significant difficulties in performance arise.

G. If at any time during the performance of a time and materials order it appears that additional funds will be required to complete performance, the State shall promptly notify the Contracting Officer in writing. Such notification shall include the costs expended, an estimate of costs required to complete the order, and an explanation of why the originally negotiated estimated costs were not adequate. The Government shall have the right to require the State to continue performance up to the originally estimated cost level and to suspend work thereafter, negotiate a new set of work priorities to be completed within the remaining funds, to modify the order, increasing the estimated cost to the level appropriate for completion of the work, or to modify the order to reduce the total to coincide with actual work accomplished.

VII. Rates and Ceiling:

A. FEMA agrees to pay the State for documented, reasonable, and allowable, and allocable costs related to assistance provided to applicants, in accordance with the terms of Attachment 1, Federal law, and FEMA regulation and policy.

B. 2 CFR Part 200. The State, by execution of this Agreement, certifies that the pricing established under this Agreement is in compliance the Cost Principles in 2 CFR Part 200, Subpart E, and includes only allowable costs of performance under this Agreement.

C. The State shall not exceed the total ceiling price in services for FEMA without written modification by a FEMA Contracting Officer, such written modification to be provided in a timely manner. Any such modification shall be reviewed by FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery prior to approval.

If at any time the State has reason to believe that the payments and material costs that will accrue in performing this Agreement in the next succeeding 30 days, if added to all other payments and costs previously accrued, will exceed 80 percent of the ceiling price in the Schedule, the State shall notify the Contracting Officer giving a revised estimate of the total price to FEMA for performing this contract with supporting reasons and documentation.

D. FEMA is not obligated to pay the State any amount in excess of the ceiling price, and the State shall not be obligated to continue performance if to do so would exceed the ceiling price set forth in the Schedule, unless and until the Contracting Officer notifies the State in writing that FEMA has approved the increase in the ceiling price and specifies in the notice a revised ceiling approved by FEMA.

E. If at any time during the performance of this contract, the State has reason to believe that the total price to FEMA for performing this contract will be substantially greater or less than the stated ceiling price, the State shall so notify the Contracting Officer, giving a revised estimate of the total price for performing this contract, with supporting reasons and documentation. FEMA generally will not approve a total price that exceeds the stated ceiling price.

FEMA may approve such an excess only if the supporting reasons and documentation provided by the State demonstrate extraordinary circumstances.

F. If at any time during performance of this contract, FEMA has reason to believe that the work to be required in performing this contract will be substantially greater or less than the stated ceiling price, the Contracting Officer will so advise the State, given the then revised estimate of the total amount of effort to be required under the contract.

VIII. Program Service Cost Controls

A. Each program assistance service line item has a per applicant household cap established.

B. The program service cost-control methods will be applied, as detailed in Attachment 1.

D. Administrative costs will be actual costs, capped at 6% of the final program costs.

E. The State must submit an administrative plan and include procedures for sub-recipient administrative costs amount or percentage determination, pass through, closeout, and audit. The State will submit this initial administrative cost funding request/invoice before any administrative fees for the direct housing program can be disbursed.

F. An initial 25% of the State's total projected administrative cost amount will be disbursed upon the submission and approval of the plan with additional funds obligated and released as program requirements stabilize. The State may submit a funding request for additional administrative costs, upon a showing of need and a revised administration plan. FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery may approve or deny such request at his discretion.

G. Final administrative costs accounting will be verified upon agreement closeout, and based on actuals, not initial projection amounts. Any surplus is subject to reimbursement to FEMA.

X. Program Funding

A. FEMA will obligate funds to the State upon approval and issuance of project orders under Section VI. This money will be drawn down upon via the invoicing procedures contained herein.

B. Approved proper invoices will draw down against obligated projects on a reimbursable basis.

C. If the State requires additional funding to ensure compliance with the Prompt Payment Act requirements, Tex. Govt. Code 2251, are being met, it shall submit a written request to the Contracting Officer detailing the need and proposed solution.

The package will be reviewed by FEMA for acceptance. Upon determination of acceptance, a proper invoice for the amount accepted by FEMA will be submitted by the State for payment. The original invoice payment request shall be submitted via email as provided in the attached invoice instructions below. The FEMA Point of Contact for payment issues is Dennis C. Clements.

C. Each invoice submitted shall contain the following information:

Duplication of Benefits

1. A duplication of benefit (DOB) may occur when an insured direct temporary housing occupant receives Additional Living Expense (ALE) or Loss of Use (LOU) insurance benefits that cover the cost of renting alternative housing. When FEMA identifies a DOB with ALE or LOU while making an eligibility determination, FEMA will initiate steps to collect the ALE or LOU benefits for housing costs. FEMA will base the amount of the monthly payment on the ALE or LOU amount not to exceed the Fair Market Rent (FMR) rate established by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the size (number of bedrooms) and location of the housing unit. FEMA will only collect payments until the total amount of the ALE or LOU insurance has been exhausted or the occupant vacates the direct THU, whichever is first. The State will inform FEMA when an applicant with ALE is placed in and vacates a direct temporary housing assistance option.

2. PHC represents a DOB with financial housing assistance: Applicants determined eligible for PHC who choose to receive PHC must provide documentation of the use of any previously provided FEMA financial housing assistance for Repair, and return all unused, previously provided financial housing assistance for Repair or Replacement to FEMA.

3. Right of Recoupment: The State agrees that FEMA may seek reimbursement for any identified DOB, including through the reduction of future disaster relief awards to applicants, the State, or other parties to this agreement.

Direct Temporary Housing Terms and Conditions

Eligibility Conditions

1. All eligibility determinations by FEMA for Direct Temporary Housing Assistance and continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance will be made by FEMA in accordance with the Stafford Act, and implementing regulations, and IHPUG.

Continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance Conditions

1. The State will monitor the progress that Direct Temporary Housing occupants are making towards obtaining and occupying permanent housing within the 18 month period of assistance, based on the conditions outlined by FEMA's regulations at 44 C.F.R § 206.117(b)(1)(ii)(G).

2. The State will provide FEMA with a recommendation for continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance to individuals and households based on these conditions until February 25, 2019.

3. FEMA will make the final determination on an applicant's eligibility for continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance based on the State's recommendation.

2. FEMA must approve all terminations and appeal decisions in a timely manner before the applicant is notified.

All utilities, appliances, and other furnishings must be functional.

3. The State shall evaluate properties according to the following factors:
    a. Cost to the federal government: The State shall lease properties with per-unit rent at or below the Fair Market Rent (FMR) established by HUD. If the State is unable to obtain sufficient rental resources, the State shall conduct an analysis of prevailing market rates and may increase leases to properties with per-unit rent of up to 125% of FMR. Properties with per-unit rent above 125% of the Fair Market Rate established by HUD must be approved by FEMA;

b. Landlord's demonstrated ability to manage and provide maintenance services;
c. Proximity to community and wrap-around services, such as accessible public transportation, schools, fire and emergency services, grocery stores, health care services, etc.;
d. When selecting available properties, the State may prioritize properties that are already accessible, include accessibility features, or can be easily made accessible; and are in proximity to accessible public transportation.

4. The estimated monthly cost per unit is up to $1,300 unless approved by FEMA.
    a. The State can also provide one month's cost for a security deposit for each unit.

5. Within 7 business days of completion, the State must provide FEMA the following documentation:
    a. A copy of the inspection record confirming the property complies with HQS;
    b. A copy of the lease contract specifying the monthly rent rates.
    c. A copy of the lease agreement signed between the applicant and the property and the applicant and the State, for each applicant.

Multi-Family Lease and Repair (MLR) Conditions

1. The State may enter into lease agreements with owners of multi-family rental properties located in Individual Assistance designated counties to house Eligible Applicants and make repairs or improvements to existing multi-family housing units in order to provide temporary housing to Eligible Applicants.

2. Per the Stafford Act, under the terms of any lease agreement for property entered into under MLR, the value of the improvements or repairs shall be deducted from the value of the lease agreement and may not exceed the value of the lease. To determine the cost-effectiveness of the potential MLR property, the State will deduct the estimated cost of repairs and improvements from the value of the lease as follows:
    a. The State will determine the estimated cost of repairs or improvements by performing an independent cost estimate for the necessary repairs and improvements, or receive an estimated cost for repairs and improvements from the building contractor.
    b. The State will determine the value of the lease agreement by multiplying the monthly FMR by the number of units, and then multiplying the number of months remaining between the date the repairs are completed and the end of the 18 month period of assistance, which is February 25, 2019.
    c. The estimated total cost per unit is up to $21,000 unless approved by FEMA.

i. This includes a minimal monthly maintenance cost per unit for the operation of the property.
ii. The State can also provide one month's cost for a security deposit for each unit.
iii. FEMA may approve an increase to the cap up to 25% for access and functional needs-related costs.

3. Properties located within a floodway, coastal high-hazard area, or Coastal Barrier Resource Unit are not eligible for this program.

4. Prior to leasing a property, the State shall provide for each property an initial inspection report to include:
    a. Location, physical address and latitude and longitude;
    b. Date of construction, and
    c. An exterior photo.

5. The State shall provide the following documentation to FEMA within 7 days of leasing a property for temporary housing:
    a. Completed property inspection report;
    b. Itemized repair cost estimate;
    c. The state or local government's valuation of the lease, including methodology used;
    d. Copy of the tenant lease and application requirements; and
    e. A copy of the executed lease agreement and repair contracts, specifying the expenditures for repairs, rent, property management, and maintenance.

6. Within 14 days of completion, the State must provide FEMA the following documentation:
    a. Paid invoices documenting the expenses incurred for repairs and improvements;
    b. A copy of the occupancy certificate issued by the local government; and
    c. A copy of the lease agreement signed between the applicant and the property and the applicant and the State, for each applicant.

7. All repairs shall be made in a manner consistent with current local building codes, standards, permitting, inspection requirements, and all applicable environmental planning and historic preservation (EHP) laws and regulations. Items will be repaired when feasible, but may be replaced when cost-effective to the government or when necessary to ensure the health and safety of the occupant. The State will be responsible for obtaining local permits, but can delegate this responsibility.

RV Conditions (currently only approved for DR-4332-TX)

1. The State may provide and place RVs certified to comply with the Recreation Vehicle Industry Association (RVIA) standards established on July 1, 2012.

2. The State will notify disaster survivors with access and functional needs who request a RV that a reasonable modification may be available upon request. If survivors are unable to occupy an RV due to access and functional needs:
    a. The State, with approval from FEMA, may make other forms of direct temporary housing assistance available, which meets the survivor's access and functional needs, including Uniform Federal Accessibility Standards (UFAS)-compliant MHUs if needed.
    b. Should the State require UFAS-compliant MHUs, FEMA will provide them on behalf of the State.

3. Any RVs the State procures must meet current California Air Resource Board (CARB) standards or are certified compliant with the Toxic Substances Control Act (TSCA) Title VI requirements for formaldehyde emissions from composite wood products found in RVs.[1]

4. The estimated cost per unit is up to $55,000 unless approved by FEMA. This cost includes procurement, hauling and installing the unit, and any maintenance and deactivation costs.

5. The State shall provide, on a weekly basis, the following documentation for RVs procured for use as temporary housing:
    a. A copy of Purchase Order and Bill of Sale.

6. The State shall be responsible for disposing of RVs provided under this IGSA in accordance with Section 408(d)(2) of the Stafford Act. The State must provide documentation of the method of disposal for all units. The State shall return the proceeds from any sale of the units to FEMA.

MHU Conditions

1. The State may procure, haul, and install MHUs as a form of Direct Temporary Housing Assistance.

[1] On December 12, 2016, the EPA issued a final rule mirroring the CARB standards as required by the Formaldehyde Standards for Composite Wood Products Act, Pub. L. 111-199 (2010), 15 U.S.C. § 2601 note. The rule will take effect in December 2017; however regulated entities may voluntarily label compliant products as soon as compliance can be achieved. See 40 CFR Part 770.

2. The number of bedrooms in the MHU must accommodate the applicant's household composition, as recorded during the FEMA inspection.

3. Units must comply with 24 C.F.R. Part 3280 Manufactured Home Construction and Safety Standards ("HUD code").

4. The estimated cost per unit is up to $92,000 unless approved by FEMA.
    a. This cost includes procurement, hauling and installing the unit, and any maintenance and deactivation costs.
    b. FEMA may approve an increase to the cap up to 25% for access and functional needs-related costs.

5. Any UFAS MHU provided for an Eligible Applicant with a disability or other access and functional needs will be provided by FEMA, and must be installed with a functioning Tank and Pump System prior to occupancy.

6. Any FEMA-sourced MHU provided for an eligible applicant must be installed with a functioning Tank and Pump System prior to occupancy except where to do so would cause a delay in allowing the applicant to take occupancy, in which case the Tank and Pump System shall be installed at the earliest possible date after occupancy. This requirement for the installation of a Tank and Pump System does not apply to any state-sourced MHU provided to an Eligible Applicant.

7. The State shall provide FEMA, on a weekly basis, the following documentation for MHUs procured for use as temporary housing:
    a. A copy of Purchase Order and Bill of Sale.

8. The State shall be responsible for disposing of MHUs provided under this IGSA in accordance with Section 408(d)(2) of the Stafford Act. The State must provide documentation of the method of disposal for all units. The State shall return the proceeds from any sale of the units to FEMA.

RV and MHU Site Conditions

1. The State may provide RVs and MHUs to eligible applicants and place them on private and commercial sites.
    a. The estimated monthly cost per pad lease is up to $600 unless approved by FEMA.

2. Placement of RVs and MHUs as post-disaster temporary housing in a SFHA/1-percent annual chance year floodplain must comply with 44 C.F.R. Part 9 and FEMA Directive/Instruction 108-1, Environmental Planning and Historic Preservation Responsibilities and Program Requirements, and the abbreviated decision-making process under 44 C.F.R. §9.13 when considering the placement of RVs and MHUs on private and commercial sites in a floodplain.

a. Pursuant to 44 CFR §9.13 (d)(2), no MHUs or other readily-fabricated dwellings can be placed within a floodway, coastal high-hazard area, even under the abbreviated decision-making process. No MHUs or other readily-fabricated dwellings can be placed within a Coastal Barrier Resource Unit.
b. In accordance with 44 C.F.R. §9.13(d)(4)(i), MHUs placed on a private or commercial site in a SFHA must be elevated to the fullest extent practicable up to the Base Flood Elevation (BFE) and adequately anchored.
    i. The State shall evaluate RV and MHU placement sites individually, and make a determination regarding a site's suitability for RV or MHU placement based on the best available flood hazard information for that site.
c. RVs will not be placed in the regulatory Floodway or Coastal High Hazard Areas.
d. RVs will only be placed in the SFHA if no other housing options are available. In order to reduce the risk of loss of life of the occupants, RVs may be placed in the SFHA only where base flood depths are sufficiently shallow to allow for timely and safe evacuation from the RV on foot. RVs placed in the SFHA will be adequately anchored.
e. Prior to placement, the State shall provide for each RV and MHU a completed Request for Site Inspection Report (FEMA form 010-0-9), to include, latitude and longitude of the proposed location.
f. Placement of MHUs or other readily fabricated dwellings must be in accordance and compliance with Texas Manufactured Housing Division regulations.
g. Repairs to commercial sites shall be limited to reasonable and cost-effective repairs or improvements necessary to make the site functional (such as an electrical service upgrade), including those necessary to meet reasonable accommodations for people with disabilities.
    i. The estimated cost per pad improvement is up to $7,500 unless approved by FEMA.

3. Prior to building a MHU Group Site, the State must request and receive approval from FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery.
    a. The development of a MHU Group Site(s) is authorized only when the placement of MHUs on private sites are not feasible or if the use of existing commercial sites are not feasible for the eligible applicant.
    b. The State will prioritize sites provided by the State and local government at no cost before leasing a site from a private party.
    c. When considering the placement of MHU at potential group sites, the State must coordinate with the Environmental Planning and Historic Preservation Program.

d. FEMA, including Environmental Planning and Historic Preservation, approval must be obtained prior to any site lease and site construction activity.
e. The estimated cost per pad is up to $50,000 unless approved by FEMA.

Permanent Housing Construction Repairs: Terms and Conditions

Eligibility Conditions

1. Applicants may be eligible for PHC assistance after a FEMA determination that all other forms of temporary housing are not available, feasible, or cost effective.

2. PHC assistance shall only include repairs (PHC-Repairs) not PHC-Replacement. Reference "Attachment 2: Detailed Eligible Permanent Housing Construction-Repairs," for eligible repair items.

3. At the State's recommendation, FEMA may approve PHC Repair for eligible applicants whose homes are feasible to repair when:
    a. The repairs are estimated to be completed within 90 days or less from the start of the repair work;
    b. The damages are less than fifty percent of the market value prior to the disaster; and
    c. The estimated labor and materials costs are up to $60,000 unless approved by FEMA. FEMA generally will not approve a total price that exceeds this amount.
        i. FEMA may approve an increase to the cap up to 25% for access and functional needs-related costs.

4. PHC-Repair is not eligible when the State identifies:
    a. The home requires repairs to structural elements (e.g. foundation, frame) or other items requiring architectural or engineering services;
    b. The home requiring repairs with estimated costs that exceed fifty percent of the market value of the structure before the damage occurred; or
    c. The home is determined to be "repetitive loss or severe repetitive loss", as identified by the National Flood Insurance Program, and the cost to be brought into compliance with the local floodplain exceeds the maximum allowable costs for PHC-Repair.

5. Any home located within a SFHA shall not be considered for PHC repairs unless in accordance with applicable federal, and local laws, regulations, and ordinances, and can be repaired within the PHC cost limits.

6. Applicants determined eligible by FEMA for PHC may choose either to:
    a. Receive PHC, provide documentation of the use of any previously provided financial housing assistance for Repair, and return all unused, previously provided financial housing assistance for Repair or Replacement to FEMA; OR

b. Receive Direct Temporary Housing Assistance, if available, and keep any financial housing assistance for Repair or Replacement that FEMA previously provided.

7. In order to be referred to the State for PHC, eligible applicants who choose to receive PHC assistance must sign an acknowledgement of the following terms and conditions:
    a. The applicant agrees to participate in the State program, including right of entry;
    b. The applicant agrees to obtain and maintain flood insurance coverage on the home for at least the value of the repairs provided the home is located in an SFHA. FEMA will not contribute to the cost of flood insurance premiums; and
    c. An applicant's decision to accept or decline PHC shall be considered final; FEMA will not re-consider an applicant for Direct Temporary Housing Assistance or PHC after they have declined either form of assistance. Applicants who accept PHC will not be considered for any additional FEMA Housing Assistance, including financial Temporary Housing Assistance.

8. The State and FEMA agree that applicants for PHC-Repair should not include those applicants whose properties may eventually be eligible for elevation or a buy-out. The State and FEMA will work together to ensure applicants eligible for PHC-Repair are reviewed for potential future mitigation, elevation, or home buy-out programs and, to the maximum extent possible, minimize PHC-Repair approval for those applicants.

9. The State and FEMA's responsibility to provide Direct Housing Assistance to the applicant ends once the completed PHC-Repairs are accepted by the applicant.

PHC Repair Conditions

1. Under PHC, the State will not repair or replace items eligible under Other Needs Assistance for Personal Property, such as furnishings and appliances.

2. The State will need to ensure that there is no duplication of benefits between emergency work provided under the Sheltering and Temporary Essential Power (STEP) program and PHC-Repair assistance, and report to FEMA on the mechanism for doing so within thirty (30) days of initiating the PHC-Repair program. FEMA will only reimburse for specific line items repairs for a property under PHC or STEP, not under both options.

3. PHC-Repairs are limited to real property components eligible under FEMA Housing Assistance that were damaged by the disaster and functional before the declared event. The State shall only perform repairs necessary to restore the pre-disaster residence to a habitable condition. The completed repairs shall ensure the pre-disaster residence is restored to a safe, sanitary, and functional condition.

4. All repairs shall be made in a manner consistent with current local building codes, standards, or minimal acceptable construction industry standards by the area, permitting, inspection requirements, and all applicable environmental planning and historic preservation (EHP) laws and regulations. Items will be repaired when feasible, but may be replaced when cost-effective to the government or when necessary to ensure the health and safety of the occupant. The State will be responsible for obtaining local permits, but can delegate this authority.

5. Prior to repairing a property, the State shall provide for each property an initial inspection report to include:
    a. Location, physical address and latitude and longitude;
    b. Date of construction, and
    c. An exterior photo.

6. Repairs shall be made using materials of average quality used in new construction, in accordance with 44 C.F.R. § 206.117(b)(4)(iii), and taking into account the accessibility needs of the occupant.

7. Repairs to accessibility features and accessible routes will be guided by the Americans with Disabilities Act Accessibility Guidelines (ADAAG) and HUD Design Details for Accessible Disaster Relief Housing.

8. The State shall provide to FEMA the following documentation within 7 business days of completing PHC Repairs for an applicant:
    a. Completed property inspection report;
    b. Itemized repair cost estimate;
    c. Executed repair contract or work order, including itemized list of repairs performed;
    d. A copy of the occupancy certificate issued by the local government.

INTERGOVERNMENTAL SERVICE AGREEMENT

INTERGOVERNMENTAL SERVICE AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE
UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY
FEDERAL EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT AGENCY
AND
THE STATE OF TEXAS GENERAL LAND OFFICE

I. Parties:

The parties to this Intergovernmental Service Agreement ("Agreement") are the Department of Homeland Security Federal Emergency Management Agency ("FEMA") and the State of Texas General Land Office ("State").

II. Authority:

This Agreement is authorized by:

A. Homeland Security Act of 2002, Pub. L. No. 107-296 (2002) (codified as amended at 6 U.S.C. § 101 et seq.)

B. Sections 306 and 408 of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, Pub. L. No. 93-288 (1974) (codified as amended at 42 U.S.C. §§ 5149 and 5174) ("Stafford Act")

C. Department of Homeland Security Delegation of Authority No. 9001.1, Delegation to the Administrator of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (Dec. 10, 2010)

D. Title 44 of the U.S. Code of Federal Regulations, Chapter I, Part 206.

E. Texas Disaster Act of 1975 (Tex. Gov't Code § 418)

F. Federal Grant and Cooperative Agreement Act, 31 U.S.C. § 6301 et seq.

III. Background:

On August 25, 2017, the President declared major disaster DR-4332 for the State pursuant to his authority under the Stafford Act. (82 FR 42691 (Sept. 11, 2017.) This declaration authorized FEMA to provide financial assistance and direct services, under Section 408 of the Stafford Act, to individuals and households "who, as a direct result of a major disaster, have necessary expenses and serious needs in which the individuals and households are unable to meet such expenses, or needs through other means," such as insurance. FEMA may provide direct temporary housing when there are a lack of available housing resources. In addition, FEMA may authorize Permanent Housing Construction (PHC) in the form of direct or financial assistance when there are no alternate housing resources available and temporary housing assistance is not available, is infeasible, or not cost effective.

FEMA determined that due to the significant damage caused by Hurricane Harvey in the State, the exigent need for housing requires the provision of direct housing assistance to eligible survivors under Section 408. FEMA is in need of support to execute the direct housing mission for DR-4332, and the State has expressed a desire and the capability to provide the needed support.

IV. Purpose:

A. The purpose of this Agreement is to establish an agreement between FEMA and the State for the provision of direct housing assistance, under section 408 of the Stafford Act, to individuals and households who are displaced from their pre-disaster residences, or whose pre-disaster primary residences are rendered uninhabitable as a result of damage caused by Hurricane Harvey, and who are unable to meet the expenses associated with procuring housing by other means.

B. This Agreement sets forth the responsibilities of FEMA and the State and states the services that the State shall perform satisfactorily in order to receive payment from FEMA.

V. Services and Period of Performance:

A. The State shall provide assistance to FEMA in the delivery of direct temporary housing, and direct permanent housing construction assistance to Hurricane Harvey survivors residing within the areas declared by DR-4332. See Attachment 1, Program Implementation and Conditions.

B. Performance Period: The period of performance shall be for 18 months from the date of the disaster declaration (August 25, 2017). FEMA may, at the State's request, extend the period of performance if FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery determines that due to extraordinary circumstances an extension would be in the public interest.

C. Procurement Standards: The State will generally comply with the procurement standards detailed in 2 CFR 200.317-326 in conjunction with state emergency procurement law.

D. Similar Agreements: To the extent a similar agreement is executed between FEMA and another state for the provision of direct temporary housing and direct permanent housing construction assistance with terms and conditions that are more favorable than those offered to the State of Texas General Land Office, the more favorable terms and conditions will immediately apply to this Agreement upon approval by the State of Texas General Land Office.

VI. Issuance of Orders

A. For the purpose of this Agreement, the FEMA Contracting Officer may issue orders on either a firm-fixed-price basis, or a total not-to-exceed basis (time and materials) or a combination of both. Terms and conditions applicable to any order shall be as described in this Agreement.

B. The intent is to allow the State, and its local partners, to begin work on discrete projects as the specific need and capacity are identified, defined, and established. The State, within the general scope of this Agreement, may propose projects based on program service line item(s), political subdivision(s), or any combination thereof.

C. FEMA will obtain written technical and cost program proposals from the State. The proposal generally shall include the following, as appropriate to the task:

1. Task to be performed;
2. Scope of task;
3. Time for completion or target date;
4. A detailed cost estimate;
5. Other pertinent information, such as technical/management approach;
6. QA/QR [Quality Assurance/Quality Review] plan;
7. Total firm-fixed-price or ceiling price (for Time and Material); and
8. Any other requirements specific or unique to the project.

D. FEMA will evaluate the State's proposals, and negotiate and memorialize appropriate cost and quality control mechanisms in a timely manner, as necessary.

E. Only upon receipt of an executed order, signed by the Contracting Officer, shall the State commence work. All orders are subject to the terms and conditions of this contract. In the event of conflict between an order and the Agreement, the Agreement shall control.

F. The State shall notify the Contracting Officer within 24 hours if any significant difficulties with regard to performance according to the terms of the order are anticipated or any time significant difficulties in performance arise.

G. If at any time during the performance of a time and materials order it appears that additional funds will be required to complete performance, the State shall promptly notify the Contracting Officer in writing. Such notification shall include the costs expended, an estimate of costs required to complete the order, and an explanation of why the originally negotiated estimated costs were not adequate. The Government shall have the right to require the State to continue performance up to the originally estimated cost level and to suspend work thereafter, negotiate a new set of work priorities to be completed within the remaining funds, to modify the order, increasing the estimated cost to the level appropriate for completion of the work, or to modify the order to reduce the total to coincide with actual work accomplished.

VII. Rates and Ceiling:

A. FEMA agrees to pay the State for documented, reasonable, and allowable, and allocable costs related to assistance provided to applicants, in accordance with the terms of Attachment 1, Federal law, and FEMA regulation and policy.

B. 2 CFR Part 200. The State, by execution of this Agreement, certifies that the pricing established under this Agreement is in compliance the Cost Principles in 2 CFR Part 200, Subpart E, and includes only allowable costs of performance under this Agreement.

C. The State shall not exceed the total ceiling price in services for FEMA without written modification by a FEMA Contracting Officer, such written modification to be provided in a timely manner. Any such modification shall be reviewed by FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery prior to approval.

If at any time the State has reason to believe that the payments and material costs that will accrue in performing this Agreement in the next succeeding 30 days, if added to all other payments and costs previously accrued, will exceed 80 percent of the ceiling price in the Schedule, the State shall notify the Contracting Officer giving a revised estimate of the total price to FEMA for performing this contract with supporting reasons and documentation.

D. FEMA is not obligated to pay the State any amount in excess of the ceiling price, and the State shall not be obligated to continue performance if to do so would exceed the ceiling price set forth in the Schedule, unless and until the Contracting Officer notifies the State in writing that FEMA has approved the increase in the ceiling price and specifies in the notice a revised ceiling approved by FEMA.

E. If at any time during the performance of this contract, the State has reason to believe that the total price to FEMA for performing this contract will be substantially greater or less than the stated ceiling price, the State shall so notify the Contracting Officer, giving a revised estimate of the total price for performing this contract, with supporting reasons and documentation. FEMA generally will not approve a total price that exceeds the stated ceiling price.

FEMA may approve such an excess only if the supporting reasons and documentation provided by the State demonstrate extraordinary circumstances.

F. If at any time during performance of this contract, FEMA has reason to believe that the work to be required in performing this contract will be substantially greater or less than the stated ceiling price, the Contracting Officer will so advise the State, given the then revised estimate of the total amount of effort to be required under the contract.

VIII. Program Service Cost Controls

A. Each program assistance service line item has a per applicant household cap established.

B. The program service cost-control methods will be applied, as detailed in Attachment 1.

C. Only the Contracting Officer may approve exceptions to the program service cost caps which exceed the amounts or justifications described in Attachment 1.

IX. Administrative Costs

A. State administrative costs for the direct housing program will be calculated and managed for purposes of this agreement in an analogous manner to the current PA model delineated in 44 CFR 207.7(b) and (c).

B. Administrative Costs means any direct and indirect costs, administrative expenses, and any other expenses not directly chargeable to a specific project that are reasonably incurred by the State and municipalities in administering and managing this mission. Indirect costs means costs that are incurred by the State and municipalities for a common or joint purpose benefiting more than one cost objective that are not readily assignable to the cost objectives specifically benefited.

C. Administrative costs are not intended to cover direct costs of managing specific projects because these costs generally are eligible as part of the cost accounting for each project.

D. Administrative costs will be actual costs, capped at 6% of the final program costs.

E. The State must submit an administrative plan and include procedures for sub-recipient administrative costs amount or percentage determination, pass through, closeout, and audit. The State will submit this initial administrative cost funding request/invoice before any administrative fees for the direct housing program can be disbursed.

F. An initial 25% of the State's total projected administrative cost amount will be disbursed upon the submission and approval of the plan with additional funds obligated and released as program requirements stabilize. The State may submit a funding request for additional administrative costs, upon a showing of need and a revised administration plan. FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery may approve or deny such request at his discretion.

G. Final administrative costs accounting will be verified upon agreement closeout, and based on actuals, not initial projection amounts. Any surplus is subject to reimbursement to FEMA.

X. Program Funding

A. FEMA will obligate funds to the State upon approval and issuance of project orders under Section VI. This money will be drawn down upon via the invoicing procedures contained herein.

B. Approved proper invoices will draw down against obligated projects on a reimbursable basis.

C. If the State requires additional funding to ensure compliance with the Prompt Payment Act requirements, Tex. Govt. Code 2251, are being met, it shall submit a written request to the Contracting Officer detailing the need and proposed solution.

XI. Invoicing and Payment:

A. Subject to the availability of funds from the Disaster Relief Fund (DRF), FEMA will provide funding to the State in accordance with this Agreement.

B. The State shall submit a project management plan package to include performance schedule and cost estimates for work to be performed under each program, as outlined in Attachment 1. The package will be reviewed by FEMA for acceptance. Upon determination of acceptance, a proper invoice for the amount accepted by FEMA will be submitted by the State for payment. The original invoice payment request shall be submitted via email as provided in the attached invoice instructions below. The FEMA Point of Contact for payment issues is Dennis C. Clements.

C. Each invoice submitted shall contain the following information:

1. The date of invoice submission;
2. Invoice date and number;
3. Agreement number;
4. Detail of the Services provided and work completed;
5. Breakdown of the political subdivisions at which services were provided;

6. Breakdown by service and associated CLIN;
7. Itemized listing of all other charges;
8. Supporting documentation;
9. Name, title, and phone number of person to notify in event of defective invoice;
10. Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN).

D. Attachments 3 and 4 are the approved and required Invoice templates for use by the State in submitting for payment.

E. FEMA shall review the invoice and make payment on a proper invoice within 10 business days of receipt.

F. For any improper or questioned invoice, FEMA will review and deny or resubmit with 14 business days.

G. Payment will be made by electronic funds transfer.

H. The following FEMA individual (in addition to the Contracting Officer) is hereby delegated authority to accept goods and services and to review and approve invoices for this contract:

XII. Audits:

The State is responsible for obtaining audits in accordance with the Single Audit Act Amendments of 1996 (31 U.S.C. §§ 7501-7507); 31 U.S.C. § 503, 1111; Executive Order 8248; Executive Order 11609; Executive Order 11717; and 2 CFR Part 200, Subpart F (Audit Requirements).

XIII. Liability Provisions:

A. The parties each agree to be responsible for the negligent or wrongful acts or omissions of their respective employees.

B. FEMA liability for any injury, damage, or loss to persons or property arising in the performance of this Agreement and caused by the negligence of its own officers, employees, agents and representatives shall be governed by the Federal Tort Claims Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2691 et seq. The State shall promptly notify FEMA of any claims or lawsuits filed against any FEMA employees of which the State is notified.

C. State liability, if any, for any injury, damage or loss to persons or property arising out of the performance of this Agreement and caused by the negligence of its own officers, employees, agents, and representatives shall be governed by the laws of the State of Texas. 6. FEMA is responsible for making all applicant eligibility determinations for Direct Temporary Housing and Permanent Housing Construction under section 408 of the Stafford Act and notifying the applicant of their approval for Direct Temporary Housing Assistance or PHC.     b. Suitability for the applicant's household, including members of the household with disabilities or other access and functional needs;
    c. Location of available option, and

Duplication of Benefits

1. A duplication of benefit (DOB) may occur when an insured direct temporary housing occupant receives Additional Living Expense (ALE) or Loss of Use (LOU) insurance benefits that cover the cost of renting alternative housing. When FEMA identifies a DOB with ALE or LOU while making an eligibility determination, FEMA will initiate steps to collect the ALE or LOU benefits for housing costs. FEMA will base the amount of the monthly payment on the ALE or LOU amount not to exceed the Fair Market Rent (FMR) rate established by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the size (number of bedrooms) and location of the housing unit. FEMA will only collect payments until the total amount of the ALE or LOU insurance has been exhausted or the occupant vacates the direct THU, whichever is first. The State will inform FEMA when an applicant with ALE is placed in and vacates a direct temporary housing assistance option.

2. PHC represents a DOB with financial housing assistance: Applicants determined eligible for PHC who choose to receive PHC must provide documentation of the use of any previously provided FEMA financial housing assistance for Repair, and return all unused, previously provided financial housing assistance for Repair or Replacement to FEMA.

3. Right of Recoupment: The State agrees that FEMA may seek reimbursement for any identified DOB, including through the reduction of future disaster relief awards to applicants, the State, or other parties to this agreement.

1. FEMA will provide the State a matrix of Environmental and Historic Preservation Compliance requirements, including the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), the National Historic Preservation Act, and Executive Order 11988 Floodplain Management (44 CFR Part 9) to help inform the choice of best housing option for the applicant's location.

2. FEMA is responsible for compliance with a number of environmental and historic preservation laws. These responsibilities cannot be delegated to the State. FEMA will work with the State to gather the necessary information to ensure compliance.

Direct Temporary Housing Terms and Conditions

1. All eligibility determinations by FEMA for Direct Temporary Housing Assistance and continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance will be made by FEMA in accordance with the Stafford Act, and implementing regulations, and IHPUG.

Continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance Conditions

1. The State will monitor the progress that Direct Temporary Housing occupants are making towards obtaining and occupying permanent housing within the 18 month period of assistance, based on the conditions outlined by FEMA's regulations at 44 C.F.R § 206.117(b)(1)(ii)(G).

2. The State will provide FEMA with a recommendation for continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance to individuals and households based on these conditions until February 25, 2019.

3. FEMA will make the final determination on an applicant's eligibility for continued Direct Temporary Housing Assistance based on the State's recommendation.

Termination of Direct Temporary Housing Assistance Conditions

1. The State may recommend to FEMA to terminate an occupant's Direct Temporary Housing Assistance for any reason not prohibited by the Stafford Act, FEMA's regulations at 44 C.F.R § 206.117(b)(1)(ii)(G), or IHPUG.

2. FEMA must approve all terminations and appeal decisions in a timely manner before the applicant is notified.

3. The State shall utilize FEMA templates to notify the applicant of the termination and provide FEMA with copies of all termination notices, appeals, and appeal decisions within seven days of the date issued to ensure FEMA is able to record these documents in NEMIS.

Direct Lease Conditions

1. The State may lease to Eligible Applicants, existing residential property, not typically available to the general public, for use as temporary housing for eligible individuals and households.

2. The State may lease properties that comply with Housing Quality Standards (HQS) established by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), to provide complete and independent living facilities for one or more persons, including permanent provisions for living, sleeping, cooking, and sanitation. All utilities, appliances, and other furnishings must be functional.

3. The State shall evaluate properties according to the following factors:
    a. Cost to the federal government: The State shall lease properties with per-unit rent at or below the Fair Market Rent (FMR) established by HUD. If the State is unable to obtain sufficient rental resources, the State shall conduct an analysis of prevailing market rates and may increase leases to properties with per-unit rent of up to 125% of FMR. Properties with per-unit rent above 125% of the Fair Market Rate established by HUD must be approved by FEMA;

b. Landlord's demonstrated ability to manage and provide maintenance services;
c. Proximity to community and wrap-around services, such as accessible public transportation, schools, fire and emergency services, grocery stores, health care services, etc.;
d. When selecting available properties, the State may prioritize properties that are already accessible, include accessibility features, or can be easily made accessible; and are in proximity to accessible public transportation.

Multi-Family Lease and Repair (MLR) Conditions

1. The State may enter into lease agreements with owners of multi-family rental properties located in Individual Assistance designated counties to house Eligible Applicants and make repairs or improvements to existing multi-family housing units in order to provide temporary housing to Eligible Applicants.

2. Per the Stafford Act, under the terms of any lease agreement for property entered into under MLR, the value of the improvements or repairs shall be deducted from the value of the lease agreement and may not exceed the value of the lease. To determine the cost-effectiveness of the potential MLR property, the State will deduct the estimated cost of repairs and improvements from the value of the lease as follows:
    a. The State will determine the estimated cost of repairs or improvements by performing an independent cost estimate for the necessary repairs and improvements, or receive an estimated cost for repairs and improvements from the building contractor.
    b. The State will determine the value of the lease agreement by multiplying the monthly FMR by the number of units, and then multiplying the number of months remaining between the date the repairs are completed and the end of the 18 month period of assistance, which is February 25, 2019.
    c. The estimated total cost per unit is up to $21,000 unless approved by FEMA.

i. This includes a minimal monthly maintenance cost per unit for the operation of the property.
ii. The State can also provide one month's cost for a security deposit for each unit.
iii. FEMA may approve an increase to the cap up to 25% for access and functional needs-related costs.

3. Properties located within a floodway, coastal high-hazard area, or Coastal Barrier Resource Unit are not eligible for this program.

4. Prior to leasing a property, the State shall provide for each property an initial inspection report to include:

    d. Copy of the tenant lease and application requirements; and
    e. A copy of the executed lease agreement and repair contracts, specifying the expenditures for repairs, rent, property management, and maintenance.

6. Within 14 days of completion, the State must provide FEMA the following documentation:
    a. Paid invoices documenting the expenses incurred for repairs and improvements;
    b. A copy of the occupancy certificate issued by the local government; and
    c. A copy of the lease agreement signed between the applicant and the property and the applicant and the State, for each applicant.

7. All repairs shall be made in a manner consistent with current local building codes, standards, permitting, inspection requirements, and all applicable environmental planning and historic preservation (EHP) laws and regulations. Items will be repaired when feasible, but may be replaced when cost-effective to the government or when necessary to ensure the health and safety of the occupant. The State will be responsible for obtaining local permits, but can delegate this responsibility.

RV Conditions (currently only approved for DR-4332-TX)

1. The State may provide and place RVs certified to comply with the Recreation Vehicle Industry Association (RVIA) standards established on July 1, 2012.

2. The State will notify disaster survivors with access and functional needs who request a RV that a reasonable modification may be available upon request. If survivors are unable to occupy an RV due to access and functional needs:
    a. The State, with approval from FEMA, may make other forms of direct temporary housing assistance available, which meets the survivor's access and functional needs, including Uniform Federal Accessibility Standards (UFAS)-compliant MHUs if needed.
    b. Should the State require UFAS-compliant MHUs, FEMA will provide them on behalf of the State.

5. The State shall provide, on a weekly basis, the following documentation for RVs procured for use as temporary housing:
    a. A copy of Purchase Order and Bill of Sale.

6. The State shall be responsible for disposing of RVs provided under this IGSA in accordance with Section 408(d)(2) of the Stafford Act. The State must provide documentation of the method of disposal for all units. The State shall return the proceeds from any sale of the units to FEMA.

MHU Conditions

1. The State may procure, haul, and install MHUs as a form of Direct Temporary Housing Assistance.

[1] On December 12, 2016, the EPA issued a final rule mirroring the CARB standards as required by the Formaldehyde Standards for Composite Wood Products Act, Pub. L. 111-199 (2010), 15 U.S.C. § 2601 note. The rule will take effect in December 2017; however regulated entities may voluntarily label compliant products as soon as compliance can be achieved. See 40 CFR Part 770.

2. The number of bedrooms in the MHU must accommodate the applicant's household composition, as recorded during the FEMA inspection.

3. Units must comply with 24 C.F.R. Part 3280 Manufactured Home Construction and Safety Standards ("HUD code").

4. The estimated cost per unit is up to $92,000 unless approved by FEMA.
    a. This cost includes procurement, hauling and installing the unit, and any maintenance and deactivation costs.
    b. FEMA may approve an increase to the cap up to 25% for access and functional needs-related costs.

5. Any UFAS MHU provided for an Eligible Applicant with a disability or other access and functional needs will be provided by FEMA, and must be installed with a functioning Tank and Pump System prior to occupancy.

6. Any FEMA-sourced MHU provided for an eligible applicant must be installed with a functioning Tank and Pump System prior to occupancy except where to do so would cause a delay in allowing the applicant to take occupancy, in which case the Tank and Pump System shall be installed at the earliest possible date after occupancy. This requirement for the installation of a Tank and Pump System does not apply to any state-sourced MHU provided to an Eligible Applicant.

7. The State shall provide FEMA, on a weekly basis, the following documentation for MHUs procured for use as temporary housing:
    a. A copy of Purchase Order and Bill of Sale.

8. The State shall be responsible for disposing of MHUs provided under this IGSA in accordance with Section 408(d)(2) of the Stafford Act. The State must provide documentation of the method of disposal for all units. The State shall return the proceeds from any sale of the units to FEMA.

RV and MHU Site Conditions

1. The State may provide RVs and MHUs to eligible applicants and place them on private and commercial sites.
    a. The estimated monthly cost per pad lease is up to $600 unless approved by FEMA.

2. Placement of RVs and MHUs as post-disaster temporary housing in a SFHA/1-percent annual chance year floodplain must comply with 44 C.F.R. Part 9 and FEMA Directive/Instruction 108-1, Environmental Planning and Historic Preservation Responsibilities and Program Requirements, and the abbreviated decision-making process under 44 C.F.R. §9.13 when considering the placement of RVs and MHUs on private and commercial sites in a floodplain.

a. Pursuant to 44 CFR §9.13 (d)(2), no MHUs or other readily-fabricated dwellings can be placed within a floodway, coastal high-hazard area, even under the abbreviated decision-making process. No MHUs or other readily-fabricated dwellings can be placed within a Coastal Barrier Resource Unit.
b. In accordance with 44 C.F.R. §9.13(d)(4)(i), MHUs placed on a private or commercial site in a SFHA must be elevated to the fullest extent practicable up to the Base Flood Elevation (BFE) and adequately anchored.
    i. The State shall evaluate RV and MHU placement sites individually, and make a determination regarding a site's suitability for RV or MHU placement based on the best available flood hazard information for that site.
c. RVs will not be placed in the regulatory Floodway or Coastal High Hazard Areas.
d. RVs will only be placed in the SFHA if no other housing options are available. In order to reduce the risk of loss of life of the occupants, RVs may be placed in the SFHA only where base flood depths are sufficiently shallow to allow for timely and safe evacuation from the RV on foot. RVs placed in the SFHA will be adequately anchored.
e. Prior to placement, the State shall provide for each RV and MHU a completed Request for Site Inspection Report (FEMA form 010-0-9), to include, latitude and longitude of the proposed location.
f. Placement of MHUs or other readily fabricated dwellings must be in accordance and compliance with Texas Manufactured Housing Division regulations.
g. Repairs to commercial sites shall be limited to reasonable and cost-effective repairs or improvements necessary to make the site functional (such as an electrical service upgrade), including those necessary to meet reasonable accommodations for people with disabilities.
    i. The estimated cost per pad improvement is up to $7,500 unless approved by FEMA.

3. Prior to building a MHU Group Site, the State must request and receive approval from FEMA's Assistant Administrator for Recovery.
    a. The development of a MHU Group Site(s) is authorized only when the placement of MHUs on private sites are not feasible or if the use of existing commercial sites are not feasible for the eligible applicant.
    b. The State will prioritize sites provided by the State and local government at no cost before leasing a site from a private party.
    c. When considering the placement of MHU at potential group sites, the State must coordinate with the Environmental Planning and Historic Preservation Program.

d. FEMA, including Environmental Planning and Historic Preservation, approval must be obtained prior to any site lease and site construction activity.
e. The estimated cost per pad is up to $50,000 unless approved by FEMA.

Permanent Housing Construction Repairs: Terms and Conditions

Eligibility Conditions

1. Applicants may be eligible for PHC assistance after a FEMA determination that all other forms of temporary housing are not available, feasible, or cost effective.

2. PHC assistance shall only include repairs (PHC-Repairs) not PHC-Replacement. Reference "Attachment 2: Detailed Eligible Permanent Housing Construction-Repairs," for eligible repair items.

3. At the State's recommendation, FEMA may approve PHC Repair for eligible applicants whose homes are feasible to repair when:
    a. The repairs are estimated to be completed within 90 days or less from the start of the repair work;
    b. The damages are less than fifty percent of the market value prior to the disaster; and
    c. The estimated labor and materials costs are up to $60,000 unless approved by FEMA. FEMA generally will not approve a total price that exceeds this amount.
        i. FEMA may approve an increase to the cap up to 25% for access and functional needs-related costs.

4. PHC-Repair is not eligible when the State identifies:
    a. The home requires repairs to structural elements (e.g. foundation, frame) or other items requiring architectural or engineering services;
    b. The home requiring repairs with estimated costs that exceed fifty percent of the market value of the structure before the damage occurred; or
    c. The home is determined to be "repetitive loss or severe repetitive loss", as identified by the National Flood Insurance Program, and the cost to be brought into compliance with the local floodplain exceeds the maximum allowable costs for PHC-Repair.

5. Any home located within a SFHA shall not be considered for PHC repairs unless in accordance with applicable federal, and local laws, regulations, and ordinances, and can be repaired within the PHC cost limits.

6. Applicants determined eligible by FEMA for PHC may choose either to:
    a. Receive PHC, provide documentation of the use of any previously provided financial housing assistance for Repair, and return all unused, previously provided financial housing assistance for Repair or Replacement to FEMA; OR

b. Receive Direct Temporary Housing Assistance, if available, and keep any financial housing assistance for Repair or Replacement that FEMA previously provided.

7. In order to be referred to the State for PHC, eligible applicants who choose to receive PHC assistance must sign an acknowledgement of the following terms and conditions:
    a. The applicant agrees to participate in the State program, including right of entry;
    b. The applicant agrees to obtain and maintain flood insurance coverage on the home for at least the value of the repairs provided the home is located in an SFHA. FEMA will not contribute to the cost of flood insurance premiums; and
    c. An applicant's decision to accept or decline PHC shall be considered final; FEMA will not re-consider an applicant for Direct Temporary Housing Assistance or PHC after they have declined either form of assistance. Applicants who accept PHC will not be considered for any additional FEMA Housing Assistance, including financial Temporary Housing Assistance.

8. The State and FEMA agree that applicants for PHC-Repair should not include those applicants whose properties may eventually be eligible for elevation or a buy-out. The State and FEMA will work together to ensure applicants eligible for PHC-Repair are reviewed for potential future mitigation, elevation, or home buy-out programs and, to the maximum extent possible, minimize PHC-Repair approval for those applicants.

9. The State and FEMA's responsibility to provide Direct Housing Assistance to the applicant ends once the completed PHC-Repairs are accepted by the applicant.

PHC Repair Conditions

1. Under PHC, the State will not repair or replace items eligible under Other Needs Assistance for Personal Property, such as furnishings and appliances.

2. The State will need to ensure that there is no duplication of benefits between emergency work provided under the Sheltering and Temporary Essential Power (STEP) program and PHC-Repair assistance, and report to FEMA on the mechanism for doing so within thirty (30) days of initiating the PHC-Repair program. FEMA will only reimburse for specific line items repairs for a property under PHC or STEP, not under both options.

3. PHC-Repairs are limited to real property components eligible under FEMA Housing Assistance that were damaged by the disaster and functional before the declared event. The State shall only perform repairs necessary to restore the pre-disaster residence to a habitable condition. The completed repairs shall ensure the pre-disaster residence is restored to a safe, sanitary, and functional condition.

4. All repairs shall be made in a manner consistent with current local building codes, standards, or minimal acceptable construction industry standards by the area, permitting, inspection requirements, and all applicable environmental planning and historic preservation (EHP) laws and regulations. Items will be repaired when feasible, but may be replaced when cost-effective to the government or when necessary to ensure the health and safety of the occupant. The State will be responsible for obtaining local permits, but can delegate this authority.

5. Prior to repairing a property, the State shall provide for each property an initial inspection report to include:
    a. Location, physical address and latitude and longitude;
    b. Date of construction, and
    c. An exterior photo.

6. Repairs shall be made using materials of average quality used in new construction, in accordance with 44 C.F.R. § 206.117(b)(4)(iii), and taking into account the accessibility needs of the occupant.

7. Repairs to accessibility features and accessible routes will be guided by the Americans with Disabilities Act Accessibility Guidelines (ADAAG) and HUD Design Details for Accessible Disaster Relief Housing.

8. The State shall provide to FEMA the following documentation within 7 business days of completing PHC Repairs for an applicant:
    a. Completed property inspection report;
    b. Itemized repair cost estimate;
    c. Executed repair contract or work order, including itemized list of repairs performed;
    d. A copy of the occupancy certificate issued by the local government.

Darrell,

Bala Nursing Home received a score of 63. This is a passing score. When nursing homes receive a passing score, they are no longer included in the HUD REAC inspection program. Now, Bala will only be inspected by the Center for Medicaid and Medicare Services.

HUD can release the report to reporters through a FOIA 45-60 days after the inspection. Since the owner has the ability to appeal the score, REAC would prefer not to release the score before that process is complete.

We hope you find this information helpful.

Darrell,

Bala Nursing Home received a score of 63. This is a passing score. When nursing homes receive a passing score, they are no longer included in the HUD REAC inspection program. Now, Bala will only be inspected by the Center for Medicaid and Medicare Services.

HUD can release the report to reporters through a FOIA 45-60 days after the inspection.
Since the owner has the ability to appeal the score, REAC would prefer not to release the score before that process is complete.

We hope you find this information helpful.

1. How much does the CDF have in unobligated disaster/emergency funding that is eligible to spend on 2017 disasters?
   Answer: $57.8 million

2. Of those funds has any already been allocated to Harvey relief?
   Answer: $0

3. Finally, do you have annual information (obligations and outlays) on the funds that were provided to the CDF after Sandy that you could share?
   Answer: Allocations are available here: https://www.hudexchange.info/programs/cdbg-dr/
   For information on individual grants, we have a public facing portal: https://drgr.hud.gov/public/
   For example, this report on Sandy grants: https://drgr.hud.gov/public/downloads/reports/Cumulative%20Financial%20Summary%20(P.L.%20113-2).pdf

Hi Tracey,

I'm the CBO analyst that covers the Community Development Block Grants program. I'm hoping to speak with someone about the current status of the program's funds and the effect of the President's proposal to eliminate funding for the program. Would you know who the best person would be for me to speak with?

Thanks,
Robert

Happy to do a call. Answers below:

1. How much does the CDF have in unobligated disaster/emergency funding that is eligible to spend on 2017 disasters?
   Answer: $57.8 million

2. Of those funds has any already been allocated to Harvey relief?
   Answer: $0

3. Finally, do you have annual information (obligations and outlays) on the funds that were provided to the CDF after Sandy that you could share?
   Answer: Allocations are available here: https://www.hudexchange.info/programs/cdbg-dr/
   For information on individual grants, we have a public facing portal: https://drgr.hud.gov/public/
   For example, this report on Sandy grants: https://drgr.hud.gov/public/downloads/reports/Cumulative%20Financial%20Summary%20(P.L.%20113-2).pdf

Sandy, do you have time to discuss the Congressional Request today?

Originally, we discussed with Helen a bi-weekly document pull to cover the HUD related questions from the letter (again attached). Our understanding was that some documents would be readily available (what we have transmitted thus far) and that others would take months to access (archived emails and other older documents). We are expected to deliver the next round of documents to the Hill on Friday.

Thank you,

-Mike Dendas

As I told you when we met, exec sec is happy to help coordinate searches, but we need for you to guide us as to what to look for. Sandy Wright has been leading this effort for us, and probably has the best perspective on what does and does not exist in terms of agency records. I am out of the office until September 26, but I am sure that between Sandy and Kevin they can get you whatever you need.

Helen, we are responsible for questions 5,7,8,9,11,12,13,14, and 15 of the attached letter (per our discussion and notes I passed along about a month ago). The documentation provided thus far does not seem to cover that full request.

Can we set up a quick call tomorrow to review the information pull once again.

Mr. Kelley,

I've been directed to you from Aida Rodriguez in the Secretary's office. I'm looking to get a package of records for a FOIA request. This package was assembled in response to a Congressional request in July. I also spoke with Loualice Farrar-Wilson, who let me know that this inquiry is CTS control number 2017-AHFD-EXEC-02659.

Please see the attachment, and let me know if this is something that we can have sent over. Thanks in advance for all your help!

Good afternoon Ms. Rodriguez,

I have a FOIA request in that I was hoping you could look at. The requester mentions that Congress wrote to Secretary Carson and asked for some records to be provided by 7/25/17, and the requester is asking for copies of those same records. If this is something that was produced in the past, presumably we have it as a package ready to go. Do you know if that is the case? If so, is the Secretary's office in possession of this, or should I check elsewhere, like CIR? Any information you have would be greatly appreciated. The request is attached.

As always, I appreciate your time.

Best,

Ethan

Subject: Request for Summary of Protocol for Redacting PII

Hi Deborah,

I am wondering if you might send us a paragraph or so summary of the protocol for redacting/encrypting personally identifiable information we receive in casework or inquiries from the Hill. Basically just looking for something we can share with the rest of the folks in CIR to ensure we have a strict process in place when these things come in.

Most if not all of the casework we receive from the Hill contains social security numbers and many times is sent to the incorrect person in CIR. I know Exec Sec needs social security numbers for initial processing so is, for example, the first recipient of the sensitive information to send it to Exec Sec for processing, and then redact that PII before sharing it with the appropriate point person(s) in CIR? Or is there another process that you all suggest we follow? We typically route things to Loualice and Aretha first, who then send it over to Exec Sec for processing so does this change anything?

Please send guidance we can share with the rest of the team to ensure we have a firm policy in place.

Of course, please don't hesitate to contact me if you have any questions.

Thanks,
Ashley Ludlow

Mr. Kelley,

I've been directed to you from Aida Rodriguez in the Secretary's office. I'm looking to get a package of records for a FOIA request. This package was assembled in response to a Congressional request in July. I also spoke with Loualice Farrar-Wilson, who let me know that this inquiry is CTS control number 2017-AHFD-EXEC-02659.

Please see the attachment, and let me know if this is something that we can have sent over. Thanks in advance for all your help!

Good afternoon Ms. Rodriguez,

I have a FOIA request in that I was hoping you could look at. The requester mentions that Congress wrote to Secretary Carson and asked for some records to be provided by 7/25/17, and the requester is asking for copies of those same records. If this is something that was produced in the past, presumably we have it as a package ready to go. Do you know if that is the case? If so, is the Secretary's office in possession of this, or should I check elsewhere, like CIR? Any information you have would be greatly appreciated. The request is attached.

As always, I appreciate your time.

Best,

Ethan

Helen, what I am referring to is not a FOIA request but a Congressional request. The request asked for information regarding Starrett City (NYC) and we were running through the FOIA process. Seth and I met with you in your office a few weeks ago to discuss generating this report every two weeks.

There doesn't appear to be anything in the report generated last evening related to Starrett City.

Michael, this reports are automatically generated Weds morning and I send them out on Weds afternoon after I review them. We don't redacted PII because this information (essentially a FOIA log) is s frequently requested and must be released to the public (there is no unique privacy interest in who requested information under FOIA, or what information was requested, especially when Federal employees are named.)

I apologize for the phone tag. I have been on annual leave since last week, but I am always available to you by cell. (b) (6) . You can also feel free to reach out to Deborah Snowden or Deena Jih with FOIA questions. They are the true SMEs at HUD.

Also, I have tried to call a few times over the last week and constantly get sent to VM, is there a better number to contact you on?

Many thanks,

Seth, my thought is that you give an overview of your vision for your office. What kinds of activities are important to you and what our regional leaders can do to support your efforts. It's only a half hour so perhaps 15 minutes of presentation and 15 for a talk with them? I am sure they have questions to ask you. Sound ok? If you have any read ahead material, please send them to me so we can get out to them in advance. They are a great bunch and are eager to figure out how to best support your work. Please let me know if this answers your question or if you want to talk.

Typically, we bring the DRAs in for a couple of days every quarter for program updates. However, given our budget situation we are going to try this modality for two quarters. Gentleman, on Thursday August 10th OFPM will be conducting a daylong VTC based meeting with our Deputy Regional Administrators. I have taken the liberty of blocking off 1/2 hour for each of you should you choose to present updates to the DRAs. Typically, we bring the DRAs in for a couple of days every quarter for program updates. However, given our budget situation we are going to try this modality for two quarters. Please let me know if you will be participating. Best Regards, Jaime

Subject: RE: HUD response to request from Reps. Jeffries and Cummings office

Caitlin, we have contacted the staff for both offices and are working through the response on a rolling basis. We are handling this like a FOIA request, but it is not actually a FOIA request. HUD's infrastructure is just set up to handle it as such. Due to the large amount of information requested, and the length we have to go back, we are providing documents on a rolling basis as we continue to collect the info.

Not sure if that is the answer you need, glad to discuss more this week.

To: Raphael.L.Williams@hud.gov

Good evening Raphael,
I hope you are doing well. My name is Nicole Lafond and I am a reporter and grad student at Columbia University. I am reaching out because I have a quick question about the letter Reps. Elijah Cummings and Hakeem Jeffries sent HUD about a month ago, related to the Starrett City development in NYC. I saw they asked for a response or some documents by July 28. Did HUD meet that deadline or do you know if the Department is planning to respond to the inquiry? I was just curious if I could get a statement from your office related to this matter.
Let me know. Thank you for your time!
Nicole

Subject: DRA VTC Meeting - August 10, 2017

Gentleman, on Thursday August 10th OFPM will be conducting a daylong VTC based meeting with our Deputy Regional Administrators. I have taken the liberty of blocking off 1/2 hour for each of you should you choose to present updates to the DRAs. Typically, we bring the DRAs in for a couple of days every quarter for program updates. However, given our budget situation we are going to try this modality for two quarters. Please let me know if you will be participating. Best Regards, Jaime

Seth, my thought is that you give an overview of your vision for your office. What kinds of activities are important to you and what our regional leaders can do to support your efforts. It's only a half hour so perhaps 15 minutes of presentation and 15 for a talk with them? I am sure they have questions to ask you. Sound ok? If you have any read ahead material, please send them to me so we can get out to them in advance. They are a great bunch and are eager to figure out how to best support your work. Please let me know if this answers your question or if you want to talk.

Thanks, Jaime

Subject: DRA VTC Meeting - August 10, 2017

Gentleman, on Thursday August 10th OFPM will be conducting a daylong VTC based meeting with our Deputy Regional Administrators. I have taken the liberty of blocking off 1/2 hour for each of you should you choose to present updates to the DRAs. Typically, we bring the DRAs in for a couple of days every quarter for program updates. However, given our budget situation we are going to try this modality for two quarters. Please let me know if you will be participating. Best Regards, Jaime

We are free to make any information we choose public if it furthers our mission with 3 important exceptions:

1) personally identifiable information
2). Privileged information
3) Business confidential information (i.e. Information businesses are required to give us about their business in order to receive benefits or service.

Here, the name and address of the recipient appears to be a business and an individual acting in his business capacity, so it is not PII. The same analysis applies to the signatory and the other hud employee mentioned. So they do NOT need to be redacted for release. Nothing else here would be subject to privilege or be considered business confidential so this letter can be released in full. If you choose to do that please let me know do we can post it in our FOIA reading room after its release. It cuts down on the number of repeat requests we may get.

Warm Regards,
Helen

Hi Victoria,

Thanks for following up on this item. In each of the circumstances described below, correspondence has been returned to us to implement the Current Guidance. While relatively minor, CIR's publication of correspondence guidance (including clarifying any of the examples below) will help expedite responses to Congressional inquiries. I must give credit to our program support specialist (administrative staff) for pointing these out to me.

Item	Current Correspondence Guidance	Historic Correspondence Guidance
Use of "HUD" in correspondence	Must write out Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD)	Published HUD Correspondence Handbook (page I-5, letter H) specifically indicates NEVER write HUD

		in parentheses after spelling out the entire name of the Department
Use of "HUD" and "Department"	Unclear. We have written "Department" has been replaced with "HUD" and vice versa, with no rationale for the change	HUD Correspondence Handbook suggests use "Department" and "HUD" interchangeably
Reference to authoring program office	Unclear. FOREWORD

The purpose of the Departmental Correspondence Handbook is to provide specific guidelines to: (1) assist in responding as quickly and efficiently as possible to correspondence that the Department of Housing and Urban Development receives from a variety of federal, state, and local government officials and other parties, including private citizens; and (2) assist in preparing memoranda and other internal correspondence.

Being responsive to the needs of correspondence received from the outside is central to the Department's mission, and those responses must be timely and in plain English. All employees are required to use this handbook in the preparation of correspondence, both in responding to external correspondence and in drafting internal correspondence.

By following the guidance outlined in this handbook, the correspondence process will be expedited. Suggestions on improvement of the process are welcome and may be submitted via the Executive Secretariat website, http://hudatwork.hud.gov/po/es/, for consideration.

CHAPTER I. PREPARING CORRESPONDENCE

1-1 Purpose.

This chapter contains information on departmental policy and standards for how letters and memorandums -- including general, secretarial, White House, and congressional correspondence -- are prepared.

A. For details on preparing letters, see Chapter II.

B. For details on preparing memorandums, see Chapter III.

C. For details on preparing secretarial correspondence (other than congressional correspondence), see Chapter IV.

D. For details on preparing White House correspondence, see Chapter V.

E. For details on preparing congressional correspondence, see Chapter VI.

1-2 Use.

Use of this handbook is mandatory departmentwide. All prior versions are obsolete.

A. This handbook presents departmental policies and procedures for preparing correspondence. Correspondence may not be prepared contrary to the procedures set forth herein.

The originator and concurring/reviewing officials of correspondence may not impose their personal style preferences over the handbook standards nor return correspondence for retyping to reflect personal preferences.

1-3 Policies for Originators.

A. Answer informally as much incoming correspondence as possible. Use the telephone or email to save time and reduce the document preparation workload. Keep telephone calls and emails short, courteous, and to the point.

Note: Do not use the telephone or email to answer incoming correspondence that: (a) would affect proposed or existing HUD policies, (b) must be reviewed by, or coordinated with, other offices, or (c) when office protocol requires the preparation of a more formal response.

B. Form Letter. Develop and use form letters to respond to requests for publications, blank forms, or other printed material when the same information is frequently requested. (See Exhibit 1-1 for sample form letter.)

HUD-17-0235-B-001139

C. If the information requested is available on the Internet, refer the customer to the website. Send only hud.gov website links or other public website addresses. When referring to a website address in the body of a letter or email response, underline the website address. Do not set the address out in any other way; for example, in boldface or in parentheses.

D. Types of Responses to Controlled Correspondence.

1. Acknowledgment Letter: Lets the sender know that their letter was received and will be answered soon. Prepare an acknowledgment when no information can be obtained by the deadline.

2. Interim Letter: A partial response prepared when some, but not all, of the information is available by the deadline.

3. Final Letter: A full response, or the final response following an interim letter.

E. Multiple Addressees.

Prepare letters using one of the following:

1. An original for each addressee;

2. In response to incoming correspondence with multiple signatures, a single reply addressed to the first person who signed the letter. In the first paragraph, state that the reply is also intended for the other addressees; or

3. In response to petitions or resolutions, a single reply addressed to the person who submitted the petition or resolution, or to the first person who signed it. In the body of the letter, mention the other addressees as a group.

F. Congressional Correspondence.

1. Congressional Constituent Correspondence. When a constituent writes to HUD as well as to a Member of Congress on the same subject, and the Member refers their letter to HUD:

a. Ensure that the responses to the constituent and to the Member of Congress convey the same information;

b. Reference the constituent's letter to HUD in the response to the Member of Congress; and

c. Do not reference the correspondence that was forwarded by the Member of Congress in the response to the constituent.

2. Congressional Correspondence With Multiple Addressees.

   a. When initiating a letter to more than one Member of Congress, prepare an original for each addressee.

   b. When responding to an incoming letter signed by more than one Member of Congress, prepare an original of the response, addressed individually, to each Member.

G. Opening Text of Letters. Opening sentences influence the tone of correspondence, which should display a courteous attitude and attempt to establish rapport with the recipient of the correspondence.

Good examples of frequently used opening text are provided below.

1. "Thank you for your letter of [date], [concerning…]; [expressing…]; [supporting…]; [on behalf of…]." The date of the incoming letter should be included in the opening sentence to establish clear timelines.

2. For undated correspondence, use "Thank you for your letter, which was received on [date], [concerning…]; [expressing…]; [supporting…]; [on behalf of…]."

3. "This is in further response to your letter of [date], [concerning…]; [expressing…]; [supporting…]; [on behalf of...]."

4. For correspondence addressed to the Secretary or Deputy Secretary and referred for direct reply, use: "On behalf of [Secretary] [Deputy Secretary] [last name], thank you for your letter of [date], [concerning…]; [expressing…]; [supporting…]; [on behalf of…]."

5. For White House correspondence, see Chapter V for opening text examples.

6. For correspondence addressed to the Secretary or Deputy Secretary and controlled for the signature of the Assistant Secretary for Congressional and Intergovernmental Relations, use: "On behalf of [Secretary] [Deputy Secretary] [last name], thank you for your letter of [date], [concerning…]; [expressing…]; [supporting…]; [on behalf of…]."

7. When a member of Congress requests that HUD reply directly to the constituent use: "[Senator] [Representative] [full name] has asked the Department of Housing and Urban Development to reply to your letter of [date], [concerning…]; [expressing…]; [supporting…]; [on behalf of…]."

H. Plural Pronouns. Use "the Department" or "HUD" instead of "we," "our," or "us." (e.g., "The Department has intensified its focus on monitoring and program compliance." instead of "We have intensified our focus on monitoring and program compliance.")

I. Abbreviations/Acronyms. Abbreviations and acronyms are good shorthand devices; however, avoid overusing them. An abbreviation or acronym must be spelled out the first time it is used (e.g., Office of Management and Budget (OMB)).

Exception: Never put the acronym HUD in parentheses after referring to the Department of Housing and Urban Development. The use of HUD, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, or the Department is appropriate throughout the letter.

J. Correspondence More Than 60 Days Old. If the correspondence is more than 60 days old, do not refer to it as a "recent letter." Instead, use "letter."

K. Gender-Biased Language. Avoid using gender-biased language. Use the gender-neutral references "one," "person," "individual," or the plural "their" in place of gender specific nouns and pronouns when making a general reference.

L. Enclosures. In the text of letters, identify any accompanying material as an enclosure. Multiple enclosures should be tabbed for easy reference. An enclosure too bulky to accompany the letter may be sent as a separate package. State in the text that it is being sent under separate cover.

M. Attachments. In the text of memorandums, identify any accompanying material as an attachment. Multiple attachments should be tabbed for easy reference.

N. Closing Text of Letters. Closing sentences are influential in establishing good rapport. Good examples of frequently used closing text are provided below.

1. "Thank you for your interest in the Department's programs."

2. "I hope the information provided is helpful."

3. "I appreciate your interest in (name of program)."

4. "I hope this information is helpful in responding to your constituent." (for congressional correspondence)

5. When appropriate, in the last paragraph, include the name, area code, telephone number, and extension, as well as the email address, of someone who can answer questions about the content. Note: Do not identify program staff as the point of contact in congressional letters signed by Office of Congressional and Intergovernmental Relations officials.

O. Content. Outgoing correspondence must:

1. Ensure that the concerns expressed in the incoming correspondence are thoroughly addressed and that questions are adequately answered;

2. Be concise and to the point;

3. Be written in plain English, not technical jargon;

4. Accurately state the Department's policies;

5. Give a good impression of HUD;

6. Present negative information in a tactful way; and

7. Be error free.

1-4 Control of Correspondence.

The Department uses an official correspondence tracking system (CTS) to control all correspondence. HUD staff in each program and field office must use CTS to document the status of controlled correspondence in their office.

A. Correspondence Unit Chiefs/Points of Contact. Each HUD Headquarters program office, and regional and field office, must have a designated correspondence unit chief or a point of contact for correspondence matters.

B. CTS Control. The CTS control is an official record that:

1. Establishes the information and/or action needed to appropriately manage incoming correspondence; and

2. Documents correspondence and actions initiated within departmental offices.

C. Freedom of Information Act and Privacy Act. Special requirements apply for responding to Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) requests and Privacy Act requests. All FOIA requests received in Headquarters must be forwarded immediately to the FOIA division in the Executive Secretariat for appropriate handling. FOIA requests received in a regional or field office must be forwarded immediately to the regional or field office FOIA Liaison for appropriate handling.

All Privacy Act requests received by the Department, including requests seeking information contained in personnel records, must be forwarded immediately to the Department's Privacy Act Officer for appropriate handling. All Privacy Act requests received in a regional or field office must be forwarded immediately to the regional or field office Privacy Act Officer for appropriate handling.

Follow concurrence, clearance, and dispatch procedures used by your program office's correspondence unit or point of contact for correspondence, to ensure accordance with current departmental policies and standards.

2-16 Accommodating Persons with Disabilities and Persons with Limited English Proficiency.

The Department is committed to ensuring that its correspondence is effectively communicated with its employees, applicants, participants, personnel of other federal entities, and members of the public who have disabilities. Accordingly, your office should endeavor to provide correspondence in alternative formats when necessary to effectively communicate with persons with disabilities. For example, where the Department provides informal correspondence by telephone, the appropriate offices will attempt to make available telecommunication devices for deaf persons (TDDs), placing calls using telephone or video relay services or some equally effective communication system when it is necessary to effectively communicate with persons who are deaf or hard of hearing and, where the Department provides written correspondence, the appropriate offices will endeavor to provide the content of the written correspondence in an appropriate, alternative format (large print, electronic format such as email or MS Word document, or Braille) when it is necessary to effectively communicate with persons who are blind or have low vision. The person with a disability is generally in the best position to determine which means of communication will be effective given that individual's disability; communication skill; and the length, nature, complexity, and content of the communication (e.g., use of legal or technical terms).

The Department is also committed to ensuring that its correspondence is effectively communicated with persons who have limited English proficiency (LEP). Questions about providing correspondence in translated formats for persons who have LEP should be directed to the Office of Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity.

CHAPTER V. WHITE HOUSE CORRESPONDENCE

5-1 Purpose.

The term White House correspondence refers to correspondence to and from the President, Vice President, First Lady, and the Executive Office of the President. This chapter explains how to prepare and dispatch White House correspondence.

A. For information on how letters and memorandums are written, see Chapter I.

B. For details on preparing letters, see Chapter II.

C. For details on preparing memorandums, see Chapter III.

D. For details on preparing secretarial correspondence, other than congressional correspondence, see Chapter IV.

E. For details on preparing congressional correspondence, see Chapter VI.

5-2 Use.

5-3 Control of Correspondence.

A. White House-Originated Correspondence. The Executive Secretariat controls in CTS secretarial correspondence that HUD receives from the White House, including:

2. Mail received by the White House and referred to HUD for action; and

3. Mail received by the White House and referred to another federal agency that, in turn, rerouted the White House referral to HUD.

NUMERALS

There are five basic rules to remember:

1. Spell out numbers nine and under.

   The house has four rooms.

2. Use figures for numbers 10 and greater.

   The house has 14 rooms.

3. Never begin a sentence with a numeral.

   Five new rooms were added to the house.

4. When 2 or more numbers appear in a sentence and 1 of them is 10 or larger, figures are used for each number.

   The class has 11 boys and 6 girls.
   The class has two boys and three girls.

5. Units of time, measurement, and money are expressed as follows:

   1 calendar year
   6 years, 2 months, 6 weeks, 3 days (but four centuries, three decades)
   10 feet
   15 cubic yards one gallon
   2 percent

   $8 (not $8.00)
   $5.75 million
   $1 billion

   However, units of time, measurement, and money do not affect the usage of other numbers in a sentence.

   The four men finished the project in 8 weeks.
   The 4 men finished the 10 projects in 8 weeks.

Examples of commonly used units of time:

Tom,

This email acknowledges receipt of the letter sent by Chairman Smith to Secretary Carson and the related instructions. I briefly scanned over the five (5) page document and noticed one area of immediate concern. On page 4, the second paragraph midway toward the bottom reads, "...please provide the following documents and information as soon as possible, but no later than July 27, 2017." The letter is dated with today's date: July 27, 2017.

Please allow HUD additional time to review and respond to this oversight request. Is it possible to amend the letter?

Responding to Committee Document Requests

1. In complying with this request, you are required to produce all responsive documents, in unredacted form, that are in your possession, custody, or control, whether held by you or your past or present agents, employees, and representatives acting on your behalf. You should also produce documents that you have a legal right to obtain, that you have a right to copy or to which you have access, as well as documents that you have placed in the temporary possession, custody, or control of any third party. Requested records, documents, data or information should not be destroyed, modified, removed, transferred or otherwise made inaccessible to the Committees.

2. In the event that any entity, organization or individual denoted in this request has been, or is also known by any other name than that herein denoted, the request shall be read also to include that alternative identification.

3. The Committee's preference is to receive documents in electronic form (i.e., CD, memory stick, or thumb drive) in lieu of paper productions.

4. Documents produced in electronic format should also be organized, identified, and indexed electronically.

5. Electronic document productions should be prepared according to the following standards:

   (a) The production should consist of single page Tagged Image File ("TIF"), or PDF files.

   (c) If the production is completed through a series of multiple partial productions, field names and file order in all load files should match.

6. Documents produced to the Committee should include an index describing the contents of the production. To the extent more than one CD, hard drive, memory stick, thumb drive, box or folder is produced, each CD, hard drive, memory stick, thumb drive, box or folder should contain an index describing its contents.

7. Documents produced in response to this request shall be produced together with copies of file labels, dividers or identifying markers with which they were associated when the request was served.

8. When you produce documents, you should identify the paragraph in the Committee's schedule to which the documents respond.

9. It shall not be a basis for refusal to produce documents that any other person or entity also possesses non-identical or identical copies of the same documents.

10. If any of the requested information is only reasonably available in machine-readable form (such as on a computer server, hard drive, or computer backup tape), you should consult with the Committee staff to determine the appropriate format in which to produce the information.

11. If compliance with the request cannot be made in full by the specified return date, compliance shall be made to the extent possible by that date. An explanation of why full compliance is not possible shall be provided along with any partial production. Failure to provide an explanation constitutes a waiver of any objections to the subpoena.

12. In the event that a document is withheld on the basis of privilege, provide a privilege log containing the following information concerning any such document: (a) the privilege asserted; (b) the type of document; (c) the general subject matter; (d) the date, author and addressee; and (e) the relationship of the author and addressee to each other.

13. In complying with this request, be apprised that the U.S. House of Representatives and the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology do not recognize: any of the purported non-disclosure privileges associated with the common law including, but not limited to, the deliberative process privilege, the attorney-client privilege, and attorney work product protections; any purported privileges such as privileges over law-enforcement sensitive disclosures; or protections from disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act; or any purported contractual privileges, such as non-disclosure agreements.

14. If any document responsive to this request was, but no longer is, in your possession, custody, or control, identify the document (stating its date, author, subject and recipients) and explain the circumstances under which the document ceased to be in your possession, custody, or control.

15. If a date or other descriptive detail set forth in this request referring to a document is inaccurate, but the actual date or other descriptive detail is known to you or is otherwise apparent from the context of the request, you are required to produce all documents which would be responsive as if the date or other descriptive detail were correct.

16. Unless otherwise specified, the time period covered by this request is from January 1, 2009 to the present.

17. This request is continuing in nature and applies to any newly-discovered information. Any record, document, compilation of data or information, not produced because it has not been located or discovered by the return date, shall be produced immediately upon subsequent location or discovery.

18. All documents shall be Bates-stamped sequentially and produced sequentially.

19. Two sets of documents shall be delivered, one set to the Majority Staff and one set to the Minority Staff. When documents are produced to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, production sets shall be delivered to the Majority Staff in Room 2321 of the Rayburn House Office Building and the Minority Staff in Room 324 of the Ford House Office Building. Upon completion of the document production, you should submit a written certification, signed by you or your counsel, stating that: (1) a diligent search has been completed of all documents in your possession, custody, or control which reasonably could contain responsive documents; and (2) all documents located during the search that are responsive have been produced to the Committees.

20. When representing a witness or entity before the Committee in response to a document request, request for transcribed interview, or subpoena from the Committee, or in connection with testimony before the Committee at a hearing, counsel for the witness or entity must promptly submit to the Committee a notice of appearance specifying the following: (a) counsel's name, firm or organization, and contact information; and (b) each client represented by the counsel in connection with the proceeding. Submission of a notice of appearance constitutes acknowledgement that counsel is authorized to accept service of process by the Committee on behalf of such client(s), and that counsel is bound by and agrees to comply with all applicable House and Committee rules and regulations.

Seth. I wanted to follow-up on our conversation last week related to NAHASDA. We are requesting the most updated information on NAHASDA's (1) obligated unexpended balance and (2) obligated unexpended balance of the largest tribal government or housing entity (assuming it is the NAVAJO). Thanks, Clinton

HUD Secretary Ben Carson to Visit Orlando (WMFE-FM 90.7, FL)
WMFE-FM 90.7
(7/16/2017 12:52 PM, WMFE-FM 90.7)
AUDIO. On Monday, the Secretary for Housing and Urban Development, Ben Carson, will visit Orlando to deliver the keynote address at the annual convention for LeadingAge Florida.

The nonprofit coalition represents more than 250 nursing homes, assisted living facilities, and retirement communities across the state.

Spokesman Greg Ungru is expecting Carson to talk about affordable housing for seniors.

“There is a housing crisis, especially when it comes to seniors. They have put in their blood, sweat, and tears, and we just want to make sure they have a good, clean, safe place to live,” he said.

In May, the White House released its proposed 2018 budget which includes cuts to affordable housing programs, a program that provides vouchers for rental subsidies.

Ungru said LeadingAge is paying close attention to the Section 202 Supportive Housing for the Elderly Program, which offers capital advances to finance construction, rehabilitation, and purchasing of affordable housing properties for seniors.

“A lot of our members, specifically some of them down in south Florida—our affordable senior housing members—have three to five year wait lists,” Ungru added.

Carson is expected to talk about HUD policy, as well as his personal and professional life as a neurosurgeon.

HUD makes $2 billion available to homeless programs (HousingWire)
HousingWire
(7/16/2017 9:04 AM, Kelsey Ramirez)
Encourages housing first approach

In an effort to end homelessness, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development will make $2 billion available for local homeless programs.

HUD will fund this venture through Continuum of Care Homeless Assistance Program in an effort to encourage housing first. Housing first is the idea that families need housing before they can take care of other needs such as alcohol or substance abuse, health and other needs.

HUD stated it is continuing incentives to adopt best practices for rapid-rehousing and housing first, an approach that has proven effective in helping communities to make progress on their goal of ending homelessness. It also explained it hopes this new funding will help move families quickly into permanent housing.

The department’s Continuum of Care homeless assistance grants support a wide variety of local programs from street outreach and assessment programs to transitional and permanent housing for individuals including veterans, youth, families and persons experiencing long-term or chronic homelessness.

“We know these grants can make a huge difference in ending homelessness” HUD Secretary Ben Carson said. “HUD continues to forge deep relationships with our local partners to invest in proven programs that are working to reduce the scale of homelessness in their communities.”

Next week, Carson will speak at the 2017 National Conference on Ending Homelessness organized by the National Alliance to End Homelessness. HUD announced he will be speaking at the conference in Washington D.C. on Tuesday from 11 to 11:30 a.m.

Tenants March to Stop Giveaways to Wall Street Landlords (Truthout)
Truthout
(7/16/2017 1:03 PM, Aditi Katti, Inequality.org)
President Trump's proposed budget would cut $7.4 billion in housing funding by eliminating housing vouchers, cutting public housing funding by $1.8 billion, and significantly reducing homeless assistance grants. While stripping support for low-income Americans, the budget would maintain programs that help fill the pockets of wealthy investors. The biggest private equity player in the housing market is Blackstone, which has become the country's largest landlord, owning more than $102 billion in real estate.

Speaking at the rally, Senator Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) blasted the administration for backing a $1 billion loan to Blackstone to buy public housing. "The government is literally using taxpayer money to make it cheaper for this multi-billion dollar Wall Street fund to buy up housing," Warren said.

Such loan guarantees and other taxpayer-subsidized perks for private equity housing investors would continue under the White House budget plan. This is hardly surprising, given the influence of Blackstone CEO Stephen Schwarzman, who has a personal net worth of $12.5 billion. He currently chairs Trump's Strategic and Policy Forum and is a close personal advisor to the president. According to Politico, the two sometimes speak on the phone several times a week.

Jonathan Westin, director of New York Communities for Change, a leading affordable housing advocate, pointed out that the role of the big financial firms is nothing new. "Every housing crisis in the United States has been brought to us by Wall Street, from the Great Depression, to redlining leading to housing segregation, to the recent foreclosure crisis," Westin said. "This new crisis -- the rental crisis -- has been brought to us by large corporations like the Blackstone Group."

After the kickoff rally, marchers carried out a "die-in" at the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and ended the day with a protest outside a luxury condo building owned by Blackstone.

Federal regulators warn lead testing system could produce inaccurate results (Boston Globe, MA)
Boston Globe

(7/14/2017 9:33 AM, Robert Weisman)
Federal regulators Thursday warned labs and health professionals that a lead testing system sold by Magellan Diagnostics of North Billerica could be delivering inaccurate results. In a statement, the Food and Drug Administration said it is reviewing evidence collected during an inspection at Magellan, a unit of Meridian Bioscience Inc., to see if a US law was violated.

The company's LeadCare test system was used to analyze blood drawn from about 15,000 children in New Jersey earlier this year, according to a report by NJTV News. Meridian, based in Cincinnati, issued a statement saying it was addressing the FDA's concerns with "the highest sense of urgency" and was committed to making sure the Magellan testing system was in "full compliance" with federal requirements.

FDA: Lead Test Company May Have Violated Federal Law (Regulatory Affairs Professionals Society)
RAPS
(7/17/2017 5:20 AM, Michael Mezher)
The US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) on Thursday said that lead test maker Magellan Diagnostics may have violated federal law in its handling of customer complaints and design validation for its LeadCare testing systems.

FDA cited the issues in a 10-page inspection report stemming from a month-and-a-half long inspection of Magellan's North Billerica, MA facility from 10 May to 29 June 2017.

A week into that inspection, FDA warned the public that all four of Magellan's LeadCare testing systems (LeadCare, LeadCare II, LeadCare Ultra and LeadCare Plus) could give falsely low results when testing blood drawn from a patient's vein rather than capillary blood.

With the conclusion of its inspection, FDA says healthcare providers should continue to follow it and the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's (CDC) earlier recommendations against using the tests with venous blood samples and for retesting patients that are at risk of inaccurate results.

Timely Insights from HUD Multifamily DAS (LeadingAge)
LeadingAge
(7/15/2017 5:01 AM, Colleen Bloom)
LeadingAge staff met July 12 with Bob Iber, acting deputy assistant secretary for multifamily housing, and a broad range of multifamily housing office directors and program heads - and covered a lot of ground on topics of current concern.

During a discussion with LeadingAge and a coalition of other housing provider, HUD staff gave timely updates on a range of topics.

Among the most significant issues, the status of service coordinator grant funding for FY17, After more than seven months without funding:

HUD gave LeadingAge staff strong assurances that 90% of all FY17 Service Coordinator grant funding will be out and available to properties in all parts of the country (including New York) by the end of July. This includes the batch 1 (60% of initial funding AND the supplemental 40% to fund the contracts for the full 12 most); and batch 2 (100% of funding). So if ANY MEMBER with grants in these two batches does NOT have full funding as of August 1, please send an email to us directly.

Other significant developments include:

--The CNA e-tool will not become mandatory until October 1, and could potentially be pushed out a bit further (if you have reasons that would support pushing the date out later, please contact us asap).
--The Energy Benchmarking mandate is not going into effect at this time, except for the Green MIP program (a very limited FHA insurance product, hopefully you know well if you've got it)
--VAWA documents that expired June 30 can continue to be used until replaced. HUD is preparing some minor tweaks, and a federal register announcement with 60 day comment is expected shortly. The VAWA lease addendum 91067 has still not been modified for the expanded programs. VAWA FAQs are still expected out "soon." And the deadline for having an emergency transfer policy has been pushed out until December 2017 (see also new VAWA notice H 2017-05 issued June 30)
--Recently published proposed FHA Flood Plain changes will not be enacted. A rescission/withdrawal to be published soon.

--Changes to remove the requirement to use EIV during interim certifications is in the works, as are efforts to revise the problematic "income discrepancy report" and revamp it into a new "income validation tool. As part of this effort, student income will be capped at $480 to eliminate "discrepancies" for incomes above that, and to make EIV more interactive so that bogus deceased tenant reports can be identified and disabled for future "discrepancy" reporting.

VAWA Regulation Supplements Final Rule (LeadingAge)
LeadingAge
(7/15/2017 5:41 AM, Colleen Bloom)
HUD's Office of Multifamily Housing Notice H 2017-5 provides supplemental Violence Against Women Act guidance to Multifamily owners and management agents.

On June 30, HUD posted Notice H 2017-05 Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) Reauthorization Act of 2013 – Additional Guidance for Multifamily Owners and Management Agents. This 44-page notice provides guidance to owners and management agents (O/As) of HUD multifamily assisted housing on the requirements of the Violence AgainstWomen Reauthorization Act of 2013: Implementation in HUD Housing Programs, Final Rule. As indicated by HUD, this notice does not encompass every aspect of the VAWA Final Rule and should be used in conjunction with the VAWA Final Rule. This notice, however, supersedes earlier Housing Notices H 2010-23 and H 2009-15.

Some features of the notice include:

--New definitions
--New notice requirements
--Provides model notice and model transfer plan
--Revises documentation requirements
--Establishes a new requirement for reasonable time for victim to establish program eligibility or find alternate housing
--Clarifies owner/agent right to create a VAWA related preference

[ME] Cyndi Lauper praises Collins: 'And she's a Republican!' (The Hill)
The Hill
(7/16/2017 2:26 PM, Josh Delk)
Sen. Susan Collins (R-Maine) joined singer Cyndi Lauper on stage at a concert Friday night, the Portland Press Herald reported.

"This woman is a hero, and she's my hero," Lauper told the audience, after inviting the moderate Republican to come on stage.

"And she's a Republican," Lauper said to loud cheers from the audience. The singer praised Collins for her work "with LGBT homeless youth."

"And all the homeless kids. I was blessed to testify before her committee, which was bipartisan," Lauper said, regarding an April 2015 meeting of the Transportation, Housing and Urban development subcommittee.

"We're just glad you're here," said Collins. The senator later tweeted to Lauper, saying "I will back you up anytime- on stage or off."

[VA] Essex Village in court over 18 criminal charges (WTVR-TV CBS 6, VA)
WTVR-TV CBS 6
(7/14/2017 2:27 PM, Brendan King)
VIDEO. RICHMOND, Va., - An attorney representing the owners of the Essex Village apartments appeared in front of a Henrico County General District Court judge for an arraignment on charges related to problems that have been the subject of an ongoing CBS 6 investigation.

The defendant, Essex VA Investors LLC, Paraco Inc. of Mechanicsville, has more than a dozen criminal summonses issued by the county. The company faces a total of 18 building code violation charges, according to online records.

Two of the five misdemeanor counts brought up in court Friday morning were described on court documents as violating Virginia code section. The violations included failing to properly maintain plumbing fixtures, garbage disposal, and sink pipes leaking to cabinet base; abate mice infestation; and failure to maintain interior structure in good repair, holes, and baseboards in a mechanical closet, which allowed pest and rodent entry.

An attorney representing the county said the 18 charges were grouped into three offense topics, including broken porches. That attorney told the judge they plan to go to trial without settling.

A woman, who county officials said were representing the Essex Village apartments in court, briefly spoke to reporters after the hearing. "We can't make a comment at this time, I'm sorry," she said. "We will be meeting with our residents." No time frame was given when that meeting may be scheduled.

The next court date for the five misdemeanor counts arraigned on Friday is scheduled for Sept. 25. The 13 other building code violation charges are scheduled to be heard on July 28 and August 4.

County officials showed CBS 6's original report to the Henrico County Board of Supervisors during a June meeting about problems at the low-income housing complex prior to announcing the criminal summonses.

In April, the owner Greg Pearlman told us they had maintained the property well, and in the past couple of months things had not been up to their standards. He promised residents would see major changes by the beginning of May, and some residents said improvements are happening.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development paid the company managing Essex Village more than $150 million to subsidize the rent of residents at low-income housing complexes across the country in 2016. The numbers were uncovered by a CBS 6 investigation after Congressman Donald McEachin called for HUD to terminate their business with PK Management, which manages three Section 8 facilities in Henrico County: Essex Village, Woodland Crossing and Hope Village. McEachin said PK Management properties isnot meeting the spirit of its obligation to provide safe and sanitary housing.

PK Management and their parent company, GHC Housing, received $152,110, 882 from HUD in 2016, according to information obtained through a Freedom of Information Act request submitted to HUD. The company receives more than $7 million a year from HUD to subsidize rent at its housing complexes.

Other elected officials are also beginning to respond to the ongoing investigation into the Henrico apartment complex. State Senator Siobhan Dunnavant said the living conditions at Essex Village are "Egregious" and she is currently in the process of drafting a letter to HUD Secretary Ben Carson.

[VA] Roanoke awarded over $2.7 million to eliminate lead based paint hazards (WSET-TV ABC 13, VA)

(7/14/2017 10:48 AM, Catherine Doss)
WASHINGTON, D.C. - Virginia Senators Kaine and Warner are announcing more than $7 million in grants from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

This money will go to cities and organizations in Virginia, including Roanoke.

The city of Roanoke will be getting $2,719,660 for the 2017 fiscal year.

Officials say the grants will go toward eliminating lead based paint in the city's older homes.

A total of $5.42 million will go toward funding and eliminating lead based paint hazards in low and "Very low" income private housing in Roanoke and Richmond.

According to the World Health Organization, lead can lead to serious health complications for everyone, but especially children.

[MO] Springfield residents give new ideas for spending $4M (Springfield News-Leader, MO)
Springfield News-Leader
(7/14/2017 6:13 PM, Alissa Zhu)
Some Springfield residents are challenging how the city plans to spend $4 million in less than a year.

Northside resident Katie Webb said she was "livid" after learning the city wanted to use grant money from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to fund projects such as bringing Jordan Creek above ground and making playground improvements to a Southside Springfield park.

Webb says the federal grant money should be used for other projects she believes would better benefit people living in or around poverty. It appears about 70 other Springfield residents probably agree. They signed a letter Webb emailed to City Council on Thursday with alternative project suggestions.

City leaders are defending the projects that Webb and others have objected to, saying they meet all HUD guidelines and they will make a big difference to people with low-to-moderate income in Springfield.

The letter, penned by Springfield resident Linda Simkins, will also be forwarded to HUD as public comments as the federal department considers approving the city's plan for spending grants. The public comment period for the plan will end July 18.

The group of citizens offered a list of different projects the money should be used for. They included building and equipping a new fire station in West Central Springfield, prioritizing building sidewalks and making playground improvements and addressing other issues such as slum, blight, mental health and substance abuse. They are asking City Council members to amend the spending plan before the final version is due to be filed with HUD in August.

The letter argues that the new suggestions do a better job of meeting HUD's national objectives for the program, including benefiting low-to-moderate income people and eliminating slums and blight.

Webb said, "We are asking (city leaders) to address health and safety hazards and they would rather make a park on the Southside of town prettier. That's the wrong way to use HUD money."

Director of Planning and Development Mary Lilly Smith refuted some of the claims made in the letter. "We think we have a good project list," Smith said. "It absolutely meets HUD eligibility. There is some geographic dispersion to serve low-to-moderate income populations throughout the community."

City spokesperson Cora Scott said, "It's a misconception poverty only exists in northwest Springfield."

Smith pointed out a portion of HUD funds are proposed to pay for improvements north Springfield neighbors have been requesting for years, such as building bathrooms in Tom Watkins Park and improving Nichols Park. The $4 million comes from a three-decade old commercial loan program that helps small businesses get started or grow. The loan program was started by the city using Community Development Block Grants from HUD. Smith said due to a change in how HUD defines what it means to use grant money in a timely manner, a large sum from the loan program will need to be spent on community projects by May 2018.

The city was notified in the spring it was not in compliance with HUD rules. If it's non compliant for a second year, the city would risk losing future grant funds, said a letter the federal agency sent to the city.

In May, City Council approved a plan which outlined a list of "shovel-ready" priority project suggestions assembled by city staff.

[OH] Housing For Men Returning From Prison Often Overlooked (Ideastream, Cleveland, OH)
Ideastream.org
(7/13/2017 12:39 PM, Matthew Richmond)
William Rodgers is moving into his own housing for the first time, a year and a half out of prison. He found this place through a program called Open Door, where he's lived for a year.

"Honestly I don't know what would have happened, if it wasn't for this place, I could have ended up doing something stupid again, you know what I mean?" says Rodgers.

Open Door is run by the YMCA, and affiliated with the county's public housing authority. For the men who finish the program, there's access to subsidized housing. But this kind of help is a rarity in Ohio: there are only 45 spaces available at Open Door and it's the only place like it in Northeast Ohio. And the waitlist for housing subsidies in Cleveland is thousands of names long. About 3000 people returned from prison to Cuyahoga County in 2014. For those that want the help, there's a range of mental health, employment and substance abuse services available. But when it comes to finding stable housing, the path ahead can be daunting.

Rodgers says he tried to find housing without subsidies shortly after his 10-year sentence for manufacturing drugs ended. He nearly got one at a building downtown until he told management about his felony.

"They said, 'maybe, because the felony conviction was old.' But I never heard from them again. I had the money and the credit to get in so the felony was probably the only thing hindering me," says Rodgers.

Returning from prison didn't always carry the stigma with it that it does today, says Charles See, the former director of reentry services at Lutheran Metropolitan Ministry

"When I started in '73, '74, we could go down to prison, we could bring folks home for community events, we would have art shows, and then we would take them back in the afternoon," says See.

He says Cuyahoga County has done more than most places to address the challenges of returning to society. But housing still gets less attention than other services. See's successor at LMM, Michael Sering, says they've started a program that takes houses from the land bank, refurbishes them and offers them to the homeless. Anyone coming through their men's shelter downtown is eligible, including those returning from prison.

"The upper limit from the Land Bank would be you know thousands. They talk about - could their housing stock end homelessness?" says Sering.

Cuyahoga County has the highest number of people going to and coming back from prison in Ohio each year. And there's nothing stopping a landlord from rejecting someone just because they have a felony record.

Maria Smith is an attorney at Legal Aid Society of Cleveland. She says a Department of Housing and Urban Development announcement last year could start to address that.

"You can use the legal handles of the Fair Housing laws to say to landlords - you can't use just a blanket disqualifier just because someone has a criminal conviction," says Smith, and adds that guidance by HUD makes a huge difference. There's already a federal case in New York challenging landlords who refuse tenants because of a criminal background.

[IL] Illinois lawmakers, HUD Secretary Carson talk Cairo in Washington; Sen. Durbin says Carson's concern for residents is 'genuine' (The Southern, IL)
The Southern
(7/17/2017 5:20 AM, Molly Parker)
WASHINGTON — Housing and Urban Development Secretary Ben Carson met with U.S. Rep. Mike Bost and Sens. Tammy Duckworth and Dick Durbin this past week in Washington to discuss the public housing situation in Cairo.

Durbin said he gives Carson "high marks" for his responsiveness to their requests for information. "He has shown a lot of personal attention to this and was kind enough to come in here into my office and meet with both of us for a lengthy meeting," Durbin said. "I think his concern about the future of the residents there at the housing authority is genuine."

"Of course, we want to make sure at the end of the day that they are the highest priority — that they feel that we are doing everything in our power to resolve this terrible chapter in their lives and that for these families, the next place they move will be a dramatic improvement … We want to make sure that both the secretary and the department get high marks when it comes to responding to the needs of these residents. That's the highest priority."

Carson held two separate meetings with the Illinois congressional lawmakers on Thursday — one with Bost, a Republican whose district includes Cairo, and another with Durbin and Duckworth, both Democrats.

WASHINGTON D.C. / CAIRO, Ill. (KMOX) — 42 Department of Housing and Urban Development inspectors have been fired due in part to ongoing public housing problems in Cairo, Illinois.

Congressman Mike Bost met with HUD Secretary Ben Carson to discuss what's been happening since HUD took over property management from the Alexander County Housing Authority in early 2016. But things weren't better with federal oversight.

"A lot of these, because of the lack of oversight, or because the inspectors turned their heads the other way, don't go in and do their jobs to make sure they are handling the public trust in the right way. That's what they did, they violated the public trust.

Conditions at some Cairo housing projects were so bad at the most recent inspection, some families were forced to move immediately because it would have been unsafe for them to stay. Bost, a conservative Republican, favors local control in most cases — but not here.

"If you have a corrupt local government and they put the people in there that have the kickbacks and do all the different things like was done here, and has been done in other locations around the nations, you're going to have to monitor very very closely," Bost told KMOX.

Roughly 180 households will be displaced, although Bost says he's working with HUD on a more lenient timetable. He's also pushing for legislation to ensure this doesn't happen again.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has awarded a total of $2,058,130 in grants funding Illinois agencies through the Housing Counseling Grant, and the Service Coordinator Programs.

U.S. Senators Dick Durbin and Tammy Duckworth announced Thursday that HUD monies will help families, seniors, and people with disabilities who live in insured and assisted apartment housing to live more independently.

Durbin issued a statement saying "These federal programs provide invaluable assistance to those in need and I will continue to fight for them in these times of uncertainty."

Duckworth said, "It's important that Americans who rely on additional assistance at home – including seniors and those living with a disability – have access to the resources they need to live healthy, independent lives."

21 housing service providers are receiving over $1M for the funding for the employment of service coordinator, to assure that elderly and non-elderly residents with disabilities get the specific support services they need.

In Galesburg, Whiting Hall Senior Apartments will receive over $23,000.

CHICAGO - Agencies across Illinois are receiving more than $2 million in federal grants to help seniors, people with disabilities and families living in assisted housing to live more independent lives.

U.S. Sens. Dick Durbin and Tammy Duckworth announced the grants from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

About $1 million will be split between 10 housing authorities to provide counseling and advice to current and prospective tenants about property maintenance, financial matters and other issues. The recipients include housing authorities in Decatur, Carlinville, Chicago and its suburbs.

Another roughly $1 million will go to 22 housing complexes statewide to employ service coordinators for apartment housing designed for elderly people and tenants with disabilities. They will ensure residents are connected with services they need to remain in their homes.

[IN] Now what? South Bend needs new answers for lead problem after money dries up (South Bend Tribune, IN)
South Bend Tribune
(7/16/2017 7:17 AM, Ted Booker)
Poisoning worse than expected, study says; no federal grants

SOUTH BEND — In the scramble for grant money to help solve the area's lead problem, South Bend and St. Joseph County have again lost to other communities across the country.

The area's struggle with lead-based paint in homes has received renewed attention in the last year. So why was the South Bend Housing Authority's $2.9 million grant application recently rejected by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development? The authority had been successful at getting money in the past; why was it turned down this time?

Officials in the city and county still don't have an answer to those questions.

And now they face a new question: What are they going to do to help remove lead paint hazards in homes that continue to pose a risk to small kids?

They'll need a new sense of urgency. A University of Notre Dame research team recently found that lead poisoning in several South Bend neighborhoods appears to be even worse than originally reported by the state.

In late 2016, the Indiana Health Department reported that there were three census tracts on South Bend's near northwest side in which at least 20 percent of the children were tested with elevated levels of lead. But Notre Dame's analysis shows there are actually eight tracts above that threshold. And in several tracts, the percentage of lead-poisoned kids was found to be higher than the state's initial report.

HUD had sent a combined $5.5 million to the South Bend Housing Authority in recent years to repair lead paint hazards — such as replacing windows and doors that have flaky paint — in hundreds of homes. But the funding ran dry last year. Officials had high hopes they could secure $2.9 million this year, but they were surprised when HUD rejected the request, choosing to award grants to other cities.

The grant locally would have been used to remove lead hazards in about 150 homes over three years.

South Bend officials will find out in a conference call with HUD later this month why the grant application didn't score high enough, said Chuck McMannis, a housing authority director.

South Bend wasn't the only rejected community, as only a handful of grants went to cities in the Midwest.

Indiana as a whole received a $3.4 million HUD grant, which will be divided among South Bend and five other communities to remove lead hazards and make other improvements. But that's still only a fraction of what the city wanted. Low-income families often don't have the money for lead repairs, which can cost up to $20,000.

[IN] South Bend loses out on HUD anti-lead grants (South Bend Tribune, IN)
South Bend Tribune
(7/16/2017 7:17 AM, Marek Mazurek)
SOUTH BEND — In late June, The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development awarded more than $127 million to fight lead poisoning in homes.

Grants from HUD were awarded to 48 state and local governments across the country, but South Bend — with its documented lead problems — did not receive any money directly from HUD.

Instead, HUD awarded money for its Lead Hazard Control Program to eight other cities in Indiana's region including Minneapolis, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Toledo, Ohio and Jackson, Mich.

Warren Friedman, a senior HUD advisor told The Tribune that HUD has five categories by which it evaluates each application.

Those categories are: the qualification and experience of the applicant, the need and extent of the problem, the soundness of approach the applicant demonstrates, how well the applicant is working with other organizations and finally, how the applicant evaluates the success of the grant.

Former compliance director cites 'unethical' actions in resignation

NEW ALBANY — The New Albany Housing Authority board and interim executive director knowingly violated internal policy and a U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development order, according to a former official's resignation letter. HUD confirmed issues with compliance.

The allegations of "possibly illegal and unethical" actions surfaced in a resignation letter tendered by Mike Bainbridge, the former NAHA director of finance and HUD compliance. The letter obtained by the News and Tribune was dated June 15 and effective immediately.

"When actions are taken by Agency leadership including the Board of Commissioners which blatantly and knowingly conflict with HUD rules and regulations, I'm left with no choice but to resign, as I cannot be associated with such activities," Bainbridge wrote in the letter.

After the board fired former executive director Bob Lane, HUD placed the housing authority on a "zero threshold" status "due to the instability of the management of the agency currently, and in our belief, that federal funds may be in jeopardy," a letter from HUD's Indianapolis Field Office to Board President Irving Joshua states.

A zero-threshold status means personnel matters, expenditures over $1, payroll and "all functions of the agency" must first receive HUD approval.

[ND] Grand Forks LaGrave on First project set for groundbreaking as soon as August (Grand Forks Herald, ND)
Grand Forks Herald
(7/15/2017 4:44 AM, Sam Easter)
A Grand Forks homeless housing project cleared a major hurdle this week after federal officials unfroze the funding it needs to roll ahead, with groundbreaking expected as soon as late August.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development issued a waiver document for the forthcoming LaGrave on First building, federal leaders announced Thursday. The so-called "housing-first" project is expected to cost more than $8.5 million, rise four stories above the intersection of Walnut Street and First Avenue South and provide the homeless with a permanent place to live. The building will also include on-site support, such as addiction counseling.

The project had been delayed earlier this year following a "procedural error" Grand Fork city staff made administering federal funding for the project. Federal officials discovered in March that a certain type of funding had been spent before the project had passed a public comment period, an important milestone in its environmental review process. Though no environmental problems were found at the site, significant funding for the project had been frozen.

The waiver, finalized on Wednesday and announced on Thursday, begins a process that could grant permission to ink construction contracts before the end of the month. It unfreezes roughly $1 million in construction funds as well as $5 million more in rental assistance for tenants over the first 15 years of the project's life.

"This is kind of record timing for approval of a waiver," said Meredith Richards, a senior community development official with the city. City Administrator Todd Feland said he's thankful for the North Dakota congressional delegation's support, all of whom signed a letter urging Housing and Urban Development Secretary Ben Carson to expedite the waiver.

Terry Hanson is executive director of the Grand Forks Housing Authority, which is spearheading the project.

"We think it's great news, and we sure are appreciative to everyone who put a lot of effort to making sure the waiver went through as expeditiously as it could," he said. "It's behind us and we're just moving on."

[AZ] $80M Navajo housing grant covers only 30 homes (Arizona Republic, AZ)
Arizona Republic
(7/15/2017 7:02 AM, Craig Harris and Dennis Wagner)
A Navajo Housing Authority plan submitted to federal regulators shows it will build just 15 new homes and an equal number of rental properties next fiscal year with a new housing grant of nearly $80 million, records show.

The NHA and tribal officials have said there is a need for at least 30,000 homes on the sprawling reservation that covers much of northern Arizona. However, The Arizona Republic over the past six months has documented failures by the agency to build sufficient housing despite landing hundreds of millions of dollars in grants for that purpose.

Navajo Nation President Russell Begaye and U.S. Sen. John McCain recently criticized the NHA for its lack of homebuilding despite being the largest U.S. recipient of federal dollars for tribal housing needs.

Interim CEO: Construction figures could rise

The NHA construction proposal for 2017-18 is laid out in its Indian Housing Plan, an annual report that must be submitted to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. This year's must be submitted by Tuesday in order to receive $79.8 million in federal grant money.

Roberta Roberts, the NHA interim chief executive, said the figures reported to HUD for new construction of homes and rentals are only base projections. The numbers could rise, she said, adding that the NHA this year completed 45 new homes and 86 rental units. Those units were paid for by previous grants.

Roberts also said the NHA could build more homes if it received additional assistance from Navajo Nation chapters (local governments).

Roberts recently took over from longtime CEO Aneva "A.J." Yazzie, who stepped down at the end of June amid scathing criticism from Begaye.

[AZ] Cibecue will benefit from nearly $10M housing grant (White Mountain Independent, AZ)
White Mountain Independent
(7/15/2017 6:37 AM, Michael Johnson)
CIBECUE - The White Mountain Apache Housing Authority either has or will receive more than $13 million that it plans to use for a new housing projects on the Fort Apache Reservation.

The Arizona Department of Housing notified the WMAHA that it was granted $9.63 million. It will be used to build 22 new homes with necessary infrastructure, renovate 22 additional homes, along with construction of a new community center and a new basketball court in Cibecue. The grant, along with previous grant awards such as Brownfield, AHEAD, ROSS and an upcoming Indian Community Development Block Grant, pushes the tribe's total grant awards to $13.24 million this year.

Tribal housing officials said Cibecue is "The most rural community on the Fort Apache Indian Reservation." The housing project is expected to create much -needed jobs for tribal members. WMAHA officials said Rainbow Treatment Center relinquished its site for the project. Tribal housing officials said the reservation suffers from up to 80 percent unemployment, with limited job opportunities and almost no economic development.

The $9.63 million is the result of what's called the Low Income Housing Tax Credits, or Tax Credit 7, which was created under the Tax Reform Act of 1986 and gives incentives for the utilization of private equity in the development of affordable housing aimed at low-income Americans.

LIHTC accounts for the majority of all affordable rental housing created in the country, according to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Meeting the housing needs of White Mountain Apache tribal members is the main purpose of WMAHA. This has been a challenge to the new WMAHA administration, WMAT officials said, given the limited funding and the deficiencies it inherited from past administrations. The new board of commissioners was appointed in June 2014 by the White Mountain Apache Tribal Council. The new eExecutive director, Victor Velasquez, was also appointed that same month.

Three weeks after their appointment, tribal officials said the HUD Office of Inspector General issued an audit report on July 8, 2014, covering the time period of July 2011 to June 2013, finding that WMAHA was not in compliance with certain Indian Housing Block Grant requirements. WMAHA also failed to complete several years of its audits, they said. Since that time, the oversight of the Board of Commissioners and Velasquez completed six years of audits, with the last audit being completed on time, with no findings.

"This is the first time in 13 years that a WMAHA audit has been completed by the deadline without any findings," board officials said. "WMAHA has also successfully negotiated a final settlement agreement with HUD that will close all the findings of the 2014 OIG audit, after final approval by the OIG. These monumental tasks have been very taxing on the limited resources of WMAHA, in addition to the day to day operations."

When developing a new television spot, Reverse Mortgage Funding decided to take page out of the Cola Wars handbook, inviting real consumers to take "the HELOC Challenge."

Decades after Pepsi famously dared soda drinkers to see whether they preferred its flagship product over Coca-Cola in a series of iconic commercials, RMF undertook a similar experiment with Home Equity Conversion Mortgage-eligible borrowers. But instead of two cups of cola, the borrowers received information about a traditional home equity line of credit ("Product A") and a HECM line of credit ("Product B").

All the participants know upfront are the facts presented, and that they're being asked to compare two types of home equity loans. And just like the participants in a recent RMF-supported study conducted by the National Council on Aging, they ended up liking the reverse mortgage far better than the HELOC.

Mortgage investors unfazed as Fed balance sheet plan looms (The Fiscal Times)
The Fiscal Times
(7/14/2017 3:32 PM, Richard Leong, Reuters)
NEW YORK - The Federal Reserve's plan for shrinking its massive balance sheet envisions a future with no holdings of mortgage bonds, a prospect that could present a significant headwind for an $8 trillion market the U.S. central bank now dominates.

Mortgages have modestly underperformed a slow-moving bond market this year, and the sector has seen a steady trickle of outflows of investor dollars, but no stampede for the exits.

Investors in the sector by and large remain sanguine, and big players are confident the Fed's glacial pace of portfolio normalization - and willingness to resume bond purchases if needed - will limit their downside.

"For now, it simply means that MBS investors should not be concerned about a sudden or drastic change to the Fed's willingness and ability to hold a sizable position of MBS for the foreseeable future and beyond," Walt Schmidt, manager of mortgage research at FTN Financial in Chicago.

Fed officials have signaled they plan soon to begin reducing the bank's $4.24 trillion portfolio of Treasuries and MBS, and market participants expect the process to begin this fall.

Fed officials, including Chair Janet Yellen, have stated a preference for holding only Treasuries in the future, in part to escape criticism that MBS ownership equates to picking winners and losers in markets and the economy.

That means that nearly $1.8 trillion of mortgage bonds, roughly 30 percent of the $6 trillion of securities backed by government-sponsored mortgage companies Fannie Mae, Freddie Mac and Ginnie Mae, could run off the Fed's portfolio over the next decade. It is a delicate maneuver that the Fed intends to ease into at a snail's pace.

Abandoning MBS altogether might send mortgage rates soaring and roil the housing market, a critical plank in the economy. So far plans telegraphed by the Fed have produced no sign of disruption even as mortgage interest rates have edged up.

Ginnie Mae MBS Issuance Rides the Tide of Rising Home Sales (Inside Mortgage Finance)

Mortgage firms issued $112.71 billion of single-family MBS during the second quarter, a 5.5 percent sequential gain, according to figures compiled by Inside FHA/VA Lending. The totals include MBS backed by FHA home-equity conversion loans.

Year-to-date issuance stands at $219.51 billion, down 0.7 percent from the first half of 2016.

The quarterly uptick in total issuance may not sound like much, but contrasts sharply with production at Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, which dropped 13.1 percent from the first to the second quarter.

Ginnie volume was up because the program has a deeper vein of purchase-money mortgages than the GSE market. Purchase loans accounted for 63.4 percent of Ginnie issuance over the first half of 2017 – and 68.1 percent in the second quarter.

The country's flood insurance program is sinking. Rescuing it won't be easy. (Washington Post)

PEQUANNOCK, N.J. — Time after time, as the river has risen and the water has crept up Roosevelt Street, Leni-anne Shuchter has fled the white clapboard home she bought more than four decades ago.

There was the night in 1984 when rescuers plucked her from a neighbor's roof as floodwaters engulfed her house. And the months in 2011 when she and her husband, John Van Seters, lived in a hotel after torrential rains from Hurricane Irene forced them to gut walls and floors and replace nearly everything they owned.

In between, other storms have forced her to file claim after claim with the troubled National Flood Insurance Program so she could rebuild. Yet the small home remains as vulnerable as ever, a reality reflected by its falling value in recent years.

"If I had a choice, I would sell," said the 65-year-old Shuchter, who dreams of retiring to Arizona or Nevada. "I don't need to deal with this anymore. [But] the reality of selling is nil."

Millennials Locked Out of Housing Market by $1.2 Trillion in Student Loans (The Street)

Average tuition at public colleges and universities spiked 81% from 2001 to 2009, but it didn't keep high school graduates from pursuing higher education.

It has, however, kept many of them from buying homes, according to a study by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York released on Thursday, July 13.

"Student loan balances and the prevalence of student borrowing have reached new heights," Zachary Bleemer and his colleagues wrote in the report, with aggregate debt nearly tripling to $1.2 trillion last year from $360 billion in 2004.

That has left millennials, the largest generation in U.S. history, less able to afford houses and is likely to curb their spending power for decades. Already, home ownership among young consumers has dropped from 31% in 2004 to 21% in 2016, while the number of them living with parents has surged.

Chase, Google Track Down Where Buyers Start Their House Hunt (MarketWatch)
MarketWatch
(7/14/2017 10:52 AM, Business Wire)
Chase Home Lending today announced, in partnership with Google, insights that show consumers are clicking their way to finding their first home and figuring out how much they can afford.

Chase Home Lending today revealed the "Search for Home Snapshot" at the Google New York City headquarters, along with TV personalities, entrepreneurs and authors, Drew and Jonathan Scott, who shared tips on homebuying and home makeovers. The Chase + Google collaboration examined how and what people are searching to find more information about homeownership.

The data shows search activity for first-time homebuying mortgages are at an all-time high, and affordability continues to reign as the top priority for perspective buyers. The bank's "Search for Home Snapshot" also found Southerners are Googling mortgage information more than consumers in other regions, and fixed-rate mortgages are still the preferred product for many searchers.

"We teamed up with Google to help us better understand what customers are searching for and how the home buying landscape is evolving," said Mike Weinbach, Chief Executive Officer of Chase Home Lending. "We found that millennials and first-time homebuyers are making a big splash in the market, and affordability remains top of mind."

[CT] Bridgeport attorney sentenced in foreclosure scheme (Connecticut Post, CT)
Connecticut Post
(7/14/2017 8:12 AM, Alexander Soule)
A former Bridgeport attorney will serve a 30-month prison sentence, after his conviction on charges of helping an Easton man scam area homeowners.

Odenton, Md. resident Bradford Barneys, 51, handled legal work at his Bridgeport office on behalf of Timothy W. Burke, at the time an Easton resident who preyed on homeowners facing foreclosure. According to the office of U.S. Attorney Deirdre Daly, Burke promised to buy those homes and pay off the mortgages and taxes, but did not make the promised payments while renting out the homes to other tenants.

Barneys received more than $70,000 for his work in the fraud, with Daly's office stating he pursued his own scheme in helping two Maryland residents purchase a property on Boston Avenue in Bridgeport, then collecting rent from tenants without the owners' knowledge.

In April, Burke was sentenced to nine years in prison.

[CT] State grant repairs 20 homes in Lisbon, Montville (Norwich Bulletin, CT)
Norwich Bulletin
(7/14/2017 6:33 PM, Stephanie Menders)
LISBON - A total of 20 homes have been repaired free of charge in Lisbon and Montville in the past two years. The repairs are thanks to the Housing Rehabilitation Program, a 2015 grant that the two towns received.

Both Lisbon and Montville were first-time beneficiaries of the grant and were each given $400,000 for housing repair projects. The grant is sponsored by the Department of Housing and Urban Development using federal funds allocated to Connecticut.

Lisbon First Selectman Thomas Sparkman is pleased with how the project has turned out. "Homeowners seem to be very happy with the program," Sparkman said. "The town has been very receptive to it and the work that has been done has gone smoothly."

The program covers crucial home repairs with no charge to the owner. As long as they remain in the house, the money does not need to be repaid. If they sell the house, the expense of the repairs will be taken out of the final sale and returned to the town. Homeowners had to meet a series of criteria before their application was approved. Homeowners must qualify as low- or moderate-income by HUD standards, must be up to date on property taxes and have 10 percent equity in the home.

Grant coordinator Lisa Lowe and Associates helped Lisbon and Montville apply for the program, but that's not where its work ends. "The application is extremely complicated. It's a 4-inch binder. But once that has been approved we keep working with the towns. We oversee projects and make sure everything is up to regulation," Lowe, president of the Oxford-based company, said. "Homeowners have needed heating repairs, septic repairs and countless other things. It covers anything to help people live safe and comfortably in their home."

[NY] Keep the focus on affordable ownership (Schenectady Daily Gazette, NY)
Schenectady Daily Gazette
(7/15/2017 6:08 AM, Michelle Larkin, executive director of Rebuilding Together Saratoga County)
Last month was National Homeownership Month and the media and our elected officials have highlighted issues related to affordable homeownership.

I think it's important to discuss what affordable homeownership means and how it impacts our community. According to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, housing should cost no more than 30 percent of a household's income. Many homeowners in our community spend much more than that on their housing, making them "Housing cost-burdened" and limiting what they have left to spend on their other needs, such as transportation, energy costs, food, health care and more. Many seniors in our community own their homes, and too many of them are cost-burdened and/or low-income.

According to U.S. Census data, 71.3 percent of residents 65-plus in Saratoga County own their own homes 23.5 perent of these senior homeowners are cost-burdened and 6.8 percent of seniors in Saratoga County are below the poverty level. Homeowners who are cost-burdened and/or are living below the poverty level are at risk of losing their homes due to the cost of a needed repair or home maintenance, such as replacing a furnace or roof.

Seniors face unique challenges because they will likely need accessibility modifications to make it possible for them to age-in-place safely, such as installing a wheelchair ramp, grab bars, or improved lighting. These modifications can be expensive and out-of-reach for homeowners who are already cost-burdened.

Rebuilding Together Saratoga County provides repairs and accessibility modifications for low-income homeowners, at no cost to the homeowner, and many of the clients they serve are seniors.

While National Homeownership Month only comes around once a year, we need to continue to focus on programs that preserve affordable homeownership, like those offered by Rebuilding Together, so individuals and families in our community can remain safely and independently in their own homes.

Leon Waddy grew up in the District's Shaw neighborhood in the '80s and '90s, but he doesn't recognize much of it these days. African American residents used to make up 90 percent of the neighborhood. Today, they're less than 50 percent.

"The demographics completely changed," he said. "When I was a young kid, it was a predominantly black neighborhood. . . . Now, it's pretty much a predominantly white neighborhood."

That is why Waddy and his wife, who were renting in Congress Heights, looked to historic, majority-black Anacostia in Southeast Washington when they began searching for a home.

"We wanted a neighborhood where we would feel at home, that would be like the D.C. that we know," said Alison Waddy, 31, principal of the Oklahoma Avenue campus of the AppleTree, a public charter preschool. "And that's what we found here."

"They look like us," Leon Waddy said of his neighbors.

With home prices across the city continuing to rise, east-of-the-river neighborhoods such as Anacostia and Congress Heights, which the District housing boom had largely passed over, are becoming increasingly desirable — and expensive.

[DE] State gives local government more teeth to fight vacant homes (Wilmington News Journal, DE)

(7/17/2017 5:17 AM, Xerxes Wilson)
With the rate of foreclosures in Delaware the third highest in the country, the issue has become a pressing one for local governments who have to spend taxpayer money to maintain the abandoned buildings.

Recently, the state legislature gave local governments more authority to screen those who can bid on abandoned homes being sold at sheriff sales. The goal is to allow local governments to ensure such homes are getting into the hands of those who will more quickly put them back into use instead of speculators who might let the home sit.

"We don't want (vacant homes) going to property owner who has a history of unpaid taxes, unpaid liens and history of owning vacant properties," said Mary Jacobson, a land use attorney for New Castle County government.

The new rules require those who want to bid at a sheriff sale to certify that they don't own other properties that have been subject to many code infractions common with vacancy in the past two years, own a property that has been vacant for more than 24 months or have back taxes.

Carrie Casey, a manager within the New Castle County's Department of Community Services, said the new rules are meant to help to protect local government's efforts to turn vacant houses around — a push that has been aided by state grants.

Earlier this year, the Delaware State Housing authority allocated $5.5 million in settlement money received from major banks in the wake of the foreclosure crisis to a handful of local governments and nonprofits to put toward the rehabilitation of vacant homes. It was the second round of such funding.

[GA] Reed to ATL homeowners: Don't sell cheap to 'predatory purchasers' (Atlanta Journal-Constitution, GA)
Atlanta Journal-Constitution
(7/14/2017 5:06 PM, Leon Stafford)
Mayor Kasim Reed is considering broadening a program he launched earlier this year that uses private donations to help low-income Atlanta homeowners pay skyrocketing property taxes due to gentrification, especially near the Beltline.

Reed said he may expand the Anti-Displacement Tax Fund, which raises financial support for Vine City and English Avenue homeowners from corporate and philanthropic dollars, to communities around Turner Field and near the Beltline. The fund, which launched in April, is expected to raise around $5 million for Vine City, English Avenue and other West End Atlanta neighborhoods.

"We are going to have to take more direct action along the lines of what we've done with the Westside Future Fund in terms of our Anti-Displacement initiative," he said in an exclusive interview with The Atlanta Journal-Constitution. "We thought that modeled needed to be replicated."

Reed said he is especially concerned about so-called "Predatory purchasers" - real estate entrepreneurs and companies hoping to cash in on growing interest in moving into the city - who might coax residents to sell their houses well below their value. He cautions homeowners to think twice about selling, no matter how tempting the offer. "You own something that is extremely valuable. Don't sell it when someone knocks at the door." "You got to know whatever they're offering for your property is less than what it will ultimately be worth because they have to make a profit," he said.

Reed said the city also will have to continue to seek out federal, state and private partnerships meant to address affordability, such as a $30 million grant the city received from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in 2015 to revitalize portions of west Atlanta.

[FL] Wondering if your homeowners insurance will protect you? You're not alone (Miami Herald, FL)
Miami Herald
(7/16/2017 7:50 AM, Andrea Januta)
As South Floridians head into a hurricane season predicted to be busier-than-average, homeowners are wondering whether their insurers will pay up if their house is hit — and how to find out before a storm arrives.

Marcelo Salup, a Coral Gables resident who owns a three-bedroom home built in 1954, spends between $5,500 and $6,000 annually on premiums to Heritage Property & Casualty, a Florida insurer created in 2012.

Salup said he isn't confident in Heritage's ability to pay his claims but doesn't think he has better options. "It seems to me like [Heritage] just appeared out of nowhere," he said. "But on the other hand, it seems that we as consumers are kind of trapped."

The squeeze may be tightening. While state-run Citizens Property remains the largest windstorm insurer in South Florida, 111 other companies hold the windstorm policies on roughly 79 percent of insured homes in Miami-Dade, Broward and Monroe counties.

[FL] New clean energy PACE firm plans full homeowner disclosure (Sun-Sentinel, FL)
Sun-Sentinel
(7/14/2017 2:51 PM, Staff)
VIDEO. July 14, 2017 - A new PACE financing program is launching in Florida on July 24 with protections to address concerns that some consumers aren't informed about the program's liens, service fees and property tax assessments.

Renovate America, a pioneer of the Property Assessed Clean Energy home improvement financing market, says the company's HERO program will offer Florida homeowners competitive interest rates and enhanced safeguards reflecting lessons learned from past mistakes. "We've learned a lot by doing, and Florida homeowners will benefit as a result," said Ari Matusiak, executive vice president at the San Diego, California-based company.

With Renovate America's entry, four PACE providers now provide financing for such improvements as rooftop solar systems, impact doors and windows, hurricane-resistant roofing, energy-saving air conditioning systems, hot water heaters, insulated siding and even awnings.

Initially, financing from Renovate America will be available in 26 Broward County cities, the unincorporated area of the county, five cities in Palm Beach County including Boynton Beach and West Palm Beach, and four cities in Miami-Dade County. The company hopes to add other cities and unincorporated areas in the near future, spokesman Matt Bevens said.

Interest rates ranging from 3.99 percent for five-year loans to 7.99 percent for 25-year loans will be offered. Those are lower than what the company has offered in the past, Bevens said. Borrowers will be given a disclosure form modeled after "Know Before You Owe" mortgage loan disclosure forms that break down all costs, including annual payments, application fees, interest rates, financing charges, total amount financed and cost of project.

Renovate America will personally telephone all borrowers before they sign to ensure they understand financing terms.

A federal class action suit filed in March in northern California in March by plaintiffs in Florida and California accuses Ygrene Energy Fund, Florida's largest PACE provider, of failing to disclose to homeowners that most banks won't finance mortgages for homes with PACE liens.

U.S. Sen. Marco Rubio, of Florida is co-sponsoring a bill in Congress that would require "Truth in Lending"-type disclosures to PACE consumers, while Florida Rep. Mario Diaz-Balart is sponsoring a measure that would bar the Federal Housing Authority from backing mortgages with PACE assessments.

The three other PACE finance companies operating in Florida also interview would-be borrowers and provide "Know Before You Owe"-type disclosures, said Jay Neal, president of the Fort Lauderdale-based Florida Association for Insurance Reform [FAIR], a non-profit insurance industry watchdog organization.

From time immemorial the government has tried to influence our behavior by rewarding or punishing us; "big brother" doesn't want us to smoke, so lawmakers tax the bejesus out of tobacco, they want us to drive electric cars, so we get showered with tax rebates and invitations into the cherished carpool lane if we go green at the car dealership, and they don't want us to linger too long at the curbside check-in at the airport, so the Dunkin' Donuts is conveniently located beyond the TSA checkpoint inside the terminal.

It's the classic carrot and stick approach, that manipulates people into doing what the powers that be want.

The most famous plum from the tax man is probably the home mortgage deduction. The theory behind this perk is that people become stakeholders in society when they have skin in the game. "Johnny lunch bucket" is much more likely to care about the condition of the roads, schools and environment in his community if it directly affects the value of his property and the quality of life for him and his family.

Unfortunately, the tide has turned and mullets are now more en vogue than encouraging middle-class home ownership, at least in California.

[CA] Wells Fargo stuck mortgage borrowers with extra fees, whistle-blower's lawsuit says (Los Angeles Times)
Los Angeles Times
(7/14/2017 8:44 AM, James Rufus Koren)
As Wells Fargo & Co. continues to be hit with fallout from its sham-accounts scandal, the bank is facing allegations that it put the screws to customers in yet another way: by slapping them with fees for delays in processing mortgage applications.

A former Wells Fargo mortgage banker who worked in Beverly Hills alleged in a lawsuit this week that the bank falsified records so it could blame holdups on borrowers — and that it fired him for trying to report the practice.

The legal action follows a months-long internal investigation into the alleged abusive practices, one that contributed to an executive shake-up in the San Francisco bank's mortgage business. ProPublica first reported on the alleged improper fees in January.

When borrowers apply for a mortgage, they are typically guaranteed a set interest rate — assuming the loan is approved within a certain time frame, often 30 to 45 days. If approval takes longer, the borrower can still get the promised rate but there are financing costs associated with extending the guarantee.

Affordable Housing

Only 0.1% of US minimum-wage workers can afford a 1-bedroom apartment, report finds (CNBC)
CNBC

(7/14/2017 1:40 PM, Ester Bloom)
VIDEO. The percentage of American full-time minimum-wage workers who can afford to rent a one-bedroom apartment in any U.S. state without being what the government calls "burdened" is so vanishingly small — less than one percent — that it rounds down to zero.

That's the conclusion of the National Low Income Housing Coalition, a lobbying group that pushes for more low-income housing and also reports that no full-time minimum-wage worker can afford a two-bedroom apartment in any U.S. state. Researchers define "afford" by people's ability to pay 30 percent of their income or less on the cost of housing, which may include their mortgage, insurance and taxes. Those who are severely cost-burdened must use 50 percent or more of their income just to cover housing.

The cost of housing has risen so significantly that even a one-bedroom is out of reach everywhere except in 12 counties located in rural Washington, Arizona and Oregon, reports Laura Bliss for CityLab.

Bliss notes that "more than 76 percent of renter households reside in a county or metro area where it takes more than 60 hours per week of full-time, minimum-wage work to reasonably afford even a one-bedroom unit. In California, the nation's most populous state, it would take 92 hours. In Virginia, it would take 109."

[ME] Evicted without cause and forced to live in shabby room, Portland woman dies alone (Portland Press Herald, ME)

Margaret Peters, who was 56, couldn't find an affordable apartment in the city and ended up in a condemned building that she was desperate to leave.

Margaret Peters wanted desperately to move out of the room she rented in a rundown, dirty, condemned apartment building in East Bayside – a place she said was unsafe.

But she never got the chance.

The lack of options for low-income people in Portland's hot housing market left her no choice but to stay for the time being and even fight an eviction order issued after the city condemned the three-unit building at 31 East Oxford St. because of excessive police calls about drug activity and other problems. She preferred to stay in the apartment she described as "nasty" while she looked for a new place, rather than return to the city's crowded homeless shelter, she said at the time.

On the evening of July 7, the 56-year-old was found dead in the apartment she so desperately wanted to leave.

The news came a day after her attorney, Katie McGovern, won Peters a one-month stay on her eviction so she could continue searching for a new place to live. But with demand for apartments in Maine's largest city so strong, she struggled to find a landlord who would accept a housing voucher instead of renting to tenants who could pay historically high market rates.

Three separate appeals were filed this week challenging a decision by Newton's City Council to allow a housing and retail project in Newtonville to move forward.

Each appeal — two in the state Land Court and one in Middlesex Superior Court — argues that the Washington Place project would adversely affect the neighborhood and that the council's approval process was flawed.

The development would include 160 units of market-rate and affordable housing, along with retail space, at the corner of Washington and Walnut streets, according to project filings.

The complex would replace eight buildings that have housed several businesses, including Karoun Restaurant, Boston Ballet School, and Newtonville Camera.

The Ocean State has the oldest multifamily housing stock in the nation, and yet it lacks affordable rentals. Tenants facing eviction for failing to pay rent don't often have lawyers to plead their case. The result? They're pushed out. Advocates are trying to change that.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — When the rent doesn't get paid, landlords and tenants often end up in Courtroom 3E at the Garrahy Judicial Complex on Dorrance Street.

While the small-claims court also handles issues involving restraining orders, debt collections and other civil matters, landlords' requests to evict tenants for not paying their rent take up a lot of its time.

On just two mornings one week in late June, District Court Judge Brian A. Goldman heard multiple nonpayment eviction petitions by landlords.

In some cases, the tenants weren't in the courtroom. And in most of those cases, the judge granted the eviction order.

[CT] Proposal for Sound Beach development in Greenwich grows (Connecticut Post, CT)
Connecticut Post
(7/16/2017 12:53 PM, Jennifer Turiano)
GREENWICH — Last month, the developers behind a controversial plan to build a new apartment complex on Sound Beach Avenue withdrew their application.

At 44-units, the 31/2-story, 43,201-square-foot complex was intended to replace a one-story medical building, just up from the railroad bridge leading into the village.

Now the developers are back, with a plan that's substantially larger than the original: 60 units, four stories, and a gross area of 52,189 square feet.

What's more, 30 percent of the units will be set aside as affordable housing, which government and service agencies agree is desperately needed in Greenwich — and which will give the developers a much greater chance of getting the project approved.

Under state law, municipalities that do not have 10 percent or more of their housing set aside for moderate- or low-income residents are given the burden of proof in zoning matters. If such a town wants to deny a development application that includes affordable units, it must prove threats to other public interests presented by the proposal outweigh the need for affordable housing.

[NY] Affordable Housing Construction and Preservation at Record Pace: de Blasio (DNAinfo New York, NY)

(7/14/2017 11:15 AM, Amy Zimmer)
MANHATTAN — The city helped finance a record 24,293 affordable housing units — a mix of new construction and preserved units — in fiscal year 2017, representing the highest overall number since 1989, Mayor Bill de Blasio said Thursday.

With these units, the administration is ahead of schedule to reach its $41 billion housing plan's goal to create 80,000 new units of affordable housing and preserve an additional 120,000 units by 2024, the mayor touted. Many housing advocates, however, were critical of the mayor taking a "victory lap," saying that too many New Yorkers in need are still being left out of the equation.

“By making smart investments we are stretching public funds and creating more and better homes for New Yorkers, from formerly homeless families to seniors, firefighters, police officers and teachers. We have more work to do, but this city is for New Yorkers – and we will keep it that way,” de Blasio said, unveiling the numbers while visiting Central Harlem’s Strivers Plaza, a new eight-story 54-unit development reaching families earning as little as $27,000 a year.

Despite criticism that much of the housing isn’t affordable to many New Yorkers — where the median household income is about $50,000 a year — the mayor noted that more than 40 percent of these units target families earning less than $43,000 a year, paying no more than $950 a month in rent.

The city shared new affordable-housing figures Thursday, underscoring that the mayor’s initiative is on track.

City officials, led by Deputy Mayor Alicia Glen, said 4,145 new affordable-housing units have been completed since the $41 billion initiative began in 2014, according to The Wall Street Journal. They also noted that construction had begun on 20,800 units of low- and moderate-income housing, and rent protections had been extended on about another 52,000 units. The 10-year plan was a critical part of Mayor Bill de Blasio’s agenda when he was elected in 2013.

About half of the affordable housing financed so far by the city is for families earning between $42,951 and $68,720 a year, while a third is for those earning under $42,950.

In May 2013, Meeks was the featured speaker at the GJDC’s Harvest Room when the group announced an agreement worth about $50 million with the Long-Island-based Blumenfeld Group, whose resume includes the transformation of the old Bulova Watch factory in East Elmhurst into a business office and conference center complex.

Blumenfeld executives at the time envisioned a big-box retail anchor and a 500-space parking garage. At an unknown point in 2015 Blumenfeld, according to sources, agreed to add an affordable housing component.

But by March 2016 the project was reported dead and the contract terminated. Neither Blumenfeld representatives nor GJDC officials would discuss the nature of the termination, with Knight saying that they would be putting out a request for proposals in spring 2016.

They did so last summer, with a call for a mixed-use project with at least 250 affordable apartments, including set-asides for artists, with retail space on the ground floor. The announced deadline for proposals was Dec. 2, 2016.

KINGSTON – Affordable housing agency RUPCO is considering its next course of action after the Kingston Common Council this week failed to approve a zoning change for the former Alms House at 300 Flatbush Avenue. RUPCO had planned to convert the vacant building into 57 affordable housing units.

RUPCO Executive Director Kevin O’Connor said on Thursday that despite the rejection they are look at their options to move forward.

“The common council voted five to four in favor of changing the zoning,” he said. “There was a protest petition that was brought forward that, if it is valid, would require a seven-to-two vote. So, we are looking at that and some other things as well, explore our options and making some decisions shortly. We intent to move forward in one way or another.”

O’Connor said there has been no development of senior housing in Kingston since 2001. Since then, the other communities in Ulster County have developed 469 senior units.

Mayor de Blasio says his administration is setting records for affordable housing, producing the most affordable homes in a three-year streak in the city's history.

"This is how we keep New York New York," de Blasio said Thursday. "This is how you keep the greatest city in the world what it is and what it was always meant to be, a place for everyone."

The mayor says the city has already preserved 52,000 homes, and another 25,000 are under construction since he took office in 2014. He says the administration is on target to meet his goal of building or preserving 200,000 units of affordable housing by 2024, and has spent $2.8 billion to subsidize the housing program so far.

But critics consistently say the mayor's affordable housing is not affordable enough for New Yorkers who need it the most.

Camber Property Group has teamed up with nonprofit Settlement Housing Fund to purchase a package of 11 residential buildings in the South Bronx for $70.9 million, property records show.

The Section 8 housing complex, known as Stevenson Commons, is located at 755 White Plains Road in Clason Point and spans 1 million square feet. It contains 955 units, 948 of which are residential.

The organizations purchased Stevenson Commons from Belveron Real Estate Partners, a San Francisco-based company that focuses on preserving affordable housing.

Settlement Housing referred questions about the purchase to Camber Property, which did not respond to a request for comment.

Brooklyn investor Joel Gluck purchased a Section 8 housing complex in Clason Point last February for $66.7 million, and nonprofit Phipps Houses hopes to rezone a property in the nearby Soundview neighborhood to construct a 220-unit affordable housing complex.

YORKVILLE — The developer of a new 22-story apartment building near York Avenue that had 35 units of affordable housing planned for the project will reduce that number to eight or fewer due to an expected change to a city housing rule.

Carrera RS LLC. and Sky Management filed plans in April to construct the mixed-use building at 505-511 E. 86th St., featuring 139 apartments — 35 of which would be set aside for low-income inclusionary housing — as well as ground-level retail space, a gym, a kids playroom, a pool, a golf simulator and a roof deck.

The affordable units would have included 18 studios, nine one-bedrooms, seven two-bedrooms and one three-bedroom reserved for those earning no more than 60 percent of the area median income (AMI). The 2017 AMI for a family of four is $85,400, according to the original plans.

Under current 421-a rules, the building was going to include a required 25 percent of its units set aside as affordable and use the air rights it earned by providing the apartments to build bigger at another site, according to attorney Alvin Schein, who represents the developer.

Plans for a 30-unit affordable housing development in the old Central Park Plaza area will be unveiled Monday at a community

The $9 million housing project, called Elim Townhomes, is the first project taken on by the Elim Community Development Corp., which is associated with the church. The 2.23-acres of vacant land are located across Chalmers from the church.

"We wanted to make an impact on the community," said Tim Hogues, board chairman of the development corporation. "This is one way we are able to do that – by providing affordable housing."

The church's town homes would be built adjacent to a $100 million project by Ciminelli Real Estate Corp. that could bring hundreds of new residents east of Main Street.

It's ironic that, in an age when shopping malls and some big box retailers are struggling due to e-commerce, developers are still pushing for a big mall.

The area is in the middle of nowhere. Ramps and roads would have to be built. One of the problems is that affordable housing is supposed to be built, along with market-value housing. It seems that the developers didn't want to spend money on this, although Mayor Bill de Blasio's push for affordable housing might speed up this idea. There had been talk that the affordable housing might be built soon, but now it appears that it might take decades because the developers can just pay a fine and not build.

It is great that the court decision against the proposal was 5-1. With the help of state Sen. Tony Avella (D-Bayside), and the support of groups such as the Queens Civic Congress, East Elmhurst Corona Alliance, Willets Point United, the City Club and other interested parties, this result was possible because it was a fight for parks everywhere.
Terrace On The Park

This large area of land should have been fixed by the city years ago so that the former and current businesses could develop and grow and provide revenue for the city, but there are so many millions of dollars available for a mega-mall or more sports stadiums that developers will keep pushing.

Allow Mayor de Blasio an election-year victory lap for the growing numbers of units produced by his affordable housing program, recognizing how stressed and strained voters are about the cost of keeping a roof over their heads.

Just remember who's paying to put some very pricey real estate within reach of working-class New Yorkers. Hint: It's not the real-estate developers the mayor first ran for office promising would play a leading role.

The nearly 78,000 apartments built, underway or refinanced since his Jan. 2014 arrival in City Hall will be welcomed by grateful tenants paying rents below, sometimes sharply below, nosebleed-high market prices.

De Blasio's just wrapped up the city's biggest 12-month spurt since 1989, rivaling the legendary output of Mayor Koch.

[PA] Philly Proposal Looks Ahead to Less Affordable Future (Next City)
Next City
(7/17/2017 5:20 AM, Jared Brey)
Philadelphia celebrated its 10th straight year of population gains in 2016, according to census data. But compared to other big U.S. cities, Philly's 21st-century rebound has been modest, and taken as a whole, the city has a long way to go before it confronts the affordability crises plaguing places like San Francisco and New York.

Still, downtown Philadelphia has been transformed over the last decade or so. New hotels and apartment towers dot the skyline, and real estate prices have skyrocketed in the rowhouse neighborhoods that surround Center City. Some local officials now feel like the time is right to start locking in a measure of affordability before housing gets completely out of reach for average earners.

In June, City Councilwoman Maria Quiñones-Sánchez introduced a bill that would put a mandatory inclusionary zoning policy on the books. Under the policy, developers building residential projects of 10 units or more would be required to set aside 10 percent of units at rents or purchase prices below market rate. In the urban core, where the overwhelming majority of development has occurred in recent years, the set-aside units would be for renters earning up to 50 percent of area median income (AMI) or buyers earning up to 80 percent of AMI. (Philadelphia metro's household AMI is currently $83,200.) Outside Center City, where most of the neighborhoods in Quiñones-Sánchez's district lie, the income thresholds would be even lower: up to 30 percent of AMI for renters or 50 percent for buyers.

The proposal also includes an option to pay into a separate housing fund in lieu of building and offering below-market-rate units.

[SC] Workforce housing for a living city (Charleston Post & Courier, SC)
Charleston Post & Courier
(7/16/2017 12:30 AM, Charleston Post & Courier)
Currently the city's workforce housing rules are part of an important effort to help people working middle-income jobs — like teachers, police officers and firefighters — live closer to where they work. But as written, they really only apply to a very narrow segment of the city population.

A one-bedroom workforce apartment might rent for about $1,020 per month not including utilities, for example. And the maximum qualifying salary for a renter is about $37,000 before taxes.

Based on the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) formula, that apartment would technically be affordable — rent is less than 30 percent of income. But subtract income taxes and add utilities and rent ends up a lot closer to 50 percent. That's not a particularly sustainable formula for a long-term living situation.

And workforce housing is out of the question for anyone earning even slightly less than 80 percent of the area median income.

[MD] Baltimore faces an affordable housing crisis (Baltimore Sun, MD)
Baltimore Sun
(7/14/2017 4:26 PM, Robert J. Strupp, executive director of Baltimore Neighborhoods, Inc.)
VIDEO. Baltimore, along with other parts of the nation, is confronting a housing crisis - not the crisis that a decade or so ago caused the collapse of home ownership and mortgage lending. The rent affordability gap means that 25 percent of Maryland renters spend 50 percent or more of their household income on rent. In Baltimore City alone, some 150,000 cases are filed in rent court each year and approximately 7,000 families are evicted.

Recent media coverage continues to unravel the many layers of complexity that prevent tenants from having a "level playing field" with their landlord adversaries. As reported in The Sun ("Lawmakers seek legal aid for tenants facing eviction in Baltimore," July 3), local legislators are proposing legislation to provide assistance to tenants facing eviction and defend themselves against unscrupulous landlords. Advocates, judges, legislators, academics and the landlords have convened extensively and exhaustively to seek solutions to rental housing inequities. Some suggestions have included providing more legal and paralegal representation for tenants in court. Although there are non-profit agencies like the Public Justice Center, Civil Justice, Maryland Legal Aid and others providing assistance to tenants, the demand for help is astronomical. Currently, while landlords are able to be represented by agents (non-lawyers) as well as by attorneys, tenants must be represented by (and often pay) attorneys or represent themselves in court.

Baltimore Neighborhoods, Inc., where I serve as executive director, offers assistance through trained tenant/landlord counselors who provide information and guidance, free of charge, to anyone who contacts us. In addition to our community education and outreach programs, counselors respond to approximately 5,000 inquiries annually in Baltimore alone. We know more help is needed and we know more funding is necessary to increase our capacity, extend our hours and respond to everyone who seeks our assistance. This additional funding to support and assist tenants will not fall out of the sky. Based on current government funding challenges and federal government budget proposals, the future of public funding is bleak. The Trump administration is proposing elimination of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's Community Development Block Grant program. As reported by the Sun ("Baltimore poverty programs face cuts," July 9), the end of this program would mean a loss to Baltimore of $19 million a year. In addition to funding city government programs, the federal block grants provide vital funding support to over 60 non-profit agencies including BNI.

BNI's tenant/landlord program and hotline counselors uniquely serve the community by impartially disseminating information on tenant-landlord law and providing resources and referrals to landlords and tenants, all without charge. Our hope is that we will be able to continue this work so that all parties will know their respective rights and responsibilities and "do the right thing."

[NC] Curfew lifted at two low-income apartment complexes in Raleigh (Raleigh News & Observer, NC)
Raleigh News & Observer
(7/15/2017 5:41 AM, Thomasi McDonald)
The ACLU's questions about the Constitutional rights of residents has helped end a curfew imposed by the company that owns two low-income apartment complexes in Raleigh.

On May 27, workers taped notices on the front doors of tenants of Raleigh North and Milbank Court, two apartment complexes northeast of downtown, saying that Treetop Development of Teaneck, N.J., had partnered with the police department "To take back our community" and imposed a 10 p.m. curfew. The policy required children 12 and under to be accompanied by an adult at all times and forbid guests should from being outside without the head of household.

The curfew, as well as beefed-up police presence, were ostensibly aimed at helping thwart a rise in gang activity, crime and violence at the apartment complexes. The notices cited "Recent shootings, criminal drug and gang activities" at the 150-unit Raleigh North and 80-unit Milbank Court complexes, which sit on opposite sides of North Raleigh Boulevard near Lions Park.

But Irena Como, an attorney with the American Civil Liberties Union of North Carolina Legal Foundation in Raleigh, sent a letter to the property manager of the complexes saying the organization had received complaints about the curfew from residents, who all receive federal housing subsidies from the HUD to pay their rent.

After comparing the lease of one of the tenant with the conditions of the curfew, Como wrote that the 10 p.m. curfew was excessive and unreasonable and "Interfered with the residents' First Amendment right to association and due process rights related to their freedom of movement."

Como also wrote that posting the notice on tenants' doors without prior notice violated a condition of the HUD lease, which states residents must receive written notice of a rule change at least 30 days before enforcement begins. She also noted that leases allow guests to be outside on the property, unaccompanied. Plus, she said, the curfew policy was "Ambiguous" and left several residents confused. "When loss of subsidy or eviction is the potential result, House Rules cannot leave residents with so much uncertainty," Como wrote.

In a statement, the company said: "All management decisions made at Raleigh North are geared toward improving the quality of life for our residents, and the implementation of the curfew was intended to do just that. However, after receiving feedback and having further discussions with the property's management team, we concluded that the majority of residents preferred that the curfew be rescinded."

[GA] Low-income apartment complex could add beer and wine sales (Augusta Chronicle, GA)

(7/17/2017 5:11 AM, Susan McCord)
Augusta's Maxwell House, renovated in 2005 as a low-income apartment complex with units for recovering substance abusers, the homeless and special-needs residents, could soon sell beer and wine as Augusta Commission members tout a need to treat all apartment complexes equally.

"It's already readily available," Augusta cab driver Kweli J. Hall, owner of the new Greene Street Grocery on the building's first floor, said about alcoholic beverages. "Someone that has the addiction has to have the willpower on their own."

But residents stated concerns Tuesday about some of the fears raised a dozen years ago when Mayor Bob Young and downtown groups opposed the Augusta Housing Authority's bond issuance for developers to convert the building to Section 8 low-income and supportive housing.

The residents - including one who reversed her position the next day - last week cited drug- and alcohol-related violence inside the building that will heighten when residents can “stagger to the store” to buy alcohol when commissioners OK an alcohol license.

[GA] Oakwood 84-unit affordable housing plan is being proposed again this year (Gainesville Times)
Gainesville Times
(7/16/2017 11:04 PM, Jeff Gill)
An Atlanta firm is trying again to get tax credits to help fund an 84-unit affordable housing apartment complex in Oakwood.

“Tax credits are the major financing source for the project, and I don’t believe we could move forward without it,” said Gary Hammond, principal of Landbridge Development LLC.

He added there are “no changes to the site plan” submitted last year for the $12 million development, which is proposed on 9 acres off Atlanta Highway/Ga. 13 and Osborn Road, across from Blackshear Place Baptist Church.

Also seeking tax credits this year is Walton Communities LLC, which has teamed up with the Gainesville Housing Authority to redevelop the former Green Hunter Homes on Atlanta Street.

Already approved for tax credits in an earlier round, construction of the 252-apartment project will go through three phases. The first residents will move in next year, officials have said.

[FL] Editorial: Hillsborough leaders need to get on same page in chasing affordable housing projects (Tampa Bay Times, FL)
Tampa Bay Times
(7/14/2017 10:48 AM, Tampa Bay Times Editorial)
The need is too great and the stakes are too high for those involved with affordable housing in Hillsborough County to be fighting over the limited federal support that helps make it possible.

Yet a developer backed by Hillsborough County has asked a judge to disqualify the Tampa Housing Authority from receiving an award it won to help build Boulevard at West River, a $50 million apartment complex that would create 200 affordable housing units as part of a West Tampa revitalization project.

The developer cited "errors" in the Housing Authority application — and not just out of an altruistic interest in accountability: It wants the tax credits itself, for a $25 million, 144-unit affordable housing complex planned for Williams Road in unincorporated Hillsborough County.

If the challenge is successful, reports Christopher O’Donnell of the Tampa Bay Times, it would likely delay construction of the Boulevard for at least a year.

That is unacceptable.

A huge gap between supply and demand in affordable housing is a constant state of affairs in Tampa. But caught in the middle now are people with low and even middle incomes who are struggling to find housing in a Tampa-area market where rents are skyrocketing.

This painful shortfall threatens to grow more painful still under a Trump administration whose point man on the subject, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Ben Carson, has signaled that federal support may be shrinking. Carson said in May he doesn’t want to see people get too "comfortable" with government help in affordable housing.

For 17 years, Caroline Shook has served as chief executive officer of Housing Opportunities, which offers transitional residences for those in need.

A spinoff of Opportunity Enterprises, it started with eight units in an apartment building on McCord Road in Valparaiso, and now has 151 units spread among 31 properties in Valparaiso, Portage and Michigan City. They offer, depending on location, shelter to the homeless, transitional housing, and affordable housing.

Shook, who is retiring Dec. 15, said community support and partners, as well as a visionary board, helped the nonprofit serve more people than she ever imagined, yet the need exceeds what is available.

Jason Stanfill, who started with Housing Opportunities in 2011 as an AmeriCorps member running the agency's food pantry, will replace Shook on Dec. 18. He was hired as a foreclosure prevention counselor in 2012 before being promoted to the director of operations in 2014, according to a news release. He began serving as chief operating officer on July 1.

Stanfill oversaw the Park Place project, which started serving 15 at-risk women early this year. Under his direction, Housing Opportunities received $4.6 million in grants over the last three years, which helped rehab several affordable rentals in Valparaiso and Portage, as well as assisted with permanent supportive housing programs.

"His overall work ethic, insight and forward thinking as well as his humbleness and willingness to learn new tasks is exactly what the organization needs," Joanne Baitup, the agency's board chair, said in the release.

Shook was director of operations at Opportunity Enterprises, which serves people with disabilities, when Housing Opportunities began in 2000.

In late 1999, the Porter County Community Foundation applied for a grant from the Lilly Foundation on behalf of several nonprofits for a transitional housing program. A federal Housing and Urban Development grant with the same focus also came through, Shook said, providing $1.5 million for the upstart project.

Three West Michigan affordable housing projects have been awarded at total of $2.3 million from the state.

The Michigan State Housing Development Authority announced this week more $11.6 million in Low-Income Housing Tax Credits, or LIHTC, to 13 projects across the state.

"With this latest round of funding, 862 units of rental housing are planned to be built or rehabilitated using LIHTC," MSHDA Executive Director Earl Poleski said. "We estimate that it will leverage more than $104 million in private investment for Michigan."

Projects were spread across the state, with a majority landing in the Detroit area.

The West Michigan projects received $2.3 million from MSHDA. Two of the projects are in Grand Rapids and represent $19.2 million private funding for 45 units at Harrison Park Apartments and 36 units at Garfield Park Lofts.

DETROIT - Four developments in Detroit will receive more than $4 million in tax credits for affordable housing.

Mayor Mike Duggan says the credits will help create or preserve 385 units of affordable housing across the city.

The developments were selected for the federal low-income housing tax credits by the Michigan State Housing Development Authority. They represent a combined $110 million investment in the city.

The city says 271 units of existing affordable housing that soon were set to expire will be renovated and will keep their affordable status for another 30 years.

Another 114 units -- nearly half of which will be for families earning less than 30 percent of the area's average median income — will be built.

VIDEO. With the Fifth Street School conversion, Gorman reduced costs by about $500,000 on the $13 million project, Matkom said. The firm also is getting a $250,000 loan from the state housing authority.

Meanwhile, a Walker's Point project, the 60-unit 704 Place Apartments, remains on hold as the developers seek additional funds. Impact Seven LLC and Milwaukee-based Rule Enterprises LLC plan to construct the four-story building at 704 W. National Ave., replacing a warehouse that would be demolished.

That $11.2 million project in 2016 received tax credits now valued at $5.3 million. Its funding gap was partly closed in May, when the state housing authority provided an additional $715,000 credit award.

Rice Lake-based Impact Seven also is seeking around $550,000 in possible city funds, to be provided through property tax rebates, as well as a state environmental cleanup grant and other cash sources, said Kristine Giornalista, vice president of real estate development for the firm.

[IL] Group to have forum on proposed Campana apartment project (Illinois Daily Herald, IL)
Illinois Daily Herald
(7/15/2017 6:52 AM, Susan Sarkauskas)
A community group supporting more affordable housing in the Fox Valley is hosting a forum Monday about the proposed Campana apartment project.

The Fox River Valley Initiative has invited the developer, Evergreen Real Estate Group, to speak at the session and to answer questions. It is from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Congregational Church of Batavia, 21 S. Batavia Ave.

Evergreen proposes to put 80 apartments in the former factory at 901 N. Batavia Ave., and 64 of them would be designated as affordable housing. Evergreen has received an allocation of federal funds for its plan. The Aurora Housing Authority would oversee applications for the affordable units. The site would have to be rezoned, and some variations have been requested, including one to have less parking than city code requires.

The Fox River Valley Initiative consists of representatives of seven churches, a mental health advocacy group, two shelters for the homeless, local teachers unions, a housing agency and the Ecker Center for Mental Health.

An opposition campaign, called "No to Campana," has sprung up, with a website and yard signs. Its anonymous leaders say turning the building in to apartments could decrease the safety of the nearby Fabyan Parkway and Batavia Avenue intersection and that residents would use side streets in nearby residential neighborhoods. They also note that some of the businesses in the building would be forced to leave. Organizers of the group have refused requests to identify themselves, and the website's registry is protected by a domain privacy service.

The yestocampana.com website is run by Evergreen.

Affordable housing demand surpasses supply, local organization head says

Donna Silsby had begun settling into her apartment at Valley Springs in Auburn when she received a startling letter saying she had to vacate her residence by the end of this month.

The 24-unit property, an affordable apartment complex for seniors, was foreclosed on.

Silsby moved into the apartment in March and said she found it to be clean and comfortable. Having to uproot herself again is frustrating.

"This is making me age fast," the good-natured, 88-year-old joked.

Surrounded by boxes and packing supplies, Silsby said one of her four children helped her buy a home in Auburn.

Valley Springs is part of the federal Section 42 housing program that helps investors develop affordable housing by providing tax credits. It's administered by the Kansas Housing Resources Corporation.

A "buy-down" program rents vacant apartments to families that can't afford them otherwise

Most major U.S. cities are experiencing housing shortages, which are driving up rents and forcing residents out of their homes. But few have tackled their housing challenges as voraciously as Denver, which has built a record-breaking number of units over the last year.

Now the city is trying a new approach to make its existing housing more accessible: a pilot program that would rent 400 vacant apartments to people who could otherwise not afford them.

In his state of the city address earlier this week, Denver Mayor Michael Hancock announced a rent "buy-down" program that will take empty high-end apartments and subsidize their rents so families that make 40 to 80 percent of the city's median income can move in. The difference in rent will be covered by the city's affordable housing fund as well as donations from local corporations and foundations. Although the local housing authority will manage the program, it will be separate from the Section 8 housing process, which requires a federal application.

The goal is to help correct what has become an unbalanced real estate market in terms of demand. "Denver has some of the highest inventories for apartments for families with the highest incomes and some of the lowest inventories for families with some of the lowest incomes," said Erik Solivan, executive director of the mayor's Office of Housing and Opportunities for People Everywhere (HOPE), in an interview with Denver7. Traditionally, the high-end housing built today becomes tomorrow's affordable housing—a process called "filtering"—but that depends if cities built enough housing decades ago, which many cities did not.

For people who are already close to the edge financially, a bad month or two can leave them on the street

Ken Sumner stepped through the debris of another unexpected move. He weaved around the two men backing a truck through their friend's barren yard, past a speaker system and stacks of framed photographs, moving toward the front door for his fifth eviction of the day. The evicted man waited alone.

"How's it looking, Davian?" asked Sumner, 53. He checked his watch. A locksmith was on the way. "You going to be able to get it all out?"

"We've almost got all of it," Davian Smith said, and he disappeared into the house to carry out what was left. Sumner followed him inside and hung an orange sticker in the front window: This property has been seized by the Maricopa County Constable's Office.

Sidewalk scenes of moving boxes and brightly colored eviction notices have become the most visible traces of an affordable-housing crisis that has swept through every American county.

Moab Sun News
(7/14/2017 6:26 AM, Rudy Herndon)
The City of Moab is giving a boost to preliminary plans for an affordable housing development that could provide homes for dozens of local senior citizens.

City Council members voted unanimously on Tuesday, July 11, to approve an ordinance that rezones a 5-acre plot of land for a proposed apartment complex near Moab Regional Hospital and the Canyonlands Care Center.

The Housing Authority of Southeastern Utah and the Canyonlands Health Care Special Service District have teamed up on the project to build apartments for lower-income residents 55 and older.

According to a memo from HASU Executive Director Ben Riley, the proposed apartment complex on district-owned property at 354 W. Williams Way could house about 36 units. Twenty-nine of those units would be restricted to residents with area median incomes of 50 percent or lower, while seven units would be restricted to those with area median incomes of 80 percent or lower.

Moving forward, HASU has commissioned a market study to determine the exact number of units that will meet Federal Housing Finance Agency requirements.

Moab Mayor Dave Sakrison said the project partners' request for a zone change is just a preliminary step in the city council's consideration of the overall project, noting that a detailed site-plan review will follow. "This process is just barely beginning," Sakrison said.

VIDEO. YMCA officials figure they have about 18 months to raise the other $12 million, come up with an architectural design, and do a market study.

Additional funding sources will include foundations, private donors, city support and tax credits.

A rendering of a new YMCA in Seattle — sleek and modern with lots of windows — has already been shown to a local architect. Something like that would look amazing on the corner of Court and Cottage streets NE.

Amenities in the new building will include a full-length pool, gymnasium, walking/running track, group exercise studios, cardio and strength training areas, and racquetball courts.

Childcare facilities, affordable housing and the IKE Box, a coffee shop that supports teens with challenges and operates out of the YMCA-owned building next door, also are part of the plan. So is better parking.

California leads the world in technology, agriculture and entertainment. But we lack the political will to build the housing we need.

A recent McKinsey report showed that from 2009 to 2014, California added 308 housing units for every 1,000 new residents – half the rate of New York. As a result, housing costs have increased at nearly 2.5 times the national average, and almost half of renters – including the poor and young Californians starting families – spend more than 35 percent of their incomes on housing.

Average rents of $2,936 in San Jose and $3,809 in San Francisco are driving away the young workers and new families businesses need to thrive and cities need to stay vibrant. Though California is in desperate need of housing, more than two-thirds of coastal communities have adopted growth-limiting measures. This needs to change.

There are three concrete steps we can take to provide the housing California needs.

[CA] Granny flats don't bring the problems some cities fear: Guest commentary (San Gabriel Valley Tribune, CA)

(7/16/2017 2:15 PM, Jill Shook and Anothony Manousos)
Fear of the unknown, fear of change and fear of lowered property values and traffic often stand in the way of constructive solutions to the Southern California housing crisis. One of the solutions, granny flats, known to planners as accessory dwelling units or ADUs, could add needed housing stock and help keep homes affordable for homeowners, with no cost to our cities themselves.

With the severe housing shortage pushing up housing costs, recently passed state laws have made it easier to build ADUs. But our city, Pasadena, is still determining what size a property should be before a detached unit can legally be built. And some Pasadena residents have concerns about the impact of ADUs on traffic, parking and property values.

Our stuudies show that ADUs will not have an adverse impact, for several reasons.

First, Pasadena already has 740 ADUs that have been grandfathered in because they were built a long time ago. They don't diminish the visual character of our city. In fact, they're hardly noticeable. But they have made a difference in the quality of life. They've helped low-income homeowners stay in their homes, enhancing the diversity of our community.

All said and built, the site will contain 15 two-story buildings consisting of 26 one-bedroom, 30 two-bedroom and 24 three-bedroom units and town homes. The property would also have a 3,000-square-foot community building with offices, computer room, laundry facilities and an open, park-like community space.

Of those 80 apartments, 44 units would be available to those who make less than 50 percent of the median income, but that figure can be tricky to nail down.

“The criteria is a bit complicated as we have several different types of apartments restricted to different maximum income levels,” Daues said.

The California Department of Housing and Urban Development governs the exact pricing for low-income housing based on the median income of the surrounding area; that said,that number changes every year.

Brian Hanlon is a Bay Area guy who made his name “suing the suburbs.”

Too many cities and counties, he says, aren’t complying with state housing law that says it’s illegal to deny or scale back affordable housing projects that meet local zoning designations and other land-use rules.

Now he’s decided lawsuits aren’t enough.

With financial backing from Silicon Valley tech executives, Hanlon is starting a new political and housing advocacy venture in Sacramento called California YIMBY – or “Yes in My Back Yard,” a riff on the “not-in-my-backyard” phrase that characterizes neighborhood opposition to development projects.

It’s an emerging political movement demanding more housing construction across California, affordable or not. Pro-growth advocacy groups have formed groups from Santa Monica to San Francisco to Sacramento.

What Is The “Mrs. Murphy” Exception To The Fair Housing Act? (JD Supra)
JD Supra
(7/14/2017 9:12 AM, Scott M. Badami, Fox Rothschild)
I get this question about exemptions to the Fair Housing Act regularly, so I thought I would provide a refresher on the "Mrs. Murphy" exception to the FHA. At the outset, please know that apartment community owners, management companies, and leasing office staff members I represent are almost always covered by the FHA as well as companion state, city, or county anti housing discrimination laws. In my world, the FHA and its implementing regulations are part of the guidebook concerning how we do business. The FHA does contain a few exceptions - one of the exemptions is referred to as the "Mrs. Murphy" exception.

The "Mrs. Murphy" exemption provides that if a dwelling has four or fewer rental units and the owner lives in one of those units, that home is exempt from the FHA. "Mrs. Murphy" is the hypothetical elderly widow who has converted a portion of her home into a rental apartment to supplement her limited income.

To be sure, the exemption does not apply to rental advertising. That means Mrs. Murphy cannot run a discriminatory advertisement indicating, for example, that a certain religious group is not welcome to rent her apartment or room. This exemption does not apply when a real estate agent is representing the property owner as the law presumes agents are professionally trained and aware that housing discrimination is against the law.

HUD takes the position that the Civil Rights Act of 1866 makes it illegal to discriminate based on race - and as such, there is no exemption from the law when dealing with race.

Should the "Mrs. Murphy’s" of the world discriminate? Of course not. The FHA does not apply in this limited circumstance and it can be a defense to a housing discrimination action.

ALBANY -- Albany County Legislator Merton Simpson says he was discriminated against by the city when he wasn’t hired for the fair housing coordinator’s job in Albany, according to complaints he filed with the local and federal governments.

Simpson accuses city officials of “blatant discrimination," saying he was denied the post because he is a 62-year-old black man who in the past opposed discriminatory practices, according to the complaints filed with the city of Albany and the the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission’s Buffalo office.

Starting in the 1990s, Simpson led the charge in a federal lawsuit against the state that asserted the civil service test was biased against black and Hispanic state workers. More than 4,000 black and Hispanic workers were part of the class-action lawsuit that the state settled for $45 million in 2011.

“There appears to be fear of a black male who is capable of bringing a successful discrimination complaint so there is real retaliation, and I don’t believe there are many professionals hired over the age of 50. … It does not appear that my lived experience is valued,” Simpson wrote in the June 16 complaint he filed against the city.

Atlantic City’s historically black neighborhood, the Northside, is best known for its thriving nightlife and entertainment scene during the city’s heyday.

Today it is among the poorest areas in the city and has one of the highest concentrations of black residents. It contains most of the city’s low-income apartment complexes. Poverty levels among black residents range from 36 percent to 73 percent, according to U.S. Census data.

That didn’t happen by accident. A long entrenched practice of housing discrimination, called redlining, helped set up the area as poor, black and filled with multi-family apartments. Today’s Northside neighborhoods are distinctly different from neighborhoods like Chelsea or Venice Park.

One of the first areas where black people could buy homes outside the redlined area was Venice Park. In 1959, Elaine Scott, 84, and her family became the first black family from Atlantic City to buy a home there. The area was off limits before then.

[NC] Wilkes County businessman accused of sexually harassing women who rented or bought homes from him (Winston Salem Journal, NC)

An 88-year-old Wilkes County man is accused of sexually harassing numerous women who sought to rent or buy homes from him over the past 10 years, the U.S. Department of Justice said Thursday.

The federal agency filed a lawsuit in U.S. District Court for the Western District of North Carolina against Robert Neal Hatfield, who lives in Wilkesboro. Justice Department officials said in a news release that Hatfield had “committed egregious acts of sexual harassment against multiple women who have lived in or inquired about his homes.”

Hatfield’s real estate business involved the sale and renting of residential properties in Wilkes County. Since 2001, Hatfield has sold or rented at least 50 homes in Wilkes County, the lawsuit said. Hatfield’s business also made loans to people who were trying to buy his homes, the lawsuit said.

Hatfield is accused of making unwelcome sexual comments and advances toward women, according to the lawsuit. The Justice Department alleges that he groped and inappropriately touched women and told women that he would do certain things — reduce rent, loan or down payments and overlooking late payments — in exchange for sexual favors. The lawsuit said that he threatened to take action against women who objected to his sexual harassment or refused his request for sexual favors.

[FL] Drug overdoses rampant in Delray’s sober home neighborhoods (Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel, FL)
Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel
(7/14/2017 6:18 PM, Ryan Van Velzer)
VIDEO. In the shadows of Delray’s Beach’s lively entertainment district, hundreds of people are overdosing on drugs just beyond the group homes that are supposed to help them recover.

The vast majority of drug overdoses in Delray occur in neighborhoods where sober homes are concentrated, predominantly on the city's east side, a Sun Sentinel investigation found.

The analysis showed:

--Nearly 70 percent of overdoses in Delray Beach occur within walking distance, or a quarter-mile, of a sober home.
--Neighborhoods east of Interstate 95 have seen the highest concentrations: 809 overdoses in a region where 111 sober homes are situated.
--The western half of the city had far fewer overdoses and listed sober homes.
--Five percent of the overdoses happened inside sober homes themselves.

The Sun Sentinel explored the issue after Delray Beach became the first city in Florida to document the addresses of its sober homes, part of an effort to control the growing recovery industry in a city the New York Times recently labeled a "Relapse capital."

The Sun Sentinel obtained a list of 120 sober homes, or recovery residences, in Delray through a public records request and then compared it with the 1,052 drug overdoses recorded during the past 2 1/2 years. Overdoses shot up more than 250 percent from 2015 to 2016, rising from 195 to 690. Halfway through this year, police have recorded 412 overdoses, with 37 of those people dying. Addicts shoot up in bathrooms, nod off in parks and call for help even on Atlantic Avenue, the heart of Delray's entertainment district, according to city records and interviews with recovering addicts. In October, for example, a 33-year-old man who had moved to Delray from Massachusetts for treatment was found dead from an overdose in a van parked outside a home south of Atlantic Avenue, police records show.

Delray Commissioner Jim Chard has watched sober homes proliferate over the past 15 years. "I am the only [home] in my block that isn't a sober home," said Chard, who, according to city records, lives within a quarter-mile of nine sober homes, in a neighborhood near South Federal Highway and Southeast Fourth Street. Chard has found needles under his mailbox and once had to call an ambulance for a man who had overdosed in his front yard, he said. He said residents have told him the concentration of sober homes leaves them concerned about the safety of their children and the quality of life in their neighborhoods.

VIDEO. Rosa Malone fell in love with Rosedale Park first. The quiet streets, well-maintained homes and manicured lawns, a community of neighbors whose conscientious upkeep had staved off the worst impacts of Detroit's troubles.

She fell in love with the bungalow on Rosemont Street later, in 1973. The first time she and husband Elijah walked across the threshold, Rosa Malone knew she had found the place where she'd raise the young grandson who'd come under her care. It was the place where she'd plant tomatoes in the backyard and make Key Lime pie in the kitchen, the place where she would cook legendary meals for her legion of children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren, the place that would become the touchstone for six generations of her family, gathering on holidays and special occasions and sometimes just because.

"It was just wide-open spaces, and I just fell in love with it," said Rosa, now 94, in an interview this summer. "I love the vestibule. I love a house with a vestibule before you step in the house, and I loved that about it."

Rosa Malone knew she had found her home.

What she didn't know was that because she was black, she would have to fight for it.

[CA] Airbnb host who stranded guest because of race ordered to take class in Asian American studies (Washington Post)

VIDEO. A former Airbnb host in California who made discriminatory comments and canceled a guest's reservation at the last minute has been ordered to pay a $5,000 fine — and must take a course in Asian American studies as part of her agreement with the state's fair housing agency, officials said.

The California Department of Fair Employment and Housing said Wednesday it had reached an agreement with the host, identified by her attorney as Tami Barker, and with Dyne Suh, a law student at the University of California at Los Angeles, who made a February reservation at Barker's mountain cabin through Airbnb.

Airbnb had banned Barker after the incident in February.

"I am very glad that the outcome of this case includes taking an Asian American studies course," Suh said in a Facebook post. "I believe that the more people learn about and understand our history and our struggles, the more they can feel empathy toward us and treat us as equals."

In an April interview with The Washington Post, Suh said she and her fiance had booked Barker's listing, described as a "Tree House Loft and Private Bathroom" in Running Springs, Calif., about a month before their trip. They had been looking forward to a short Presidents' Day weekend vacation in Big Bear Lake, a popular ski getaway about two hours by car east of Los Angeles, she said.

(CNN) - A former Airbnb host who canceled a guest's reservation citing her race, will have to do more than pay a $5,000 fine.

The host, who has been banned by Airbnb after the February incident, agreed to take a college-level Asian American studies course, volunteer at a civil rights organization and participate in a community education panel.

The California Department of Fair Employment and Housing announced the somewhat unusual agreement Thursday and described the measures as "forward-looking and restorative" in a statement.

Dyne Suh had driven in a snowstorm to the Airbnb rental near Big Bear, California. The host canceled the reservation as Suh was close to arriving and texted her: "I wouldn't rent to u if u were the last person on earth. One word says it all. Asian," according to the department.

Homelessness

Americans want to help the homeless — as long as they don't get too close. This explains why. (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(7/14/2017 7:15 AM, Scott Clifford and Spencer Piston)
In the spring, voters in Los Angeles decided to raise their own sales taxes to alleviate homelessness. Other large American cities — including not just Los Angeles, but also Seattle and Portland — have joined in declaring homelessness a state of emergency in the past couple of years.

But that concern is complicated by a quite different attitude: disgust. In a recent article, we show that disgust helps explain why even though many Americans support increased government aid to homeless people, they also support laws that effectively make homelessness a crime. What's more, the news media's approach to reporting on homeless people can activate disgust, increasing public support for policies that make it difficult for the homeless to pull themselves out of poverty and get off the street.

Here's how we did our research

To examine public attitudes about homelessness, we conducted a national survey of 861 adult U.S. citizens through the survey firm YouGov during October and November 2014. We asked respondents whether they supported two policies aimed at helping homeless people: aid to homeless people and subsidized housing. We also asked whether they supported two "exclusionary" policies: banning panhandling and banning sleeping in public.

[ME] Cyndi Lauper brings Susan Collins on-stage: 'She's my hero … and she's a Republican' (Bangor Daily News, ME)

(7/15/2017 4:44 AM, Seth Koenig)
During her concert at Bangor's Waterfront Pavilion Friday night, 80s pop icon Cyndi Lauper brought U.S. Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, on stage.

"This woman is a hero," Lauper told a cheering crowd.

"And she's my hero. And she's a Republican. She helped us so much with the LGBT homeless youth and all the homeless kids."

When invited to share a few words of her own, Collins just told the singer: "We're just glad you're here Cyndi!"

The 45-second video of the on-stage encounter was shared by Collins and by WGME, CBS 13, on social media.

Lauper, who is best known for hit singles like 1983's "Girls Just Want To Have Fun" and 1984's "Time After Time," is a progressive activist who is outspoken on gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender issues and performed at the 2008 Democratic National Convention - making her praise of Collins, a Republican, noteworthy, as the singer pointed out.

In 2015, Lauper testified before the Transportation, Housing and Urban Development Appropriations subcommittee, which was chaired by Susan Collins, in favor of legislation funding programs for homeless teens.

Collins said during that hearing that in many cases LGBT children are kicked out of their homes once they tell their parents of their sexual orientation.

"I want to make sure, they too, have access to these [homeless] services," Collins said.

The 'Girls Just Want to Have Fun' singer brings her 'hero' on stage at Friday night's show in Bangor.

Maine Sen. Susan Collins isn't in the habit of taking orders. But when Cyndi Lauper strode into the wings at Darling's Waterfront Pavilion in Bangor on Friday night, looking for Collins and beckoning her to "Come," the Republican moderate did as she was told.

"This woman is a hero," Lauper told the crowd, who were there to see both Lauper and Rod Stewart perform at the Waterfront Concerts.

Lauper, perhaps best known for "Girls Just Want to Have Fun," which came out in 1983 when Collins was a legislative assistant to Sen. Bill Cohen, held the beat for a second before making her next point.

"And she's a Republican."

The unlikely stage-fellows share a bond because of the work Collins has done "With LGBT homeless youth," Lauper told the crowd.

"And all the homeless kids. I was blessed to testify on her committee, which was bipartisan," Lauper said, referring to April 2015 and the Transportation, Housing and Urban Development subcommittee.

"We're just glad you're here," the beaming Collins responded.

Then she tweeted out to Lauper, "I will back you up anytime - on stage or off."

[NH] Workshop aims to teach leadership skills to homeless (Manchester Union Leader, NH)

(7/14/2017 8:55 AM, Mark Hayward)
MANCHESTER — Workshops will start in November aimed at teaching homeless or formerly homeless people advocacy, communication and leadership skills.

Dubbed Granite Leaders Program, it is the third time the program has been offered by the New Hampshire Coalition to End Homelessness.

“This is really about making connections between people making decisions about homlessness and the people who are homeless,” said Cathy Kuhn, director of the New Hampshire Coalition to End Homelessness. Twenty-two people from across the state have already graduated from two earlier classes. Granite Leaders hopes to accept as many as 15 for the half-day sessions, which start in November.

Manchester resident Chrissy Simonds, 44, took the program in 2014, the first year it was offered. At that point, the single mom was living in an apartment; she and her son had not been homeless for about eight years. But homelessness, she said, never really leaves you.

Rocky Morrison leads a cleanup effort along the Merrimack River, which winds through the old milling city of Lowell, and has recovered hundreds of needles in abandoned homeless camps that dot the banks, as well as in piles of debris that collect in floating booms he recently started setting.

He has a collection of several hundred needles in a fishbowl, a prop he uses to illustrate that the problem is real and that towns must do more to combat it.

"We started seeing it last year here and there. But now, it’s just raining needles everywhere we go," said Morrison, a burly, tattooed construction worker whose Clean River Project has six boats working parts of the 117-mile (188-kilometer) river.

Among the oldest tracking programs is in Santa Cruz, California, where the community group Take Back Santa Cruz has reported finding more than 14,500 needles in the county over the past 4 1/2 years. It says it has gotten reports of 12 people getting stuck, half of them children.

Mickey Zezima wasn’t surprised when the city’s Department of Homeless Services announced last week that the number of homeless people on the street has increased 39 percent in the last year.

The lifelong Astoria resident sees it with his own eyes all of the time.

“Yes, I have seen a steady increase just by walking around during the last nine months,” Zezima said. “Anyone can see the numbers are exploding. All you have to do is open your eyes.”

Zezima, who goes by the name MickeyZ on the streets, is on a one-man mission to help as many homeless women on the street as he can by approaching them cautiously with care packages that contain hand sanitizers, tampons and pads, foot and hand warmers, toothbrushes and toothpaste, Q-tips and Band-aids. He brings them food as well, and in the winter, warm clothing, including gloves, hats and scarves.

“I’d love to do even more, but the bottom line is I can’t afford to fund this all on my own. I need help,” Zezima said. “The only way I can keep this project going is with the financial help from other New Yorkers who believe in what I’m doing. I tell people all the time: I’m more than willing to do the grunt work if others can either fund me or donate material supplies.”

[NY] Hotel thought to be shelter is now closing (Queens Chronicle, NY)
Queens Chronicle

An East Elmhurst hotel previously thought to become a homeless shelter will close its doors on Oct. 1, due to "economic" reasons, according to a notice from the state Department of Labor.

The agency's "Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification" website posted on July 3 that the Courtyard by Marriott LaGuardia Hotel, located at 90-10 Grand Central Pkwy., will close and 144 employees will be affected.

The reason was only listed as "economic" and no further details were available.

The hotel was in the headlines last October when East Elmhurst officials blasted the city Department of Homeless Services for failing to notify the community of plans to house 60 single men there.

(7/16/2017 1:41 PM, Katie Honan)
EAST ELMHURST — The city said rumors of a homeless shelter opening in a soon-to-close Marriott Hotel near LaGuardia Airport are "unequivocally false" but skeptical neighbors protested there Thursday.

The Courtyard by Marriott LaGuardia Hotel at 90-10 Grand Central Parkway is set to close in October due to economic issues, according to documents filed with the state.

The Department of Homeless Services said it's never had plans to turn the hotel into a shelter — despite a news conference Thursday from nearby residents and City Council candidate Hiram Monserrate speaking out against it.

"These rumors are as unequivocally false today as they were in October — and we're not sure where they began," DHS spokesman Isaac McGinn said.

"DHS has never had a presence in this site, period — nor have we discussed a shelter at this location."

When I introduced D.C. Mayor Muriel E. Bowser at the groundbreaking for a new short-term family housing building in Ward 4, I had just moved out of D.C. General Family Shelter and into my own apartment.

I was excited to participate in the groundbreaking because, as I had recently learned, with the right supports, a shelter experience can be life-changing for a family.

I spent the first six years of my life growing up in the Trinidad neighborhood.

When I was 13, I asked my foster mom to adopt me, and she did.

After graduating from high school, I joined the Army but soon returned home after injuring my knee.

When I was 20 and in a job-training program, I became pregnant with my daughter.

After my daughter was born, I spent several years living with friends and family members.

In 2016, I turned to the District's shelter system for support, and my daughter and I were placed in a motel.

[NC] A new way to fight homelessness: Charlotte charity buys entire apartment community (Charlotte Observer, NC)
Charlotte Observer
(7/16/2017 2:44 PM, Mark Price)
The struggle to house Charlotte's chronically homeless took a different turn this month when one of the city's leading housing charities purchased an entire apartment community for people struggling with life on the streets.

Supportive Housing Communities paid $850,000 last week for the St. John's Place apartments, near the intersection of East W.T. Harris Boulevard and The Plaza Extension. The charity intends all 32 units to eventually be filled by people who have lived on Charlotte's streets or in local shelters for extended periods.

It's a bold plan that would have ignited howls of protest from many Charlotte neighborhoods, which have fought to keep out affordable housing projects.

But Supportive Housing Communities dodged opposition with a unique approach that community leaders are calling a model for other charities: It bought one of the least attractive sites in east Charlotte's Grove Park community, and promised to spend nearly a half million dollars on renovation, beautification and stabilization.

Good Shepherd Center's housing units for the homeless and disabled is the result of tireless work.

I joined the SECU Lakeside Reserve journey late in the game. Just five years ago. There were five years before that of equally intense work. The contracts, government agencies, promises, prayers, and a lot of faith and persistence. I wasn't there, but I've heard.

The part of the story I know is a plot of ground recently razed and made "build ready." I sat in a Port City Java with our board chair as he asked if I thought we could raise $5 million in this town. "Heck yeah, I said." What could I say? I owed this guy my job. I am grateful to him every day.

And then there is our visionary. Good Shepherd's executive director, Katrina Knight, who most people in this town are familiar with. She has been an advocate for the homeless for a very long time; certainly as long as I've known her. "Lakeside" as we affectionately call her internally, was the dream of this daring woman. Mayor Saffo complimented her perseverance at the SECU Lakeside Reserve ribbon cutting on June 28 and noted it would not have happened without her. So many jumped on her bandwagon including Watson Barnes and Carol Atwood, who spent a decade volunteering to make Katrina's vision a reality. A great team to steer the wagon together.

VIDEO. NORTH CHARLESTON, S.C. (WCBD) — A housing complex for homeless veterans will open in North Charleston.

The United States Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) is a main partner for the Patriot Villas. Patriot Villas has 74 rooms, each of which includes a bed, a full bathroom, and a kitchen. The facility also offers a laundromat and the LCDR. Augustine G. Saukas Recreation Facility. Counseling sessions, support groups, and therapy sessions may be available to the Patriot Villas community members through the VA and with the help of the Cathedral of Praise church.

A grand opening ceremony is scheduled for 9 a.m. Friday, July 14 at 5043 Rivers Ave. The celebration is headed by ANKAJO Properties, LLC.

“We believe what we are doing will serve and honor people,” said John Saukas, a partner of ANKAJO Properties, LLC, “My father would be very proud of what we are doing and I know he watches over this project. I feel like we are doing the right thing.”

The Patriot Villas community is combating the plague of homelessness one veteran at a time. According to the National Coalition for Homeless Veterans, about 11 percent of the homeless population of the U.S. are veterans, while 1.4 million other veterans are considered at risk of homelessness due to dismal living conditions, lack of support networks and poverty. The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development estimates that 39,471 veterans are homeless on any given night. The NCHV reports that the most effective way to combat veteran homelessness is to implement programs featuring structured, substance-free transitional housing community environments with fellow veterans who are seeking to and succeeding at bettering themselves.

[FL] New Miami Development Takes a Holistic Approach to Solving Family Homelessness (Next City)
Next City
(7/17/2017 5:20 AM, Bil Bradley)
At the end of the 2016 school year, over 5,000 Miami-Dade school children were registered as homeless. The heartbreaking phenomenon is largely an invisible problem — without a stable address, kids shuffle from school to school, social networks fray and families fall off the radar of communities that could support them.

But while others may not detect the signifiers of a child who has no consistent place to sleep, Constance Collins, the president and executive director of Lotus House, the only Miami homeless shelter with wraparound support services exclusively serving women and children, can’t unsee them. Then again, the attorney, whose organization is opening a $28 million facility later this year, isn’t your standard shelter operator.

Collins worked as high-powered real estate developer and investment advisor for two decades before a conversation with a woman bathing in a fountain in front of one of her upscale Coral Gables projects spurred her to leave commercial development behind and focus on helping homeless women and children.

In 2004, the former principal and part-owner of Starwood Urban Investments started the Sundari Foundation to provide holistic support empowering women to get back on their feet. In 2006, the foundation opened Lotus House. Through a trauma-informed approach, Lotus House and the new Lotus Village development slated to open in December, aim to bring stability and help these families escape childhood abuse and domestic violence.

ounty officials are struggling to deal with a sprawling homeless encampment outside the north entrance of Broward County’s main library that includes men and women who so far have resisted efforts to get them into shelters or treatment programs.

“We have been working with the city to come up with a humane solution,” said County Mayor Barbara Sharief. “As far as getting them off the streets, there really has been no good answer.”

Based on recent homeless census figures, Sharief estimated there are about 300 homeless in the area who have consistently refused services.

Of that number, about 35 people have moved onto the plaza at the library — some with suitcases, tarps, umbrellas and other possessions — since the city of Fort Lauderdale pushed many homeless out of Stranahan Park and then barred access to a concrete wall where many people once congregated.

Black and white photographs lining the walls of Kansas City's Arts Asylum on Thursday typify what it's like to live without a home.

Outdoor camps and makeshift beds on the street. An advertisement at a 7-Eleven for a Big Gulp beverage with "NO Panhandling" added to the corner of the sign.

Other photos depict scenes of everyday life: a man jogging past Crown Center. A crowd at a parade downtown. A photo of Sluggerrr, the Royals' mascot.

The photographers, 12 in all, are all homeless and living in Kansas City.

"These are the things that people see every day when they're homeless," said Kim Gile, who helped organize the team of photographers.

The photos were the backdrops Thursday for a report on the latest count of homelessness in the Kansas City area. The report contained some good news: There were 68 fewer homeless households and 28 fewer homeless individuals this year, according to data collected for the annual "Point in Time" count, which is conducted through the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Thrown away, forgotten, dumped on the streets.

That's how many sum up those with a mental illness living on the streets in Jackson. No one knows how many there are.

But the numbers appear to be growing, according to those on the front line.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's annual national report on homelessness estimated 1,299 individuals were homeless in Mississippi in 2016, with 743 of them lacking any shelter. Of all the homeless, 439 were in families, 85 were unaccompanied youths, 180 were chronically homeless and 144 were veterans.

The last available estimate of the number of homeless in Jackson was more than 500.

How many of those have a mental illness isn't known, but those on the forefront of dealing with homelessness in Jackson estimate up to three-fourths of the individuals they are now seeing have a diagnosed mental illness.

(7/14/2017 2:53 PM, Lisa Schencker)
It's no secret that people experiencing homelessness can face a number of health problems — and have trouble getting regular care.

Heartland Alliance Health hopes to help address those and other issues with a health center slated to open in Englewood in January. Construction on the center, which expects to serve mostly people who are homeless and in shaky housing situations, is scheduled to start in August.

Heartland Alliance already has two full-service community health clinics on the city's Near West Side and in Uptown, and sends medical professionals to 44 shelters to deliver care. The center in Englewood is expected to serve about 1,000 patients in its first year and as many as 2,000 by its thirdyear, said Ed Stellon, executive director of Heartland Health Outreach.

"We respond to the needs of our population, and our population is increasingly finding itself on the South Side, so we're following our population," Stellon said. "We're going to where the need is."

Green is an example of Rockford's participation in two federal programs designed to find homes for the chronically homeless and homeless veterans. It started in 2015, and Rockford has been very successful.
Those efforts that have not gone unnoticed.

"We've just recently been asked to participate in an upcoming campaign that will be to end overall homelessness." said Angie Walker, Housing Advocate for the Rockford Human Services Department. The feds want Rockford's help to build up its homeless program, 'Built For Zero.'

[IN] Report: Vanderburgh Co. Homelessness at Lowest Point in Four Years (WTVW-TV Fox 7 Evansville, IN)
WTVW-TV Fox 7 Evansville
(7/14/2017 12:42 PM, Staff)
In a report released to area news media on Friday, the Evansville-Vanderburgh Commission on Homelessness announced there was a 17% drop in homelessness.

According to the annual point-in-time count mandated by the US Department for Housing and Urban Development (HUD), homelessness in Evansville and Vanderburgh has dropped to its lowest level in four years.

This year's count on January 25, 2017 identified 428 individuals experiencing homelessness in the county.

That number is a 17% reduction from the 2016 count of 495 people. It's also the lowest number in four years.

Of the 428 people counted, 56 were considered chronically homeless. That's an improvement from last year's count of 77 people. A person is considered chronically homeless when they are continuously homeless or experience frequent instances of homelessness.

The Evansville-Vanderburgh Commission on Homelessness said factors such as substance abuse, mental health, and domestic violence continue to be leading factors which contribute to homelessness in our community. Officials also said this contributes to the amount of people considered 'unsheltered.'

In the 2017 count, 58 people were identified as living outdoors or places not meant for habitation. That's a 71% increase from the 34 people identified in 2016.

[TX] HomeAid partners with Freedom Place to assist children in crisis (San Antonio Express-News, TX)
San Antonio Express-News
(7/14/2017 10:39 AM, San Antonio Express-News)
HomeAid is working with Freedom Place, a Christ-centered care and recovery center for underage female victims rescued from sex trafficking, to assist in the remodeling of a cabin that will provide longer term housing for girls in crisis.

HomeAid, a Greater Houston Builders Association charity, has teamed up with First Texas Fire Protection Company to provide the equipment and labor to install a fire suppression system that is required for the structure, a $20,000 to $30,000 addition. Matt Sneller, of Sneller Custom Homes and Remodeling is also part of the HomeAid team donating drywall repair and other miscellaneous work needed to complete the project.

A portion of this housing, which is one of only five facilities in the U.S., is being underwritten by long-time HomeAid donor, Trendmaker Homes. The cabin will allow eight girls to continue to heal in an environment that offers more personal freedom and provides programs to help them manage their lives.

"The cabin at Freedom Place was ready for the girls to take residence, when the agency learned they would need a fire suppression system," said Salty Thomason, president of HomeAid Houston. "We are proud to partner with First Texas Fire Protection and Sneller Custom Homes and Remodeling to ensure this key component is installed as quickly as possible."

[TX] Mayor suggests hotel occupancy tax hike to tackle Austin homelessness (Austin American-Statesman, TX)
Austin American-Statesman
(7/16/2017 8:50 PM, Mary Huber)
Austin Mayor Steve Adler introduced a plan online Sunday night that would use hotel occupancy tax revenue to tackle problems with the homeless downtown.

His plan suggests a 1 to 2 percent increase in hotel taxes paid by tourists to fund a Tourism Public Improvement District that would generate between $4 million and $8 million annually to respond to the city's homeless population.

Much of that money would be directed to improvements at the Austin Resource Center for the Homeless on Seventh Street, the epicenter for the city's K2 epidemic that is constantly plagued by overcrowding.

"There are growing public safety concerns as predators target our homeless downtown," Adler said on the city council's message board Sunday night. "The K2 epidemic claims lives and injures many. Austin residents and visitors to downtown have been aggressively approached by the homeless or those that exploit the homeless and there is a growing hesitancy to visit or return to downtown. People experiencing homelessness require assistance to get back into housing and reconnect to positive communities."

The public improvement district would create a dedicated funding stream to help solely with homelessness. It would be supported by matching funds, Adler said.

SALT LAKE CITY — New billboards that will be going up this week, warning of unintended consequences to giving to panhandlers, don't leave room for ambiguity.

"Support panhandlers, and you support drug trafficking."

"Support panhandlers, and you support crime."

"Support panhandlers, and you support alcoholism."

Flanked by poster-size versions of those grim messages, House Speaker Greg Hughes, R-Draper, Salt Lake City Mayor Jackie Biskupski and others implored the city's residents, workers and visitors on Thursday to instead donate to organizations responsible for serving the homeless.

PORT ANGELES, Wash. — Panhandlers are being put to work as part of a grant-funded program that aims to get them off the street.

Serenity House Operations Manager Kevin Harkins has put three panhandlers to work through the nonprofit's "Reaching Out" program, paying them $12 an hour to do lawn and janitorial work at the Port Angeles agency on a weekly basis.

The work is in four-hour blocks about once a week, but he said it's been enough to get some panhandlers off the street.

"To be eligible for the program you need to be homeless, which not all of our panhandling community is homeless," he said.

Phil Landis never got involved in veterans causes — until Memorial Day weekend in 1996.

On a whim, the Vietnam combat veteran went to a San Diego reading of the names listed on the Vietnam Memorial Wall.

He didn't know anyone, so he just hovered on the edges of the gathering. Each name was read, then a bell tolled.

Out of nowhere, Landis began to weep. He cried so hard that he had to sit down on a bench. He was astonished at the depth of his reaction.

"Up until that time, I had never dealt with my trauma issues. I thought that I had," said Landis, who served in Vietnam for a year in 1967 as an Army rifle platoon leader and later a headquarters company commander.

San Francisco Chronicle
(7/14/2017 6:29 AM, Michael Cabanatuan)
Near the end of Thursday's BART Board of Directors meeting, the transit system's elected leaders found themselves in the unusual position of staring at something not on the agenda: a fresh puddle of urine.

BART directors usually meet twice a month in a clean, quiet, windowless board chamber in Oakland, but this time they took a field trip to Powell Street Station to view its "challenges" — homeless people sleeping in hallways, intravenous drug users, rundown conditions, dirty floors, and elevators and escalators used regularly as restrooms.

As an elevator door opened, a BART staff member observed something. "You can see, there's fluid at the bottom," said Paula Fraser, assistant chief transportation officer for BART's San Francisco and Peninsula lines. "It often includes a tissue, too."

Maintenance workers try to clean up elevators as quickly as possible, Fraser said, but the problem is so pervasive that they'd need to post a janitor at the elevators full time to ensure their cleanliness.

[CA] How being homeless didn't change this Los Angeles cook's dream (Los Angeles Times)
Los Angeles Times
(7/14/2017 12:07 PM, Javier Cabral)
"If you need help, work harder." This is what Lance Thomas remembers a chef mentor telling him one night six years ago, when they were both in the weeds, cooking slang for being slammed in a busy restaurant kitchen. It's a piece of advice that has helped Thomas, now 25, get through both the good times and the bad times — including being homeless.

Thomas has worked in the restaurant industry since he was 15, when he landed a job as a fry cook at a Wendy's in Alhambra. "I knew then that I was going to cook for the rest of my life," Thomas says now. "I would even ditch school to work because I loved it so much."

Easygoing and quick to joke, his bleach-tipped black hair often tucked into a trim cap, Thomas grew up first with his grandmother in the Boyle Heights neighborhood of Los Angeles, then with his aunt in the San Gabriel Valley — but always with the Food Network. (Favorite: Giada De Laurentiis.)

Including that initial job at Wendy's, Thomas estimates that he's worked in 25 kitchens in and around Los Angeles in the last decade, including stints at Clifton's, Little Sister, Cook's County and Bottega Louie. It's a turnover that's not unusual for those who make up the unglamorous back-of-house side of restaurants, where even a 25-cent difference in hourly rate is enough to leave one job for another.

[CA] PD Editorial: Two steps forward, one back on SR homelessness (Santa Rosa Press Democrat, CA)
Santa Rosa Press Democrat
(7/16/2017 1:14 PM, Santa Rosa Press Democrat Editorial Board)
When it comes to providing homeless services, compassion does not mean adherence to the status quo. The kindest thing to do often can be the hardest especially when it involves relocating individuals who have found a home off the grid and are reluctant to move.

This was demonstrated last week when the Santa Rosa City Council voted unanimously to clear out a longtime encampment located on the hillside above the intersection of Farmers Lane and Bennett Valley Road. The city has identified 44 homeless encampments around the community, and this is one of the largest with some 50 residents, some who have been there for more than 15 years.

The city has been understandably concerned about the fire dangers from the tent encampment and other liability issues. It reached a point that crews were dispatched a few weeks ago to create fire breaks to protect the adjacent neighborhood. Neighbors say small fires have occurred near the camp. If one got out of control, the impacts could be devastating.

Staying there was not a long-term option anyway. The city-owned property eventually will become part of the Farmers Lane extension connecting to Kawana Springs Road and Yolanda Avenue to the south.

Contra Costa's annual survey to document people experiencing homelessness showed a 7 percent drop overall in 2017 compared to last year, but there was a substantial rise in Central County, according to a report released by Contra Costa Health Services' Division of Health, Housing and Homeless Services.

H3 and the Contra Costa Council on Homelessness have since launched Coordinated Entry, a new initiative to streamline service delivery and enhance collaboration among the county's network of nonprofit, faith-based and government providers of homeless services.

Regional service centers connecting clients to shelter, medical and mental health care, case managers, substance-use disorder treatment and services, benefit counselors and long-term housing;. Overnight warming centers, which supplement existing emergency shelters;. A universal, web-based information-management system used by all providers of homeless services in the county to maximize use of their collective resources;. A standardized intake and assessment system that streamlines delivery of housing and other services to the most vulnerable clients.

Coordinated Entry is funded in part through $1.2 million in grants from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Contra Costa's point-in-time count also fulfills a HUD requirement to document the extent of homelessness within jurisdictions receiving its funding.

When I see this young woman's big smile, I renounce all my frowns because my woes don't deserve them. Dealing with her history and problems would make my self-confidence resign the job.

If you walk into the MiraCosta College bookstore, you might encounter a student clerk named Lahana Velez. She is petite and perky. She gives the impression that if she doesn't help you, it will ruin her day. You might think she's the beau ideal college student.

She wishes it were so.

Lahana is 24 years old, and as of Friday, she was couch-surfing at friends' places or sleeping in her 1990 Toyota Camry. She has aged out of the studio provided to her as a student who has come out of foster care.

(An aside: The exorbitant cost of even the cheapest housing is an education-killer for young people like Lahana, on their own with no money. Lahana says she's flat broke almost all the time.)

[CA] Sonoma County's safe-parking program scales down (Santa Rosa Press Democrat, CA)
Santa Rosa Press Democrat
(7/16/2017 8:30 PM, J.D. Morris)
Sonoma County's safe parking program, a widely-praised effort providing sanctioned locations where homeless people can sleep in their cars overnight, is shrinking starting Monday, though advocates say they have been able to reserve a spot for everyone who asked for one and intend to expand again.

The program is dwindling from eight sites offering 76 spots to three sites offering 40 spots, due largely to a state funding reduction that prompted Catholic Charities, which administers the effort, to request county officials shift money away from the program in order to prevent cuts at its Family Support Center.

A separate Santa Rosa City Council proposal that could have provided funding for safe parking failed to move forward last week. Like their county colleagues, city officials continue to wrestle with how to best spend funds on homeless services — an area with needs exceeding the available resources.

So far, Catholic Charities has transitioned 15 people from the parking program into shelter, and most of the spots at the three sites where safe-parking will continue have been filled, according to Jennielynn Holmes, the organization's director of shelter and housing. Catholic Charities also intends to grow the program back up to 55 spots because the organization just secured the third site at a private lot near Cleveland Avenue.

His commute and recreational rides can grow especially ominous in Van Nuys, he said, where he has seen wobbling drunks and knife fights on the ribbon of asphalt ahead.

"One day I rode through here and witnessed two guys squaring off on the path, one guy had an 8-inch serrated knife," said Cable, 52, of Lake Balboa, recently recalling the incident during his 10-mile trek to a TV production job in Studio City. "They dropped F-bombs. It just doesn't feel safe.

[ME] Frustration with substandard housing led man to unleash bedbugs at Augusta City Center (Central Maine, ME)
Central Maine
(7/13/2017 7:36 AM, Betty Adams)
Charles Manning, 74, said he often didn't sleep at night because he worried about being bitten by bedbugs.

AUGUSTA - Charles Manning, the 74-year-old man who dumped a cup of live bedbugs inside Augusta's city hall last month, said he did it because officials weren't addressing his complaints about substandard housing adequately.

Manning said Tuesday he doesn't regret his actions on June 2.

Manning said he now realizes he dumped the 100 or so bedbugs in the wrong city department - mistakenly targeting the General Assistance office instead of code enforcement at Augusta City Center. The city quickly closed the building for the rest of the day and called in a pest-control company to spray it with chemicals. Manning later was charged with assault and obstruction of government administration, class D crimes punishable by up to a year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

A Massachusetts native, Manning has lived in various parts of the country, including the Pacific Northwest and Texas; and he has worked as a bus driver, among other occupations. While Manning's situation - and his reaction to it - is extreme, his predicament illustrates two problems city officials have been working to address in recent years: a lack of affordable housing and bedbug infestations in some boarding homes and apartments.

Amanda Bartlett, executive director of the quasi-municipal Augusta Housing Authority, noted that more than 500 units in the city either were lost or are at imminent risk of being lost because of fire or safety code issues since 2013. People who receive approval for Section 8 subsidized housing have a three-year wait to get into that housing. "If you're in a situation where you're homeless in this community, looking for a place to live and low-income, there's nothing immediately available," she said. Advertisement Then there are the bedbugs. "The bedbug issue is complicated," she said. "At the Augusta Housing Authority, we work hard with landlords to make sure they comply with federal law. A lot of landlords are frustrated because they're trying to do the right thing."

Tenants also have to do their part, washing all clothing, cleaning the entire apartment and encasing mattresses, she said.

The Rutland Housing Authority has started the demolition that will allow it to complete a major project that could be finished by 2018.

Construction crews started to take down buildings in the Forest Park neighborhood a few days ago, in preparation of new buildings going up. It is the third and final part of what the RHA is calling the Hickory Street project. The homes are located in the southwest neighborhood of Rutland.

Kevin Loso, the RHA's executive director, said the construction will not only add more housing but also realign the streets to make the neighborhood less isolated

" The reason that we did that is we wanted to mirror a more traditional neighborhood, one that was integrated back into the streetscape, integrated back into the fabric of the neighborhood and community," he said.

GENEVA — If the Geneva Housing Authority decides to transfer ownership of Courtyard Apartments to a nonprofit development corporation, a new payment-in-lieu-of-taxes agreement with the city would be needed.

City Council Tuesday voted to approve a proposed PILOT that will increase revenue to the city.

The housing authority is considering the move because it would open up new funding sources to make improvements to the 124-unit low- to moderate-income apartment complex on Goodman Street.

The current PILOT and the proposed new one both are based on 10 percent of cross rents, minus utilities.

[NJ] Ever wear a badge in Jersey? You may now be allowed to carry a gun here. (NJ.com, NJ)

(7/14/2017 9:34 AM, Claude Brodesser-Akner)
TRENTON - Gov. Chris Christie has signed into law a bill that will allow virtually anyone who ever wore a badge to carry a firearm in New Jersey after they retire.

The new bill, signed Thursday, substantially adds to the list of those who can carry firearms in New Jersey to virtually all former uniformed law enforcement officers. Previously, only interstate, state and local police officers, county sheriff's deputies or corrections officers and state or or county park police officers were allowed to continue to carry their firearms into retirement. "We've had many instances where retired law enforcement officers have stepped in to save lives in emergencies" said state Assemblyman Declan O'Scanlon, one of the bill's sponsors. "With this law, we're expanding that pool of qualified people."

Not all lawmakers went along with the expansion willingly. "There's no solid reason for this," said former state Sen. Richard Codey, who voted against the bill in the upper house, where it passed in May by a vote of 28-6. Codey, a former governor, questioned whether low-risk professions like park rangers and revenue agents ought to be toting firearms after handing in their badges. "When, during their performances of duty, did they have to use a gun?" Codey asked. "Rarely, if ever. ... It just expands the number of people who are out there with guns, and that never ends up to anything good."

The new law now also applies to retired police officers of the state park police, special agents of the Division of Taxation, Department of Human Services, NJ Transit, campus police officers employed by higher education institutions, state conservation officers, Palisades Interstate park police officers, housing authority police officers, juvenile corrections officers, parole officers and even full time Burlington County Bridge police officers.

[NJ] Christie Signs Bill Allowing More Retired Officers to Carry Handguns (New York Observer, NY)
New York Observer
(7/14/2017 8:43 AM, Christian Hetrick)
New Jersey will narrowly expand the pool of retired law enforcement officers who can carry handguns under a bill signed by Gov. Chris Christie on Thursday, a rare but minor loosening of gun restrictions in a state known for tough gun laws.

Retired police officers for state parks, New Jersey Transit, college campuses and others will now be able to get handgun permits.

Previously, only retired officers who had "Broad carrying privileges" such as local, county or state police officers could apply annually for permits until they turned 75.

New Jersey's Democratic-dominated Legislature is better known for trying to tighten gun laws. But state lawmakers overwhelmingly approved the bill by a 77-0 vote in the Assembly in December and a 27-7 vote in the Senate in May.

"Regardless of the law enforcement unit with which they served, retired law enforcement officers who received proper training in the use of firearms and dedicated themselves to protecting their communities should have the right to carry a handgun," Assemblyman Gordon Johnson, a bill sponsor and former Bergen County sheriff, said in a statement. "This will further the intent of the original law giving retired officers the right to carry by enabling more individuals with professional law enforcement experience to help keep New Jersey safe."

The bill signed Thursday adds retired special agents of the Division of Taxation and retired police officers for state parks, human services, New Jersey Transit and railways and college campuses to the list of those eligible for handgun permits. State conservation officers, Palisades Interstate Park police officers, Burlington County Bridge police officers, housing authority police officers and parole and juvenile corrections officers are also included.

Past housing chair says goodbye, suggests successor leave politics out of it

Hoboken Housing Authority Commissioner Dana Wefer, who briefly toyed with running for governor earlier this year, is planning to move out of town and said a tearful goodbye Thursday night to the other members of the HHA board. The board is a seven-member volunteer body that helps oversee the 1,383 units of federally subsidized low income housing on the west side of town. They are managed by a full-time staff and also overseen by the federal department of Housing and Urban Development.

The board is an important one, as it has influence over the safety and quality of life of thousands of the city's poorest residents. Some people have seen getting on the board as a way to also influence the many voters in that area of town.

Over the past few decades, the board has suffered from various leadership changes, financial issues, and a few scandals.

Two years ago, the board hired a permanent executive director, Mark Recko.

[PA] Council endorses scattered site sale (Altoona Mirror, PA)
Altoona Mirror
(7/15/2017 5:28 AM, William Kibler)
City Council has endorsed the Altoona Housing Authority's plan to divest itself of 10 "Scattered site" public housing properties, repeating support it provided a couple of years ago.

Council needed to repeat the endorsement because the Department of Housing and Urban Development rejected an earlier authority request for permission to sell the sites, due to an inadequate assessment of the need for divestiture.

The authority has hired a consultant to evaluate renovation costs in hopes of reaching a required HUD threshold of cost as a proportion of post-renovation value.

The initial needs analysis predicted renovation costs that amounted to 30 percent of post-renovation value, well short of the HUD "Obsolescence" threshold of 54 percent.

The new application complies with the HUD requirements, according to Executive Director Cheryl Johns.

She's confident of approval this time, she said.

The authority wants to get rid of the scattered sites because they're expensive to maintain.

Because the sites are scattered throughout the city, maintenance workers must travel to each site to make repairs and because each one is different from the others, the authority can't make bulk purchases of replacement parts or realize efficiencies from repeated repair operations, officials have said.

The authority has been trying to get rid of the properties since 2011.

The Fayette County Housing Authority will borrow $9 million to advance the rehabilitation work planned for the White Swan Apartments.

In unanimous action Thursday, authority members Harry Fike, Ernest DeBlasio, Beverly Beal, Joyce Nuccetelli and Kerri Baker, approved the bridge loan with PNC Bank, that will allow access to funding, as needed, for the West Main Street project. Last year, the authority was successful in its bid for Pennsylvania Housing Finance Agency tax credits to undertake the estimated $13 million overhaul of the 1925-constructed, six-story building.

Mark Yauger, executive director, said documents associated with the tax credit award continue to be completed and updated as more information is obtained by the authority staff compiling the nearly 1,200 page contract. Members asking as to the start date of construction were advised that it would likely begin by the end of August. Although project bids were opened in May, no contracts have been awarded. "We are in regular contact with the contractors, and they are aware of our situation," said Yauger, adding that a loan closing date should also occur in August. "I hope to have more for you at the August meeting."

VIDEO. NORFOLK, Va. - Norfolk City Council will decide next week whether to enter a cooperation agreement with the Redevelopment and Housing Authority that would affect 1,700 public housing units.

The agreement would pave the way for a redevelopment plan for Tidewater Gardens, Young Terrace and Calvert Square. It would demolish the existing structures and replace them with a blend of single family homes, carriage houses, townhouses and apartments. The city says if approved, the proposal would fit into a multi-pronged approach to revitalize what's referred to as the St. Paul's area.

City Manager Doug Smith says, "This initiative at its core is about growing opportunity for our residents."

A resident who spoke with 10 On Your Side said she'd like to see more local businesses offer child care so that mothers would have more work opportunities.

Councilman Paul Riddick is calling it gentrification. "I don't want this to be a dumping ground for the public housing residents, for Section 8 and programs of that nature," Riddick said.

The city says the goal is to strengthen the neighborhood by de-concentrating poverty, increasing self-sufficiency and providing access to better education. Council is expected to vote on the agreement Tuesday. A city spokeswoman says residents in the affected communities would have opportunities for input if the proposal moves forward.

[MO] MHDC, Housing Authority work to provide low-income housing in Jefferson City (Jefferson City News Tribune, MO)
Jefferson City News Tribune
(7/16/2017 2:15 AM, Nicole Roberts)
To qualify for LIHTC, at least 40 percent of the total number of units must be affordable to people making 60 percent of the AMI ($27,000 for a one-person household), according to MHDC website, or 20 percent of the units be for individuals making 50 percent of the AMI ($22,500 for a one-person household).

Jefferson City's 2017 median income was $64,200, according to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

These units would rent for less than the fair market rent — how much a property could rent for on average at a particular time.

According to HUD, the 2017 fair market rent for a one-bedroom apartment in Jefferson City is $495 and $647 for two-bedroom housing, according to HUD.

Missouri's statewide fair market rent is $638 per month for a one-bedroom apartment and $815 per month for a two-bedroom apartment, according to the National Low Income Housing Coalition (NLIHC), an organization that advocates for low-income affordable housing.

[LA] Kenner housing director, attorney respond to accusations of law breaking (New Orleans Times-Picayune, LA)
New Orleans Times-Picayune
(7/14/2017 7:40 AM, Littice Bacon-Blood)
The executive director and an attorney for the Kenner Housing Authority said Thursday that accusations of wrongdoing leveled at them by resigning board member Connie Montgomery are false. Marc Starling and attorney Don Richard characterized Montgomery as a hostile obstructionist who routinely "Harassed" Starling and others.

"The KHA is not in violation or in danger of lawsuits by contractors," Starling wrote, "And at no time were any KHA Staff harassed or mistreated by me."

The written responses, which were hand-delivered Thursday to Kenner Mayor Ben Zahn's office and emailed to the media by Starling, includes rebuttals to Montgomery's claims that Richard, Starling and board chairwoman Faye Matthews broke state laws and violated board policies.

Responding to Montgomery's claim that the board is "dysfunctional," Starling wrote: "Ironically, it has been the behavior of that has made the Board anything but vibrant as she has taken a hostile approach to attack individuals, including myself, rather than engage in rational behavior to discuss and/or read the documentation that was provided to her for her to get a full/transparent understanding of planned actions to be taken by the KHA.".

Starling, who was hired in December, sent a letter to Zahn in June in which he complains of harassment from Montgomery that he said was racial discrimination.

Starling is black; Montgomery is white. Richard suggests that the "Tensions" between Starling and Montgomery motivated Montgomery to send Zahn an "Inaccurate" and "Inappropriate" letter. "In sum, the factual inaccuracies of Ms. Montgomery's correspondence do an enormous disservice to me and to the current director," Richard wrote. "After you have had an opportunity to review the matter, I am confident you will reach the same conclusion."

Montgomery resigned on July 5, citing in a four-page letter to Zahn various incidents in which she said Starling, Matthews and Richard violated state civil service rules, housing procurement policies, state laws and authority bylaws.

Her resignation, coupled with the housing authority's history of financial mismanagement that at one point led the federal Housing and Urban Development to take it over, prompted Zahn to launch an internal investigation earlier this week.

"They're going to break ground on one of the two pieces of property, both of which would abut Barry Harbor," he explained. "Everybody is worried about their property and what this project is going to do to it."

[TX] Judge issues restraining order against La Joya Housing Authority (The Monitor, TX)
Monitor
(7/15/2017 5:10 AM, Berenice Garcia)
LA JOYA - A woman has been allowed to remain in her home after a judge stopped the La Joya Housing Authority from terminating her Section 8 housing voucher.

Rosa Elva Gutierrez, was about to lose the rental assistance she receives from the housing authority which would leave her, along with her husband and five children, in danger of losing their home, according to a news release issued Friday by the Texas RioGrande Legal Aid, a nonprofit that provides free legal services to low-income residents.

State District Judge Roberto "Bobby" Flores issued a temporary restraining order against the housing authority earlier this month, preventing them from terminating those benefits. "The consequences would have been dire for Rosa and her entire family," TRLA Attorney Jenecia Martinez stated in the release. "But we also want this case to send a message - that the housing authority can't arbitrarily cut off people's rental assistance without due process."

In May, Gutierrez was notified by her landlord about an increase in her monthly rent and contacted the housing authority to notify them of the change, according to court documents. Gutierrez contacted the Housing Authority again in June and was informed that her portion of the rent would increase by $7. She agreed and requested written documentation of the increase but the receptionist said she would be given one, Gutierrez alleged.

Then on June 13, Gutierrez received a letter from Executive Director Frances Salinas de Leon stating Gutierrez had been removed from the Section 8 program and that Gutierrez had requested to be removed. "I absolutely did not ask to be terminated, verbally or in writing," Gutierrez stated in a news release. "Why would I ask to be terminated? Without the Section 8 voucher, we can't afford rent. Where would my family and I go?".

Gutierrez immediately contacted Salinas de Leon to resolve the matter but the executive director refused to speak to her, according to the news release by the TRLA. Gutierrez also requested an informal hearing with the housing authority and asked to see her file prior to the hearing but both those requests were denied.

Attempts to reach Salinas de Leon were unsuccessful. Messages left to the housing authority's attorney were not returned as of press time. The restraining order will allow Gutierrez to continue receiving her benefits for the time being.

The La Joya Housing Authority threatened to cancel a family's Section 8 benefits and refused to hold an informal hearing after the family complained, according to a lawsuit filed last week.

With help from Texas Rio Grande Legal Aid, tenant Rosa Elva Gutierrez filed the lawsuit on July 6.

"My family and I don't have a lot," Gutierrez said.

Gutierrez started receiving Section 8 benefits, which subsidize her family's rent, during August 1999, according to the lawsuit.

[OK] Cherokee councilors OK initial 2018 Indian Housing Plan (Cherokee Phoenix, OK)
Cherokee Phoenix
(7/16/2017 2:27 PM, Stacie Guthrie)
TAHLEQUAH, Okla. – During its July 10 meeting, Tribal Councilors approved the Cherokee Nation's fiscal year 2018 Indian Housing Plan submission to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Earlier that day in the Community Services Committee meeting, Housing Authority of the Cherokee Nation Director Gary Cooper said the IHP must be submitted annually and acts as a "road map" for the tribe's spending.

"This will have to be amended, and it can be amended at any time. It is required to be submitted to HUD every year. It's basically a road map that tells what we plan to do and how we plan to spend those monies," he said.

According to the plan, officials estimate that approximately $37.4 million would be "expended" during the "12-month program year."

"This would allocate $37 million and some change. Those are both in NAHASDA (Native American Housing and Self Determination Act) and there's a few non-NAHASDA dollars that we have to account for in this IHP part of that. One of those programs is our VASH (Veterans Affairs Supportive Housing) program," he said. "It's not a part of NAHASDA, but we do have to account for it in this. So this authorizes us to begin spending NAHASDA dollars at the beginning of the fiscal year. There are no new programs in this plan. These are all existing programs. We will need to come back after we get those estimates for 2018."

The tribe's fiscal year runs from Oct. 1 to Sept. 30.

Cooper said HUD's estimates for the 2018 IHP should be available by September.

"Our estimates for 2018, we don't have those and they're not projected to be completed until at least Sept. 6. So even after we do this IHP we will have to come back and amend it, which we can do at any time we need to. We just have to have one submitted to HUD before the beginning of the fiscal year," he said.

[CO] Investigation: Longmont Police didn't follow procedure in warrantless searches of affordable housing (KUSA-TV NBC 9 Denver, CO)

(7/15/2017 6:54 AM, Kyle Clark)
VIDEO. LONGMONT, COLO. - Weld County has completed its independent investigation into Longmont's warrantless searches of affordable housing units, and found that officers did not follow proper procedure.

Jeff Satur with Longmont Police wouldn't offer specifics about what the department did wrong at The Suites when Next called to ask for more details. He said he was unsure if the city will ever release that information. Longmont Police announced they would stop these searches in early June, at the time of Next's first report, although they initially defended their involvement with the Longmont Housing Authority's searches.

Tenants told 9NEWS they were not told about their Constitutional right to refuse these searches. They were sent letters saying landlords, officers and drug dogs would be coming around to their units. One woman told Next her apartment had been searched, despite her refusal.

Longmont Police said at the time that they did not search any units without consent, and there was "Never any intent to violate constitutional rights."

According to Longmont Housing Authority, this practice was good practice for the drug dogs, and the searches had been done once prior to our coverage. The department had been saying since June that they'd done nothing wrong, until now. Sixteen minutes before close of business on Friday, when the city's likely counting on this information going unnoticed by the public, Longmont announced Weld County concluded its report - which the city says it received on Monday.

Longmont City leaders have been critical of the light Next has shined on these warrantless searches, but they have not pointed out any inaccuracies with the reporting. Longmont Police say they're conducting their own internal investigation. Police say they didn't confiscate any property in their searches.

[CO] Investigation finds Longmont Police wrong in controversial drug search in low incoming housing development (KDVR-TV FOX 31 Denver, CO)

(7/15/2017 5:53 AM, Emily Allen)
LONGMONT, Colo. - A report released Friday determined Longmont Police officers were out of line when they assisted Longmont Housing Authority search a low income housing development for drugs.

The controversial search was conducted at The Suites in Longmont. Residents were outraged, saying police entered apartments and searched without warrants. "I refused but they said they had to come in anyway," said resident Tamika Mcclure.

Ray Appling sounded the alarm after receiving a letter that stated her apartment would be searched for drugs. The letter stated Longmont K-9 units would accompany the housing authority on the search to help with the dog's training. "How many zeros in my bank account do I need in order to have respect or privacy? That angered me. Why are low income people treated this way? I had no idea until I moved here," said Appling,. "It's a huge invasion of privacy, it's ridiculous, it's ludicrous, it blows my mind they have to use our homes to train their dogs," said resident Mary Moore.

The Weld County Sheriff's Office reviewed the search, and determined the incident was not consistent with Longmont Police Department standards. In a YouTube video provided by the department, Chief Mike Butler said his department does not condone illegal searches. "We regret what happened at The Suites and have already taken corrective action to ensure this never happens again," said Butler.

Some residents say there is a drug problem at the housing complex, but don't agree on how to tackle the issue. "I'm a firm believer if you have nothing to hide, it's not a big deal," said one resident. "I think they really took advantage of the fact that this is low income housing," said Moore. "That we would be ignorant of the fact that we have inalienable rights to not have our property seized without a warrant." Appling said she's pleased the police department admitted fault and plans to use this incident as a learning lesson. "I feel vindicated, I feel like I've done a public good. I'm happy they are going to take a look at themselves and re-evaluate what they are doing," said Appling.

FOX31 contacted the Longmont Housing Authority, but no one returned FOX31's request for an interview.

[CO] Longmont police didn't follow procedures with warrantless searches, city concludes (Boulder Daily Camera, CO)
Boulder Daily Camera
(7/14/2017 7:59 PM, John Fryar)
VIDEO. Longmont officials concluded Friday that procedures used to establish consent during warrantless searches of the Longmont Housing Authority's Suites apartments in May were not consistent with the police department's standards.

The city is not releasing the sheriff's office report, instead issuing a news release about the findings Friday.

At issue are allegations that tenants were not told in advance that they had a right to refuse entry by police and K-9 dogs that were accompanying housing authority staff, leading to accusations that Longmont police had participated in unconstitutional warrantless searches.

The Weld County sheriff's staff's independent investigation - conducted on behalf of the city - showed that Longmont police "Policies, procedures, training and practices are all in place and appropriate," according to the city news release.

Longmont's Public Safety Department has initiated its own internal administrative review, the city said in its news release. The city said that Longmont Public Safety Chief Mike Butler had already stated, prior to getting the Weld investigation report earlier this week, that "We regret what happened at The Suites and have already taken corrective actions to ensure that this never happens again."

Those actions, the city said, have included:

--Reiterating and continuing "To clarify how and when our canines are used."
--Reinforcing and continuing "The process for documenting how and when consent is obtained."
--Reinforcing and continuing "The need for communication with supervisors as outlined in our procedures."

The Times-Call has filed a Colorado Open Records Act request for the Weld County report. In an email, City Councilman Jeff Moore said Weld County "Conducted a thorough investigation" but he didn't want to comment on specific details because of the confidentiality of the inquiry. "While I am disappointed by the actions of our officers, corrective actions are already in place and if more are required I am confident in Mike Butler's ability to do the right thing," Moore wrote.

Mayor Dennis Coombs and City Council members Brian Bagley and Joan Peck did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

Michael Reis, the Longmont Housing Authority's executive director, could not be reached for comment on Friday.

David Herrera, the housing authority's attorney, said on Friday that he'd like to see the Weld County Sheriff's Office's report and any reports that emerge from the city's internal investigation and the citizens' review panel. Herrera, who has been conducting an internal investigation for the housing authority board - one he's expecting to present to the board on Tuesday and that may be followed by a public statement or news release from that agency - said seeing the Weld County Sheriff's Office report "Would help me give a more complete report" to the housing authority. He added that the housing authority board, staff and employees have "Different roles and responsibilities" than Longmont police. "I don't expect that the same criteria for evaluating performance" by police "Could be applied" to the housing authority officials and staff, Herrera said.

[CO] $8M 'Green House' expansion to help more seniors age in place (Fort Collins Coloradoan, CO)
Fort Collins Coloradoan
(7/14/2017 4:23 PM, Saja Hindi and Pat Ferrier)

Expansion effort would help more low-income seniors find care in Loveland.

VIDEO. A cap on the number of available Medicaid beds in Colorado, coupled with a desire to create a "more humane" approach to nursing homes, led the Loveland Housing Authority to a new model of nursing home: Green House homes.

That's Green House, two words, Resource Development Manager Chris Atib said. "Greenhouse, one word, grows plants; and green house, two words, grows people," is the way that Atib was introduced to the concept.

The Loveland Housing Authority is the only housing authority in the country to run a skilled nursing facility, according to Atib, and is one of the few places in the state to even offer the Green House nursing home model.

The model allows seniors to go through stages of escalating care while aging in place at a time when Larimer County's senior population is growing.

Now, due to high demand, the authority is targeting an $8 million expansion that will allow it to provide care to 30 more seniors in 2018.Estimates as of July 1, 2016, show that 14.7 percent of the county's population is age 65 and older, with a 98 percent projected growth of residents ages 65-74 between 2010-2024 and 47 percent growth in that same time period for residents ages 85 and older.

Larimer County has 15 skilled nursing homes and 35 assisted living homes, according to the county's Office on Aging program manager Lynda Meyer.

That's a 4 percent increase from 2016, with another 72 beds in assisted living facilities anticipated for 2018.And as Larimer County's aging population continues to grow, those who work to provide nursing home services have found themselves in a predicament - the county has maxed out its number of beds for patients who rely on Medicaid to cover their care.

Because the Green House homes model is new, it has allowed the Loveland Housing Authority to side-step that cap, said Green House Homes at Mirasol administrator John Stewart. The homes at 490 Mirasol Drive in Loveland first opened in October 2014, with the sixth unit opening in August 2015."This is sadly the only progression in this type of health care model in 20, 30 years ..." Stewart said. The Loveland Housing Authority already has a two-year wait list for the homes.

[CO] Warrantless searches of the Longmont Housing Authority's Suites apartments (Longmont Times-Call, CO)
Longmont Times-Call
(7/15/2017 8:47 AM, Amelia Arvesen)
A resident of an apartment complex run by the Longmont Housing Authority says she refused permission to property managers and police to enter her unit last month, yet they came in anyway, using police dogs to search for drugs.

During that May 10 search at The Suites, Tamika McClure said, the K9 picked up on something, so she was asked to open the drawer of her nightstand - revealing, she said, nothing suspicious inside. "It makes me pretty mad," McClure said Wednesday. "Like invasion of our privacy. Because I have people telling me if they have a search warrant, you have to let them in. But they didn't have a search warrant. We have nothing. We don't do drugs."

Krystal Winship Erazo, the Longmont Housing Authority's director of operations, said that as the steward of the crime-free housing property, she invited police and their dogs to help search units after hearing rumors of drug activity within the subsidized 70-unit complex at 2000 Sunset St. "Clearly if a resident isn't interested in confirming that there aren't drugs in their apartment, then it sparks some curiosity," she said Tuesday. Police also noted there was a recent overdose death at The Suites.

Deputy Chief Jeff Satur said he was unaware of McClure's allegation, but that the K9 officers involved in the May searches reported they did not enter any apartments without consent.

Officials from the housing authority and police had planned to conduct another round of inspections at The Suites on Wednesday.

Longmont Public Safety Chief Mike Butler said he canceled this week's searches, saying he felt the notice that was sent to residents wasn't clear about the police's intentions. "Given that the letter did not convey the conditions set forth by Longmont Public Safety, specifically those conditions related to protect an individual's constitutional rights, leadership made the decision not to participate in this process," according to a police news release.

Legal director with the American Civil Liberties Union of Colorado, said if police entered McClure's apartment after being told "No," it was a violation of the Fourth Amendment's prohibition of unreasonable search and seizure. "What's concerning is that housing authority management and the police forced a tenant to allow a warrantless search and invaded her privacy," he said. "It's something that they never even would have tried to do to someone who wasn't living in subsidized housing. People in subsidized housing do not give up their constitutional rights."

[AZ] Records show Navajo housing agency plans to build 15 homes, 15 rentals with $80 million grant (Rose Law Group, AZ)

(7/16/2017 7:52 AM, Craig Harris and Dennis Wagner, The Republic)
A Navajo Housing Authority plan submitted to federal regulators shows it will build just 15 new homes and an equal number of rental properties next fiscal year with a new housing grant of nearly $80 million, records show.

The NHA and tribal officials have said there is a need for at least 30,000 homes on the sprawling reservation that covers much of northern Arizona. However, The Arizona Republic over the past six months has documented failures by the agency to build sufficient housing despite landing hundreds of millions of dollars in grants for that purpose.

Navajo Nation President Russell Begaye and U.S. Sen. John McCain recently criticized the NHA for its lack of homebuilding despite being the largest U.S. recipient of federal dollars for tribal housing needs.

[WA] Newhouse amendment would expand farmworker housing use (Capital Press - Agriculture Weekly)
Capital Press - Agriculture Weekly
(7/14/2017 8:40 PM, Dan Wheat)
USDA-funded farmworker housing could be reopened to H-2A visa foreign guestworkers under an amendment to the 2018 House Agricultural Appropriations bill from Rep. Dan Newhouse, R-Wash.

If passed by the full House and Senate, the provision will benefit a 70-bed Yakima Housing Authority facility in Granger, Wash., next year and similar farmworker housing in Oroville, Wash., said Dan Fazio, director of the farm labor association WAFLA in Olympia.

USDA-funded farmworker housing was closed to H-2A workers by the Obama administration under the premise they could displace domestic workers, Fazio said. "The irony is many domestic workers lack work authorization so those here legally didn't have precedence over others," Fazio said. "Our position is it should be open to all."

The problem was brought to light by Bob Boehm, Michigan Farm Bureau commodity and marketing manager, when the organization was being assisted by WAFLA in setting up an H-2A program, Fazio said. Fazio learned it was a problem in Granger and Oroville and brought it to the attention of Newhouse, whose Sunnyside farm is near Granger.

The amendment should benefit hundreds of other farmworker housing facilities in Washington, Michigan, North Carolina and California, Fazio said.

(7/15/2017 11:14 PM, Mark Prado)
Two key meetings this week will bring Marin City's Golden Gate Village public housing into focus as the complex's past could very much affect its future.

At 9 a.m. Friday, the State Historical Resources Commission will meet at San Rafael City Hall to consider putting Golden Gate Village on the state register and nominating it to the National Register of Historic Places.

If the designation is given, it could have an effect on how the Marin Housing Authority manages the property. It has hired a consultant to look at a rebuild to bring in some higher-priced rental units and commercial space to help subsidize low-income housing as a public private partnership. Another resident plan has focused on historic preservation of the site with upgrades, while a hybrid of the two also has emerged.

The Housing Authority will take input on future plans from the public at a meeting at 6 p.m. Monday at the Marin City Senior Center.

I am writing to you again to update you about the revitalization efforts we are undertaking with the community at the Marin Housing Authority's (MHA) Golden Gate Village (GGV) in Marin City.

We are excited to be moving forward on an analysis of how revitalization can occur at GGV, along the most feasible and community-driven path we can take. We encourage the public to our upcoming meetings to learn about the feasibility of the economic, social and physical components of the two revitalization models — historic preservation and mixed income, specifically showing the financial viability of these two models.

The next community meeting is Monday at 6 p.m. at 640 Drake Ave., Marin City. Ads will be in the IJ and distributed through community outreach efforts; and the public can get information at: www.future4ggv.com.

Over the past two and a half years, we have been engaging with the community in and around GGV about their vision for a thriving Golden Gate Village. We know that GGV requires significant investment to remain a viable affordable housing resource and thriving community. Public housing has not been adequately funded for decades — in fact, MHA has only about $500,000 per year for capital improvements for its six public housing developments, but Golden Gate Village alone has about $25 million in capital needs over the next 10 years.

[CA] Industry wants to add 20 homes to the city, here's why that's actually a big deal (San Gabriel Valley Tribune, CA)
San Gabriel Valley Tribune
(7/17/2017 2:57 AM, Jason Henry)
INDUSTRY >> The City of Industry wants to build 20 new homes, a move that would increase the overall housing stock by more than 30 percent and dramatically expand the electorate in the insular city.

Industry, a business-centric town known for warehouses and factories, has only about 200 residents and 60 homes. Half of the homes are controlled by the city and rented for $700 a month to city officials, their friends and family members.

The other half are almost all owned by companies tied to the former mayor, David Perez.

If Industry is going to get away from its company town image, the city has to bring in new residents through a fair process with "defensible qualifying standards," Lockyer said.

"I think that's the direction it is heading," he said.

Currently, landing a house in Industry is all about whom you know. Prospective tenants do not provide proof of income or fill out an application. Recent tenants, most with ties to the city leadership, simply mailed a letter to the city's housing authority saying they would like to move in.

State Sen. Ed Hernandez, who pressured the city into hiring Lockyer by threatening to force action through the Legislature, called out the slow progress in a letter, asking Lockyer for a one-year update on the city's reforms.

Marin Independent Journal
(7/17/2017 2:54 AM, Mark Prado)
County officials counter there is $16 million worth of repairs needed to the units and buildings, and that the housing authority's sole source of income to make improvements is $500,000 in annual money received from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. To make repairs, a partnership with a nonprofit developer has been discussed.

Under federal rules, no matter what happens, 296 low-income units must be offered if Golden Gate Village is rebuilt in some form. And housing officials point to a poll they conducted last year among residents that show 57 percent want a new unit. Another 35 percent said they wanted to keep their unit with some improvements, while 8 percent wanted no change.

But Marin City community activist Royce McLemore wants the historical designation, and then money to upgrade the existing buildings.

Anything else would "destroy our community," she said. "What the Housing Authority talks about would bring further gentrification and force people not only out of Marin City, but Marin County."

[HI] Tiny home solution brewing in Anahola (Garden Island Newspaper, HI)
Garden Island Newspaper
(7/16/2017 6:16 AM, Allan Parachini)
If you've driven through Anahola lately, you may have noticed a small building under construction that until a couple of days ago looked like three shipping containers placed side by side.

They are NOT shipping containers. Rather, what you see is an experiment with a new type of manufactured housing. Its structural design has some similarities to shipping containers and the basic units, which are 8 by 8 by 20 feet, can be placed side by side, end to end or on top of one another.

But the building you see may never be occupied because it's a demonstration project for a concept that could present a major solution to part of Kauai's affordable housing crisis. What sets it apart is that this tiny house shows its value in a small-scale, limited and focused way, rather than trying to attack housing as a single gigantic issue requiring one complicated, expensive and time-consuming political strategy.

It's the product of an initiative by the Homestead Housing Authority, an Anahola nonprofit developer headed by Robin Puanani Danner. Danner is a familiar and, to some, controversial figure within and outside the Native Hawaiian community. She's an advocate of federal recognition for Native Hawaiians, as opposed to the entirely infeasible dream of restoration of sovereignty.

Climate change and less federal money may hit states hard (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(7/15/2017 2:18 PM, Sarah Breitenbach)
The tornado hit the suburbs east of New Orleans at lunchtime on a mild Tuesday in February.

At its calmest, the tornado tugged at asphalt shingles.

Winds of roughly 150 mph hopped over Chef Menteur Highway, and by the time the tornado fizzled out over Lake Borgne, it had caused millions of dollars in damage.

Together with a cluster of other windstorms, it became the seventh presidentially declared major disaster of 2017.

States have come to rely on these declarations, and since the 1980s the federal government has been on the hook for the majority of recovery costs when a disaster is declared.

As the country faces an increasing number of billion-dollar disasters, federal officials are considering scaling back that spending to save taxpayer money and encourage states to prepare for disasters with their own resources.

That has some local officials worried, fearing that other programs and services would suffer, said Bryan Koon, Florida's emergency management director.

Cities Look to Business (Not Washington) to Build Sustainability (Politico)
Politico
(7/14/2017 11:33 AM, Politico Magazine)
A What Works working group report.

When it comes to building cities to withstand the ravages of age, climate change and a rapidly evolving economy, America's mayors have probably never felt more alone. They are dealing with the tangible effects of climate change but cannot depend on the federal government, which has just pulled the country out of Paris Accords and is rapidly unwinding environmental regulations on air and water quality. Increasingly, they find themselves at odds with state legislatures that preempt their authority to act locally. While welcoming the news from President Trump's administration about a much ballyhooed $1 trillion infrastructure plan, mayors are facing mixed signals about how much money is likely to be kicked in by the federal government and how much cities will have to scrounge up from private entities. In the face of these challenges, how can cities make themselves more sustainable—and more resilient? When the solutions to the biggest problems facing modern society come with equally big price tags, how do mayors pay for them? And given competing financial priorities and a climate of partisan polarization, how do mayors convince their constituents that investing in a more sustainable city is the right thing to do? And, finally, given the limited regulatory jurisdiction, how do cities leverage other key players and resources?

POLITICO brought together mayors, policy and funding experts to consider these questions. In an on-the-record discussion moderated by POLITICO's editorial director of events, Luiza Savage, and What Works editor, Bill Duryea, the group discussed the ways cities are promoting sustainability and building cities to accommodate population growth, withstand extreme weather, and fortify aging infrastructure. In order to encourage fee and frank conversation, comments were not attributed to individual participants.

Participants in the working group had first-hand experience in implementing a broad variety of sustainability initiatives. They included an energy-saving program that metered 61 buildings in an entire downtown; GPS-monitoring of asthma inhalers to identify hotspots of poor air quality; a bus rapid transit system that connects an existing train line to the downtown; and reserving a set percentage of bond issues to cover the cost of recycling, solar-electrification and LED lighting.

[NY] City wants to turn parking lots into solar-power plants (Crain's New York Business, NY)

The Parks Department is negotiating a deal for a pilot program to expand green infrastructure

The de Blasio administration wants to turn city-owned parking lots into miniature solar-power plants, officials said this week.

The Department of Parks and Recreation owns or operates 333 parking lots and has identified 40 that could host canopies topped with solar panels, along with charging stations for electric vehicles, self-powered streetlights and underground reservoirs to catch rainwater that would otherwise flow into the overburdened sewer system.

Parks, which held a public hearing on the matter Thursday, is currently negotiating a contract with the New York office of Florida engineering and consulting firm NV5. The firm is leading a team that would be tasked with coming up with designs for five lots and drawing up a full construction plan for one of them as a pilot program.

"The project aims to transform these parking lots into places that generate renewable energy, provide vehicle shading, protect water resources and buffer communities against severe storms and sea level rise," the city wrote in a request for proposals.

The city said that the energy harnessed could be used to light the area beneath the canopies, power electric-vehicle charging stations and nearby park facilities, or be credited against Parks' bill with utilities such as Consolidated Edison.

[LA] New Orleans Sets Ambitious Climate Action Goals (Next City)
Next City
(7/17/2017 5:20 AM, Nina Feldman)
Since Hurricane Katrina in 2005, the word "resiliency" in New Orleans has become so much of a buzzword, it's almost a joke. But climate change is no laughing matter, and there's a reason the term gets thrown around so much: Being prepared for and able to respond to storms, the severity of which scientists say is the result of climate change, is critical — especially for a city positioned precariously below sea level.

This month, New Orleans joined a number of other U.S. cities in going beyond buzzwords. The city released its “Climate Action for a Resilient New Orleans” plan, which pledges to cut greenhouse gas emissions by 50 percent by 2030. To achieve this goal, Mayor Mitch Landrieu and his team outlined an ambitious set of strategies, including reducing trips in cars by 50 percent, using all low-carbon energy, and diverting waste away from landfills.

In a letter introducing the plan, the mayor wrote that the city aims to address rising temperatures and rising sea levels first and foremost. He classified climate change as an “existential threat.”

“If global temperature rises unchecked, New Orleans will not see another 300 years,” he wrote, referencing the city’s upcoming tricentennial next year.

Brendan Shane is the North American regional director with C40, a network of cities working on climate change. He says the New Orleans plan is among the most ambitious of those he’s seen from other cities, which is what one would expect from a city facing such dire and imminent threats. He says New Orleans is going to be completely driven by warming, since it’s already feeling the effects.

[LA] Rising sea levels threaten Louisiana homeowners with billions in losses, real estate economists say (Baton Rouge Advocate, LA)
Baton Rouge Advocate
(7/15/2017 7:20 PM, Steve Hardy)
Louisiana homeowners have billions of dollars on the line - $13.2 billion to be exact - if climate change continues to push sea levels up, according to real estate economists.

A year ago, the real estate company Zillow compared its extensive housing data with federal meteorologists’ predictions on sea level rise.

Last month, the company pushed to publicize its findings after President Donald Trump withdrew the United States from the international Paris Agreement that seeks to mitigate climate change.

"When we talk about ‘underwater’ homes, we are generally referring to negative equity," researcher Krishna Rao wrote on the company’s website.

"But there is, of course, a more literal way a home can be underwater: Rising sea levels, and the flooding likely to come with them, could inundate millions of U.S. homes worth hundreds of billions of dollars."

Zillow looked at what areas would be swallowed up if ocean levels rise by 6 feet, reasoning that such a shift could occur by 2100 "If climate change continues unchecked."

Using forecasts from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the firm considered what areas would be submerged.

As companies relocate to big cities, suburban towns are left scrambling (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(7/16/2017 8:59 AM, Jonathan O’Connell)
OAK BROOK, Ill. — Visitors to the McDonald’s wooded corporate campus enter on a driveway named for the late chief executive Ray Kroc, then turn onto Ronald Lane before reaching Hamburger University, where more than 80,000 people have been trained as fast-food managers.

Surrounded by quiet neighborhoods and easy highway connections, this 86-acre suburban compound adorned with walking paths and duck ponds was for four decades considered the ideal place to attract top executives as the company rose to global dominance.

Now its leafy environs are considered a liability. Locked in a battle with companies of all stripes to woo top tech workers and young professionals, McDonald's executives announced last year that they were putting the property up for sale and moving to the West Loop of Chicago where "L" trains arrive every few minutes and construction cranes dot the skyline.

In Chicago, McDonald's will join a slew of other companies — among them food giant Kraft Heinz, farming supplier ADM and telecommunications firm Motorola Solutions — all looking to appeal to and be near young professionals versed in the world of e-commerce, software analytics, digital engineering, marketing and finance.

Poverty Still Isn't As Suburban As You Think (The Atlantic CityLab)
The Atlantic CityLab
(7/17/2017 5:20 AM, Joe Cortright)
Yes, there's need everywhere. But we shouldn't lose sight of the pernicious dangers of urban poverty, in particular.

There's a growing chorus about the so-called suburbanization of poverty. A couple of years ago, Alan Ehrenhalt's Great Inversion argued that the wealthy and well-educated are moving to cities and the poor are being displaced to suburbs, in essence reversing the historical pattern of urban settlement in the U.S. The Brookings Institution has issued a series of reports noting that the number of poor persons living in suburbs has increased faster than in cities. A new book from the University of Washington's Scott Allard is the latest in a series of reports.

There's a political subtext to all of these arguments: You can't escape or ignore poverty simply by moving to the suburbs. As a result, the argument goes, you've got to be a supporter of an anti-poverty agenda, no matter where you live: poverty isn't just an urban issue, because it's not confined to cities. So if you're elected to Congress, whether you represent an urban district or a suburban one, you ought to support programs that fight poverty. Brookings Institution's Elizabeth Kneebone makes this point explicitly; her report chronicles suburban poverty rates by congressional district, and she told The Atlantic's CityLab in a story entitled "Rising suburban poverty is a bi-partisan problem":

> "The numbers really underscore how cross-cutting an issue poverty is—it's not just a red or a blue issue or an inner-city or suburban issue."

Fair enough. We ought to be willing to fight poverty wherever it's present. While we understand the value of political talking points that can help build a broader geographic constituency for the federal programs—like Section 8 vouchers, food stamps (SNAP), and the earned income tax credit, all of which do wonders to blunt the effects of poverty—we worry that the attention focused on suburban poverty has tended to overshadow the fundamentally urban character of poverty, especially concentrated poverty.

What's the Greatest Risk Cities Face? (Politico)
Politico

Donald Trump has called America's inner cities "crime infested," "almost at an all-time low" and "more dangerous than some of the war zones," even as violent crime in America has been declining for decades. Which isn't to say that our cities don't still face serious problems. But what are they really? We asked mayors, urbanists and other thinkers to name the biggest threats that American cities currently face, and most took the long view—looking beyond Trump to challenges like urban broadband deserts, a shallow mayoral talent pool, crippling pension crises, and state or federal meddling.

Vanishing families

Dante Chinni, director of the American Communities Project at George Washington University and co-author of Our Patchwork Nation: The Surprising Truth About the "Real" America

The revival of U.S. cities over the past decade has largely been a function of younger Americans, particularly those with a college education, seeking out the excitement and diversity of an urban life. Those younger singles and couples have been flowing back into big cities across the country in various degrees—from D.C. to Denver and even Detroit. But if cities want to become more than just a home for the low and high ends of the economic scale, they will need the stability of families. Millennials will have to decide to stay in their urban homes after the footloose days of hipsterdom and into the more complicated years of parenthood. To do that, cities will need to improve public schools and make sure there are affordable options for those needing larger, family-sized dwellings. That, in turn, could lift the larger tide of city residents from various economic backgrounds. It likely won't be easy, but if cities can turn their young, hip urban dwellers into middle-aged parents, they may be able to turn their early 21st-century boom into something more sustainable.

Why Neighborhoods Get Better: Research Provides Insights That May Surprise You (Forbes)
Forbes
(7/17/2017 5:20 AM, Kevin Murnane)
If you live in a city long enough, you see neighborhoods change over time. Sometimes trajectories of improvement or decay continue, sometimes they reverse. What are some of the factors that predict neighborhood improvement? A recently published paper in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences (PNAS) takes an innovative approach to this question and some of the answers that were found may surprise you.

Neighborhood appearance and neighborhood safety

The team of researchers from MIT, Harvard and the National Bureau of Economic Research leveraged advances in computer vision and machine learning to examine how changes in neighborhood appearance correlated with perceptions of neighborhood safety over a seven-year period. They began with pairs of images taken by Google Street View in 2007 and 2014. The images in each pair showed the same street from approximately the same location. The streets were located in Baltimore, Boston, Detroit, New York, and Washington, DC.

Each image was assigned a Streetscore that was developed as a measure of how safe the street appeared to be. The Streetscore was assigned by a machine learning algorithm that was trained on a database of street images tagged with people's perceptions of safety based on how a street looked.

[NY] Federal grants will repair homes and roads in Town of Tonawanda (Buffalo News, NY)
Buffalo News
(7/14/2017 9:02 AM, Nancy A. Fischer)
The Town of Tonawanda and the Village of Kenmore have been awarded over $1.5 million in Community Development Block Grant funds to repair homes owned by low- to moderate-income residents and for infrastructure repairs in low- to moderate-income neighborhoods.

An additional $191,983 will provide assistance for major home repairs and will also aid first-time home buyers, based on income guidelines.

About $200,000, half of the total highway roads budget, will be used for road repairs in designated neighborhoods, and another $60,000 will be used for sidewalk repairs, according to Director of Planning and Development James Hartz.

About $1 million will be used for home repair loans, allowing low- to moderate-income homeowners to receive zero-interest loans to make major home repairs.

[PA] In long impoverished Mantua, signs of change spark hope, and gentrification fears (Philly.com, PA)
Philly.com
(7/14/2017 8:40 AM, Caitlin McCabe)
By the time President Barack Obama stood in the East Room of the White House in 2014, ready to make an announcement about a 2-square-mile West Philadelphia enclave, part of it had already spent ample time in the news.

After all, the stretch from Girard Avenue to Sansom Street and from the Schuylkill to 48th Street included Mantua, where Kermit Gosnell performed illegal abortions that left a woman and several babies dead and where a prominent activist was gunned down while handing out trophies for a youth basketball league. It was the same neighborhood where, week after week, headlines of gunshots and crime had become almost normal.

But Obama's announcement had a different tone: These two square miles would become one of his administration's first five "Promise Zones," he said, part of a program that would give 20 high-poverty communities a chance to change.

In theory, the initiative would create jobs, bolster safety, improve education, and increase affordable housing, though no money was included. Instead, the designation would give these communities preferential treatment when they applied for federal grants.

Even so, residents say, Mantua remains Mantua: fiercely proud, culturally rich, and still beset by economic difficulty and crime. The neighborhood still has no grocery store, and shots continue to ring out on many nights. In 2009, the median income for a Mantua household was $19,700 — 47 percent lower than the citywide median income of $36,700.

But slowly, subtly, Little said, things are improving — on the neighborhood's terms, even if it's difficult for residents here to detect. Thanks to the Promise Zone, the city was awarded a $30 million "Promise Neighborhood" grant over five years from the U.S. Department of Education, aimed at expanding literacy, improving job training, and providing behavioral support for seven public schools in the area. A grant of nearly $600,000 has been obtained from the Department of Justice to improve public safety, Little said. And a Department of Housing and Urban Development grant was secured to boost resources to crack down on predatory mortgage lending.

The city's comprehensive plan suggests creating mechanisms to deal with the condition of city properties, but some property owners feel unfairly targeted.

Scott Little is largely unfamiliar with the details of Erie Refocused.

But the city's multimillion-dollar, multiyear comprehensive development plan — specifically the way it suggests a more aggressive approach to enforcing housing and building codes and combating blight — has the potential to be costly for Little's eastside business.

Little is the owner of Scotty's Cigar & Martini Lounge, 301 German St. On June 15, Little received an order to correct numerous building code violations that city Code Enforcement Officer Aaron Snippert cataloged via an exterior inspection of the Scotty's building.

Those violations include holes in the bar's exterior brick walls; wood surfaces in decay; chipped paint; and portions of brick veneer "not properly anchored," which could present a safety hazard to passers-by.

Snippert, 35, is a former director of the Erie Redevelopment Authority's housing programs. He was hired as a city code enforcement officer in November and directed to concentrate his energy in east and west bayfront neighborhoods.

His $70,000-a-year job is funded by federal Community Development Block Grant dollars from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Adding a code enforcement officer to focus on the east and west bayfront, as well as "proactive code enforcement sweeps" in those areas, were both recommendations of Erie Refocused, the city's first comprehensive plan in decades.

[PA] Eisenberg's heritage remembered as MVI moves apartments into Monessen building (Uniontown Herald Standard, PA)

On Wednesday, Ron and Laura Wilen marked their 19th wedding anniversary.

On Thursday, the couple was on hand to see how their family's heritage is being memorialized with new housing at Eisenberg's Apartments in Monessen. "We are so appreciative of all the organizations who made this happen, and with keeping the family name on this building," Wilen said amid a celebration of the conversion of the former department store building at 401 Schoonmaker Ave. "It is nice that this building will remain an important part of the community," said Laura Wilen, whose husband is a grandson of the store's founders Henry and Lena Eisenberg, immigrants from Hungary and Slovakia, respectively.

According to a history of the store provided to those attending Thursday's event, Henry Eisenberg bought a men's wear store at Fourth Street and Schoonmaker Avenue that was going bankrupt for $1,753 in 1908. He changed the store's name to Eisenberg's and added women's and children clothing lines. In 1915 Monessen businessman Louis Stephens contracted with Motz Lumber Co. to replace the existing wooden-frame building at that location with a two-story brick building. The structure also is known to this day as the Stephens Building. Ron Wilen was associated with Eisenberg's from 1976 to 1997, when the store closed.

"It is wonderful to see they have done something productive for this community," Ron Wilen said. "There are 12 pre-leases that are in the pipeline here," said Mon Valley Initiative board Chairman Dale Bizub, whose agency and its Monessen affiliate developed the installation of 13 apartments into the three-story building. "The apartments are lovely and affordable," Laura Wilen said. MVI said rents for the units will range from $405 to $620 per month.

"It has been a long time coming," said Matthew Shorraw, Democratic nominee for mayor of Monessen, but there in his role as a member of the board of MVI affiliate Monessen Community Development Corporation. "It's a positive thing for the city," Shorraw said. "We'll get some foot traffic downtown again. Hopefully, it can be replicated elsewhere in the city."

Just under $1.4 million is coming from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development through its HOME Program, with $305,150 provided by the Pennsylvania Housing Finance Agency through its Pennsylvania Housing Affordability and Rehabilitation Enhancement Fund, $161,941 from the county-administered Act 137 Affordable Housing Program and $500,000 from the Federal Home Loan Bank through a program sponsored by Standard Bank.

[PA] Penn Hills arson highlights problem of abandoned houses (Pittsburgh Tribune-Review, PA)
Pittsburgh Tribune-Review
(7/15/2017 5:49 AM, Dillon Carr)
A Wednesday fire on Grandview Avenue in Penn Hills demonstrated a significant problem in the municipality — abandoned houses.

The Cape Cod-style home at 10007 Grandview Ave. had flames and heavy smoke coming out of it before firefighters quickly brought it under control.

Tracy Williams, a Grandview resident, said she and other neighbors have appealed to Penn Hills officials several times to board up the handful of vacant houses in the immediate area. "We want them to board it up or knock it down," Williams said. "Teenagers, they're going in there to smoke weed. I'm sure they're doing other criminal things." She said the house that caught fire has been vacant for three to four years. There are five vacant houses on Grandview Avenue and Johnston Road, Williams said.

Another neighbor, Lavette Wagner, who lives on Johnston Road, said she has contacted the municipality with the same concerns. "I think there needs to be a vacant and abandoned home task force or something like that," Wagner said.

According to the Allegheny County property website, the house was built in 1941 and is owned by Progeny Investors LLC of 14 High Ridge Court in Plum. The company owes four years of taxes on the property totalling $723.

According to Damian Buccilli, Penn Hills planner, there are 1,678 vacant homes and 50 abandoned ones scattered throughout Penn Hills. A vacant home, he explained, is categorized as such when the owner and the municipality are in contact. An abandoned home is a vacant one for which the municipality has no contact information.

[MD] Here's a suburban experiment cities can learn from (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(7/14/2017 12:17 PM, Amanda Kolson Hurley)
In an era when city living is virtually synonymous with cool, Columbia, Md., emanates suburban uncool. Located off U.S. Route 29 between Washington and Baltimore, Columbia is not a tight grid on the map, but a plate of spaghetti — a tangle of crooked parkways and cul-de-sacs. Cities reach for the sky, but Columbia hugs the ground, with shopping centers and man-made lakes passing for landmarks. In cities, 20-somethings get together at cafes for brunch; in Columbia, 40-somethings catch up while watching their kids at the pool or playground. Columbia's version of a city hall is a nondescript building in an office park. The most colorful thing about the place is its twee street names, chosen from literature: Rivendell Lane, Marble Faun Lane, Rocksparkle Row.

Even residents agree that Columbia is, well, a little dull. “When we moved here, my boyfriend said, ‘The only thing you can really say about Columbia is that it’s convenient,’ “ notesAdrienne Neff, a 30-year-old resident who works at Behnke Nurseries in Beltsville. Van Doan, a 46-year-old lawyer who also lives in Columbia, recalls that, at first, “it struck me as a ‘Stepford Wives’ kind of place.”

Blandness is not usually associated with utopias. But while Columbia might appear bland on the surface, it was very much the product of idealism. The town’s developer, James Rouse, referred to it as “the next America.” When he set out to build the town in the 1960s, suburbs were already seen as soulless sprawl. Rouse’s vision was a response to that.

As a developer, he was attuned to the market. He chose the location based on research that predicted the Baltimore-Washington region would grow faster than anywhere else east of the Mississippi. And when it came to design, he observed that if architecture critics praised Columbia, it would be a flop — no one would buy the houses. (He was proved right when the country entered a recession in the mid-1970s and the houses kept selling, albeit slowly.) But Rouse was also ahead of his time in his pursuit of an ecologically sensitive, mixed-income and colorblind community in an era when redlining was common. And Columbia’s success on those fronts stands out next to most of the planned communities that came after it.

[VA] Newport News has plenty of development work planned (Newport News Daily Press, VA)
Newport News Daily Press
(7/14/2017 6:40 AM, Tara Bozick)
VIDEO. Newport News wants to accomplish more with its announced development projects before taking on too much more, the city’s development director said this week.

A key focus will be Ferguson’s planned City Center at Oyster Point campus that will bring 1,400 workers, including more than 400 new employees, to the mixed-use development with the city building a 1,500-space parking garage, Mayor McKinley Price and Newport News Development Director Florence Kingston told about 50 attendees of an Urban Land Institute Virginia meeting at Christopher Newport University on Tuesday.

Attendee Thomas O’Grady with Clancy & Theys Construction Co. in Newport News wanted to know what the Ferguson campus would mean for City Center, although Kingston said it was too early to gauge interest. "I think the spin-off opportunities are tremendous for City Center for future office, retail and residential," O’Grady said.

The city is working on a plan to enliven downtown while still trying to create more attractive housing options across the city, Kingston said, adding the city’s aging housing stock is a competitive disadvantage. She said the city needs housing that keeps both younger workers and company leaders living within the city. "We have got to work on some new housing options at all prices," Kingston said. When asked about interest for homes or development for Economic Development Authority-owned land near Endview Plantation, Kingston said she doesn’t want to rush and would like to see other projects on the books get started. She said Patrick Henry Place and Huntington Pointe are moving forward and would add new homes.

The city is using a $500,000 Choice Neighborhoods Initiative planning grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to find ways to improve the Ridley Place public housing complex and the surrounding area in the Southeast Community, Price said.

[GA] County removes more than 700 tons of debris from Brannon Hill (Atlanta Journal-Constitution, GA)

DeKalb County workers removed 769 tons of debris away from demolished buildings at Brannon Hill Condominium in Clarkston on July 13. Crews continued clearing into the evening July 14 to complete Phase I work at the site.

Progress was made utilizing 26 employees working a combined 272 hours with 28 pieces of heavy equipment and dump trucks. Trucks removed 88 loads of debris to DeKalb County’s Seminole Road Landfill.

Built in 1973, more than 100 units at the complex are vacant and in various states of disrepair. On Nov. 18, 2016, DeKalb County obtained a court order allowing nuisance abatement in Brannon Hill at four buildings totaling 68 units. Phase I of the cleanup includes removing debris from two buildings (28 units).

Phase II will occur later in 2017, when DeKalb will identify and award a contract to demolish and remove debris from the other two buildings (40 units). This project utilizes approximately $400,000 in federal Community Development Block Grant funds.

[GA] Memories of bustling black enclave inspire vision for Liberty Districts future (Columbus Ledger-Enquirer, GA)
Columbus Ledger-Enquirer
(7/14/2017 7:34 AM, Alva James-Johns)
VIDEO. The glory days of the Liberty District remain etched in the minds of people who lived, worked and played there.

Tax Commissioner Lula Huff remembers what it was like back in the '50s and '60s when the district was a bustling, black enclave with residents, restaurants, professional offices and entertainment. It was home to the first black United Service Organization in the world, she recalled, and her father started a taxi service to transport black soldiers to and from Fort Benning. Huff shared those memories at a Liberty District Master Plan Update Meeting held Tuesday at the historic Liberty Theatre on Eighth Avenue. The gathering, which drew about 25 people, was the second of three meetings held this year concerning the district's future. The first was held May 30 at the Government Center Annex on 10th Street.

In his opening remarks, City Manager Isaiah Hugley told the group that he envisions the Liberty District being an extension of Uptown, with mixed-use development to included housing, restaurants, hotels, and entertainment. "... There's not much property in the boundaries of Uptown left, and so this is where it needs to happen," he said. At the meeting, Hugley showed a rendering of the block where the Liberty Theatre is located, redeveloped with buildings, landscaping and bustling streets. He said city officials would hold one more informational meeting and then form a committee to work on plans for the area.

The community still has to decide whether to stick with a 2003 master plan, tweak it, or develop another one, he said. Huff, who opposed the city's plans to bring a Columbus Housing Authority complex to the area four years ago, said everything Hugley described is already in the 2003 master plan. "I don't see us starting all over again, brand new, when we already have something that is in existence," she said. "And in the plan it says that it will have to be updated, and that over a period of time, things would change. It is designed the way it is to be adaptable, so that as change occurs, you incorporate those changes."

[FL] Residents in Oneco, Samoset get top billing in county's funding plans. But federal funding could be in jeopardy. (Bradenton Herald, FL)

Manatee - With a lot of older homes in Manatee County in need of rehabilitation, that comes up as one of the county's No. 1 needs when meeting with low- and moderate-income residents.

To address the needs these residents voice, Manatee County officials are recommending spending nearly $600,000 in federal funds this next fiscal year to improve some of these homes, particularly in the Oneco and Samoset neighborhoods.

The need is great.

Geri Lopez, Manatee County redevelopment and economic opportunity director

"That's something very different that we are doing this year that we haven't done in the past," said Geri Lopez, the county's redevelopment and economic opportunity director. "A lot of older homes are in desperate needs of rehabilitation. We really upped the amount and our focus."

The increased focus on home rehabilitation — $300,000 in Community Development Block Grant and $276,142 in HOME Investment Partnership funds — is among the projects recommended for funding in the county's 2017-18 Action Plan, which is available for public review until July 25 when it goes before the county commission for approval.

"The need is great," Lopez said. "There were a good amount of priority needs that were identified."

But there's no guarantee the funding will be available next year. President Donald Trump's 2018 budget for the Department of Housing and Urban Development proposes the elimination of both the Community Development Brock Grants and HOME Investment Partnerships.

[FL] Federal funding in jeopardy for low-income areas (Herald Tribune, Sarasota, FL)
Herald Tribune.com
(7/14/2017 4:57 PM, Dale White)
Local government officials across the nation, including in the Sarasota-Manatee area, say the loss of that revenue will greatly hinder their efforts to assist low- to moderate-income individuals and families with housing repairs, neighborhood infrastructure and other services.

City and county governments have long relied on community development block grants from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to subsidize such projects.

Mick Mulvaney, President Donald Trump's director of the Office of Management and Budget, contends that CDBG-funded efforts are "Just not showing any results."

"I can't go to the autoworker in Ohio and say, 'Please give me some of your money so I can do this program over here someplace else that really isn't helping anybody,'" Mulvaney told MSNBC. His assessment has long been shared by political observers critical of what they regard as wasteful or inappropriate government spending.

The conservative Reason Foundation contends the CDBG program is an example of "Crony capitalism" fraught with "Waste, fraud and corruption."

HUD has found some local governments spending too much of their CDBG grants on administrative costs or on questionable projects, such as venues in Honolulu intended to serve the elderly and disabled that were also marketed for weddings, parties, corporate retreats and other functions. Despite some past abuses, local government officials across the nation insist CDBG is a worthy program.

They are beginning to speak out and ask Congress to block the White House effort to eliminate it. The U.S. Conference of Mayors is organizing a nationwide, bipartisan campaign to keep CDBG spending intact.

The organization says "More than 7,000 rural, suburban and urban communities" will lose opportunities for "Housing investments, public infrastructure improvements, enhanced public safety services, employment training, as well as services for seniors, youth and the disabled."

[LA] Federal funding for Louisiana farmers impacted by 2016 floods (KPLC-TV NBC 7 Lake Charles, LA)
KPLC-TV NBC 7 Lake Charles
(7/14/2017 8:02 PM, Perris Jones)
VIDEO. Louisiana farmers could soon see federal funding to recover any financial losses from the recent March and August floods of 2016.

A $10 million grant is being funded through the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for farmers in 51 parishes who qualify.

The funding will be administered by the Louisiana Department of Agriculture of Forestry, which has held meetings throughout the state to inform farmers of the guidelines and application process to receive some of the grant money. In our area, farmers in Calcasieu, Beauregard, Allen and Jeff Davis Parish are eligible.

For farmers like Charles Britt, a farmer in Jeff Davis Parish, the $10 million grant won't be enough. "If everybody applies for everything like that, we might get a hamburger out of that deal or a coke," said Britt. "I mean 10 million dollars won't go very far." Britt has been a farmer in Jeff Davis Parish for more than 30 years.

Farmers must have crop loss totaling at least $10,000 and pre-storm revenue of $25,000 in the years since 2014 to be eligible. Crop loss must amount to a minimum of $10,000 as calculated by the crop-loss calculator. Finding out this information is why Kevin Berken, a rice farmer from Jeff Davis Parish, attended Thursday's meeting in Welsh. "I took a big hit last year, quite a substantial loss. It's going to take me quite a few years to dig out of that hole," said Berken. "It's not going to make us whole but it will help."

With all the severe weather, droughts, and disease that impacts the livelihood of farmers in Louisiana, some may ask why they take the risk. "It's the life of a farmer," said Berken. "We don't have a lot of control over the weather, but we accept that and we go on because we love what we do." "It's in our blood, that's what we do," said Britt.

[MO] People's New $6 Million Facility Grand Opening - Mayor to Attend & Other Dignitaries (St. Louis Post-Dispatch, MO)
St. Louis Post-Dispatch
(7/14/2017 11:56 PM, Carl Green)
St. Louis, MO, July 11, 2017 - People's Family of Corporations is pleased to announce the Grand Opening and Naming Ceremony for their new Children and Adolescent Center located at 5647 Delmar Blvd. The center is located east of the Social Security Administration on People's Family of Corporations campus.

The festivities will take place on Saturday, July 15, 2017, at 10:00 a.m., starting at 5701 Delmar Blvd., parking lot. The new $6 Million Dollar facility houses three floors to accommodate 20,000 square feet of clinical and counseling support. The facility will address behavioral health needs of children and adolescents in the St. Louis urban community.

This project is the culmination of coordinated programs and donors that have had a positive impact on healthcare for residents of the Metropolitan St. Louis area. Currently, one in every ten children and adolescents "In our urban communities," have behavioral health concerns. The goal of the Center for Children's Health is to put behavioral health at the forefront of our community's health discussion and not let health issues go unaddressed. The building was designed by Kennedy Associates Inc., the longtime developer of urban building solutions. The contractors for the project were Hankins Construction Company and Raineri Construction.

"I am thrilled to see the success of the Center for Children's Health. All too often, children whose behavioral health issues go unaddressed, grow to lead lives of violence and incarceration. It is the time we bring this issue of behavioral health to the forefront of our community's overall health discussion and treat it with the dignity and respect our community deserves." "It is important to be aware and to know how to address behavioral health concerns of our youth," said Mark Sanford, Executive Vice President, People'sHealth Centers.

[LA] First flooded homes rebuilt under Restore Louisiana program round into completion (Baton Rouge Advocate, LA)
Baton Rouge Advocate
(7/16/2017 9:11 AM, David J. Mitchell)
The Sibleys are the first household in the state that chose option one and had their job finished, state officials said.

But that choice has consequences. It meant the Sibleys had to agree to economy-style finishes for their cabinets, flooring and other improvements. For instance, the Sibleys have Formica counter tops, instead today's more trendy but pricier granite or quartz.

The couple said the economy-grade finishes are fine. They were most concerned with saving wooden molding around the fire place, ceiling, floor and the lower part of the walls in their living room. The state contractors were able to do that, the Sibleys said. They also saved some flooring and a Jacuzzi bath tub.

Forbes said state officials, estimating that 10 percent to 15 percent of households will chose option one, have set aside $75 million from the program. These jobs are being done by builders hired by IEM.

The majority of households are expected to take option two, Forbes said. That option is reserved for residents who want to hire and oversee their own contractor and have the option for upgraded finishes. Homeowners contribute the difference necessary to buy more expensive products, state officials said.

Before work started on the Sibleys' home, it also had to undergo an environmental review required by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, which is the source of the federal recovery dollars granted by Congress. Contractors with IEM do those reviews, the cost of which is built into the state administrator's $225 million contract.

[OH] Ashland pushes to demolish house where 2 bodies found (Canton Repository, OH)

Shawn Grate is accused of killing at least four women, including former Canton resident Candice Cunningham, whose body was found in Richland County.

ASHLAND The city of Ashland wants to demolish the home where two bodies were found and where alleged serial killer Shawn Grate was arrested.

It was revealed during a city council meeting last week that the demolition of that house, at 363 Covert Court, and the neighboring home at 365 Covert Court, could be one of three Community Development Block Grants the city of Ashland will pursue for 2017. Applications for the federal grant were due Friday.

City Engineer Shane Kremser said the house could be considered for demolition to eliminate blight. The state of Ohio will have to determine if the house may be rehabilitated. If the house were deemed uninhabitable, it would be one step closer to being demolished.

One reason Kremser gave for the house being uninhabitable is the discovery of the two bodies in 363 Covert Court on Sept. 13, 2016, after another woman called 911 and told dispatchers she had been abducted. The houses were boarded up Sept. 15.

Bryan-College Station Eagle
(7/16/2017 3:23 AM, Caitlin Clark)
The council on Thursday approved $794,000 in Community Development Partnership Grant (CDBG) funds to Bryan-College Station Habitat for Humanity for acquisition, development and infrastructure costs to construct at least eight affordable single-family homes on Renee Lane.

Those homes will be available for sale to income-eligible households. Habitat for Humanity's plan to acquire a plot of land on Renee Lane for the housing development was a response to a request for proposals from the city. Construction on Habitat for Humanity homes also is set to begin on three lots on Carolina Street in the next year, Eller said.

College Station receives CDBG funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to address the growing need for affordable housing for low- and moderate-income residents.

The council also granted CDBG funds to Twin City Mission for acquisition and rehabilitation costs related to creating four affordable housing units on Blanco Drive. Twin City Mission already owns and manages The Haven Apartments, which provide transitional housing. The $471,500 grant will go toward expanding its current rental program to include a four-plex on Blanco Drive.

[TX] Council OKs Small Area Plans (Longview News-Journal, TX)
Longview News-Journal
(7/14/2017 7:19 AM, Jimmy Isaac)
Neighborhood development ideas for downtown Longview and the Interstate 20 corridor areas now are part of city codes and law.

City Council members accepted Small Area Plans by unanimous votes during their regular meeting Thursday at City Hall. The plans were crafted by consultants and volunteers under a six-month study costing $205,000. The council also approved action plans for federal development and housing grants as well as a rezone request on Lilly Street.

The Small Area Plans, first proposed in the 2015 Comprehensive Plan, are a set of regulatory and zoning concepts to develop downtown and I-20 corridor areas. Freese & Nichols consulting firm of Fort Worth was hired by the city and Longview Economic Development Corp., who shared the cost of the contract. Projects suggested by consultants are valued at more than $160 million, including about $100 million for housing options.

In other matters, the federal Consolidated Action Plans approved by the council call for more than $825,000 in Community Development Block Grants and Home Investment Partnership funding to be spent in the city for housing, business and other development in 2017-18. It represents a 3 percent spending increase from U.S. Housing and Urban Development compared with 2016-17. Community Development and Home Investment Partnership funds pay for affordable housing, public facilities and services and other needs.

[TX] Summer program for disadvantaged Waco ISD students could lose city money (Waco Tribune-Herald, TX)
Waco Tribune-Herald
(7/15/2017 6:08 AM, Shelly Conlon)
Project Promise, a three-week summer program that has served low-income Waco ISD students for 18 years, soon may disappear if organizers can't convince the Waco City Council to fund it for next year.

Officials with the program will plead their case to the council Tuesday to keep its share of about $180,000 in Community Development Block Grant money the city has split between 11 public service programs for the past several years, they said.

The city has slated Project Promise and two programs administered by Mission Waco to quit receiving the money in the city's next budget cycle. The city is working to spread its shrinking pool of grant money among fewer organizations, said Melett Harrison, the city's housing and economic development director. The grant comes from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, and the city can only use about 15 percent, or about $180,000 for next year, toward public services, Harrison said. "That's predominately the nonprofits in this community, and they all do very good and important work," Harrison said. "We just don't have a lot of money to spend there."

The grant requires monitoring of the programs, and it's not worth distributing a small amount of money when the administrative costs are so steep, she said. The city is looking at a $50,000 minimum threshold, and Project Promise has gotten about $37,000 in recent years.

HUD representatives told the city giving small grants to numerous agencies isn't an effective approach, Harrison said.

[TX] Starr County To Lose CDBG Funding For Next Two Years (KRGV-TV Channel 5 Weslaco, TX)
KRGV-TV Channel 5 Weslaco
(7/16/2017 4:38 PM, KRGV-TV Channel 5 Weslaco)
STARR COUNTY - Starr County Judge Eloy Vera received a letter recently stating the county wouldn't be able to apply for Community Development Block Grant funding for the next two years.

The county audit wasn't completed before the June 30th deadline. An audit is necessary for grant applications.

"What this means is that Starr County will not be allowed to apply for CDBG monies because our audit was not completed in a timely manner," said Starr County Judge Eloy Vera.

The previous county auditor's contract wasn't renewed in May. Interim auditor Boyd Carter then took office.

The auditor's office applied for grant extensions in wake of missing the deadline. The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development was the first to officially report back with their decision on CDBG. More granting agencies will soon contact Starr County with their decisions.

Officials seek grant of about $2 million to close gap
Pedestrians walking east on Boston Avenue from the intersection with Sunset Street may be reminded of a Shel Silverstein poem — it's where the sidewalk ends.

Granted, the sidewalk resumes on the eastern side of the bridge, but Longmont resident Paul Tiger says it's unsafe.

"It's a high traffic area and it's a high industrial traffic area," said Tiger, who rides his bike along the stretch with his dog running beside him. "When I go through there, I put on her a leash and I walk her and I'm not a leash guy. I walk her up to that corner."

Tim Swope, the Boulder County transportation department capital project coordinator, said that Boulder County is applying for a grant that would be just under $2 million and close the sidewalk gap on Boston Avenue.

Usually, the county will not construct sidewalks in an area it considers undeveloped and likely to be annexed into a city at some point.

But Swope said Boston Avenue is kind of a special case, because transportation officials are applying for a U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development grant directed at disaster recovery to make the road more resilient to future flooding.

[UT] Ogden city begins new redevelopment approach in East-central area (Ogden Standard-Examiner, UT)
Ogden Standard-Examiner
(7/14/2017 8:14 AM, Mitch Shaw)
OGDEN — Ogden city has officially started the effort to revive one of its East-central neighborhoods, but will be taking a new approach in redeveloping the area.

The city council, acting in their capacity as the city's Redevelopment Agency Board, approved a proposal from the Ogden administration Tuesday night to establish the "Adams Survey Area," which is bounded by 20th and 28th Streets, from Washington Boulevard to Jefferson Avenue.

A resolution approved by the council authorizes the administration to study the area to identify projects that would spur reinvestment and development in the area.

Brandon Cooper, Ogden's deputy director of Community and Economic Development said establishing the survey area begins the process of creating a "Community Reinvestment Area" in the neighborhood.

John Killin pressed the panic button in February amid a multibillion-dollar tsunami of real estate development.

The building frenzy that lit up the Portland-area economy and changed the city irrevocably has depleted the pool of skilled construction workers. In a letter to fellow contractors, Killin warned of a "new normal" of chronic labor shortages.

"There are probably 10,000 open jobs out there," said Killin, executive director of the Associated Wall and Ceiling Contractors of Oregon and Southwest Washington. "We need 800 carpenters, we need about the same number of electricians. And there are 20 more trades."

Nearly a decade after the Great Recession, the long and frustratingly slow recovery has morphed into a barrage of development that by some measures surpasses the mid-2000s housing bubble. The city issued nearly 12,000 buildings permits through the first 10 months of its current fiscal year for a record $2.5 billion in projects, easily eclipsing the previous high of $1.9 billion set the year before.

Fairfield Daily Republic
(7/15/2017 11:50 AM, Ryan McCarthy)
FAIRFIELD - The Community Development Block Grant program expected to provide Fairfield with $3.6 million over five years and deal with issues including homelessness will be taken up at a July 26 meeting.

A federal Housing and Urban Development count conducted in January 2015 showed 344 people were homeless on a single night in Fairfield - with 166 people lacking shelter, according to a report that is part of the block grant. "The most recent count conducted in January 2017 is predicted to be higher," adds the report, which said results of the newer count are not yet available.

"Residents and businesses are experiencing an increase of homeless visibility along the North Texas and West Texas corridor, causing more negative impacts on the community while the homeless attempt to find shelter and services."

Sonoma County has seen a decrease in homelessness, adds the report, which states that San Francisco's situation has remained the same while Marin has experienced an increase. The annual action plan for the block grant identifies how Fairfield plans to use federal monies to meet the goals in the five-year consolidated plan for the city. Uses include $1.2 million for neighborhood revitalization and $183,352 for administration of the grant. Review of the plans will be held in Lakeside Suite A in the Fairfield Community Center.

(7/15/2017 11:51 AM, Daily Republic)
SUISUN CITY - City Council members will consider a proposal Tuesday regarding a possible development on 34 acres along the northern lines of Highway 12 and west of Marina Boulevard.

The land was acquired by the now defunct redevelopment agency and has been transferred to the housing authority. It has been marketed for sale by the city, a staff report notes. Development interest was inconsistent for the current zoning.

Last September, city staff talked about the property at a trade conference on shopping centers. Lewis Operating Group, based in Upland, expressed interest and is asking for six months to vet the site. The company could also exercise the option of a 90-day extension to negotiate a possible sale. "Lewis is unique in the fact that they are an experienced developer of retail and residential product," the staff report states. "Lewis is not a homebuilder but acts as the"master developer" for mixed-use projects. "Lewis develops and holds it retail and multi-family product, any residential lots entitled as part of Lewis' projects are sold to merchant builders."

[CA] Marin Voice: A vision of historic preservation and sustainability for Marin City (Marin Independent Journal, CA)
Marin Independent Journal
(7/14/2017 3:02 PM, Royce McLemore)
After reading the column by Dick Spotswood, it was clear that Golden Gate Village Resident Council needs to again share our plan to determine our destiny in Marin City, Marin County.

I could go into depth about how the wealthy receive more subsidies through mortgage tax deductions than any family living at Golden Gate Village receives as safety net subsidy. The reason for writing this now is not to focus on the disadvantaged, it is about the equalizing advantage in resourcing and adopting the Resident Plan for revitalization and inclusive growth. It is about bringing Golden Gate Village in line with Marin Civic Center.

While historic preservation protects Frank Lloyd Wright's architectural gift, our strategy for "Deep Green Renovation and Restoration" protects the gift in design of a unique low-income community, restoring legacy of a local economy supporting working families.

The end result is immediate path to living and middle-class wages for populations like Marin City that have been disproportionately impacted by shifts in the economy.

Relationships with local community colleges, foundations, community development institutions and socially responsible local businesses make this approach possible, feasible, and viable. Adopting strategy for evolution of employment and ownership via investment in innovative new manufacturing and place-based thinking, is the best method of moving Marin City legacy into a rich future for both people and place. The Resident Plan also uses national, regional and local precedents for evolution of homeownership.

The most recent example, a real story of effort by community, Townhomes on Capitol Hill in Washington, D.C., a unique development because its setup as a limited-equity cooperative. Each resident's initial payment to buy-in to the cooperative as well as their carrying charge is based on their yearly income. Equity and shared ownership brings property to life for residents, resulting in financial self-sufficiency that does not require ongoing funding or subsidies from HUD to operate. A version of this concept currently in Marin City is the Ponderosa Estates.

Californian Online - Salinas
(7/16/2017 12:54 PM, Amy Wu)
The center's main space will be available for use after HVAC and lighting upgrades are complete.

The 13,150 square feet center could include a climbing wall, pool tables, basketball court, a homework center and provide WiFi for visitors.

The three-phase project, estimated at $1.8 million, is being funded in large part by Community Development Block Grant money from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and a $100,000 injection from Measure G, the sales tax where revenue is designated to be spent on public safety.

More parks, recreation centers, and green space remain on the top of the wish lists of many city residents. That's primarily because the average age of the city's population is 28 and 50% of the population is under 18. Salinas – with a population of 161,000 - currently has a total of 42 parks, seven recreation centers, and an aquatics center.

Landlord alert: New index aims to take the risk out of rental investing (CNBC)
CNBC
(7/14/2017 11:27 AM, Diana Olick)
VIDEO. Demand for single-family rental homes has never been stronger and, consequently, more investors are hoping to get in on the game.

From large institutions buying thousands of homes to individual investors hoping to see strong returns on just a few properties, the competition is high. And so is the risk, especially for novices.

New companies hoping to help investors in every phase of the process — and cash in on their growing demand — have ranked large local markets for potential returns. Now, one claims it can gauge right down to the neighborhood level.

Roofstock, an online single-family rental marketplace, is launching a "neighborhood rating algorithm," analyzing more than 72,000 separate Census tracks and ranking their risk. It goes beyond home values and average rent to include dozens of factors, such as income levels, employment rates, education levels, percentage of owner-occupied homes and school district ratings. It then ranks each neighborhood on a scale from 1 to 5, 1 being the most risky.

Majority of Americans oppose Trump tax plan (Politico)
Politico
(7/14/2017 12:12 PM, Brian Faler)
Most Americans — including more than one-third of Republicans — oppose President Trump's tax plans, a new survey finds.

In an ominous sign for lawmakers working to reach a consensus with the administration, 62 percent of poll respondents said they don't support Trump's proposal; 24 percent said they back it.

Republicans are evenly split, with 41 percent opposed and a nearly identical 40 percent in favor, according to the POLITICO-Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health survey. Democrats are overwhelmingly against the plan, with 85 percent opposed, along with 60 percent of independents.

Most respondents said they don't believe the proposal would improve the economy, and three-quarters said it would either hurt them personally or make no difference in their lives.

Citi mortgage originations slashed in half in second quarter (HousingWire)

Continues to exit mortgage servicing

To no surprise, Citigroup continued to pull away from mortgages, with mortgage originations falling by more than half, as shown in its latest second quarter earnings release.

Citigroup reported in its earnings released early Friday morning that net income for the second quarter 2017 reached $3.9 billion, or $1.28 per diluted share, on revenues of $17.9 billion. This compared to net income of $4 billion, or $1.24 per diluted share, on revenues of $17.5 billion for the second quarter 2016.

The bank's EPS of $1.28 beat by $0.07, and its revenue of $17.9 billion beat by $530 million.

Mortgage originations, however, did not perform as well. The bank's supplemental release revealed that originations of residential first mortgages fell to $3.1 billion in the second quarter, falling 52% from $6.4 billion in the second quarter of last year.

This is also down 18% from $3.8 billion in the first quarter of this year.

Credit availability hits highest level since 2016 (HousingWire)
HousingWire
(7/14/2017 12:50 PM, Kelsey Ramirez)
Credit availability remained historically tight in the first quarter of 2017, but increased slightly from the previous quarter to the highest level since 2016.

The credit availability index from Housing Finance Policy Center shows mortgage credit availability increased to 5.4 in the first quarter. This is up from 5.2 in the fourth quarter.

However, the chart below which uses data from eMBS, CoreLogic, HMDA, IMF and the Urban Institute, shows this is still extremely tight compared to historical standards.

The HCAI measures the percentage of home purchase loans that are likely to default, go unpaid for more than 90 days past their due date. A lower HCAI indicates that lenders are unwilling to tolerate defaults and are imposing tighter lending standards, making it harder to get a loan. A higher HCAI indicates that lenders are willing to tolerate defaults and are taking more risks, making it easier to get a loan.

On the side of consumers (Eugene Register-Guard, OR) Eugene Register-Guard
(7/17/2017 5:00 AM, Editorial)
The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau is in the crosshairs of the Republican-controlled Congress and the Trump administration — both of which would dearly love to make it go away.

But if the bureau — whose sole job is protect consumers in the financial marketplace — goes down, it's going to go down fighting.

Last week it issued a rule telling some banks, credit-card companies and other financial firms that they can no longer block consumers from joining class-action lawsuits if they feel they have been ripped off.

This is important for several reasons. In disputes with financial services companies, few consumers opt to go through a lengthy mandatory arbitration process, which often has the only option some companies allowed. Also, class action lawsuits tend to end abuses. If a company loses, it not only often has to pay a significant amount of money, the settlement usually requires it to quit doing whatever landed it in court.

Rep. Jeb Hensarling, R-Texas, chairman of the House Financial Services Committee, threatened Richard Cordray, head of the consumer agency, with contempt if he went through with the new regulation. Cordray did so anyway.

Wells Fargo mortgage banking income plummets 19% (HousingWire)
HousingWire
(7/14/2017 10:22 AM, Kelsey Ramirez)

Net income edges up

Wells Fargo released its earnings statement early Friday morning for the second quarter 2017 which showed mortgage banking income partially offset other gains in earnings.

Mortgage banking income dropped to $1.15 billion in the second quarter, down 19% from last year's $1.41 billion. Last quarter, mortgage banking income decreased to $1.23 billion.

But this comes as no surprise to the market, which expected a drop in mortgage originations. The Mortgage Bankers Association even updated its forecast for the year to represent the dip.

Net income, however, decreased in spite of this drop to $5.81 billion. This is up 5% from the second quarter last year's $5.56 billion, and represents a diluted earnings per share increase of 6% to $1.07, up from $1 last year.

Wells Fargo, Citi, Chase results show 2017 will be a down year for big bank mortgages (HousingWire)
HousingWire

A deep dive into the mortgage business at the big banks

Market observers were already predicting that 2017 would be a rough year for mortgages, at least compared to 2016.

So it shouldn't have come as a surprise that when Wells Fargo, Citigroup, and JPMorgan Chase reported their financial results for the first half of the year mortgages were not a significant driver of revenue.

But a deeper dive into the big banks' results shows that while mortgages are still ingrained into the futures of Wells Fargo and Chase, Citi continues to move further and further way from mortgages.

Friday's results also provide added confirmation that 2017 will not be kind to mortgages, for the big banks at least.

CFPB proposes HMDA changes for community banks and credit unions (HousingWire)
HousingWire

Seeks comments on the 100-loan threshold

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau released a proposed rule on Friday to reassess a section included in the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act (HMDA) that pertains to community banks and credit unions. As it stands, the rule is set to take effect in January 2018.

The CFPB stated that it's looking into the reporting requirements for banks and credit unions that issue home-equity lines of credit.

Under the rule, financial institutions are generally required to report home-equity lines of credit if they made 100 such loans in each of the last two years.

But this could change depending on the feedback the bureau gets from the proposed rule.

The new proposal would increase that threshold to 500 loans through calendar years 2018 and 2019 so that the CFPB can consider whether to make a permanent adjustment.

America's largest cities are so expensive that some millennials are crowdfunding their homes (seattlepi.com, WA)
seattlepi.com
(7/16/2017 2:38 PM, Leanna Garfield, Business Insider)
For many American millennials, buying a new home in a city like Los Angeles or Washington DC can seem like a pipe dream.

According to a recent survey by Apartment List, 80% of millennials — defined as those born between 1980 and 1995 — say they want to buy a home, but most have less than $1,000 saved a for a down payment.

Meanwhile, buying a house in America's largest cities is more expensive now than ever. A severe housing shortage in LA, for example, has led over 400,000 households to spend more than half their income on housing.

Fundrise, a housing management company based in DC, has developed a new investment platform, called the eFund, that aims to alleviate housing costs for young people.

It's sort of like crowdfunding for homes: Prospective homebuyers purchase shares (a minimum investment is 100 shares, currently $10 each), the sum of which funds housing renovations and new developments in their city. These investors then get notified through the "eFund Pool" about finished homes, which are offered at up to a 10% lower price than it would be if they were going through a broker.

Legal Aid says it's considering asking judge to 'weigh in on their conduct'

The residents of the New York School of Urban Ministry building in Astoria aren't strangers to alleged harassment by their landlord – but the tactics, they say, are becoming more vicious.

"They'll approach you as you're sitting at your computer doing work and point-blank ask you 'So when are you leaving?'" said tenant Linda Smith. "Two weeks ago, they went on the men's floor … and told them 'Get out. You have to move. Get out.'"

"It's getting worse," Smith added.

In response to the new "harassment" tactics allegedly deployed by the landlord, area elected officials and the attorney for some of the residents issued a statement last Friday condemning NYSUM leadership for their actions.

[DC] In Southwest D.C., a Federal-style brick house is a rare slice of early Washington (Washington Post)
Washington Post
(7/14/2017 7:25 AM, Kathy Orton)
The Federal-style brick house in Southwest Washington is one of the few buildings still standing in the nation's capital built during the period of land speculation when the seat of government was being transferred from Philadelphia to Washington.

The Thomas Law House, also known as Honeymoon House, was erected between 1794 and 1796. Designed by William Lovering, the home was constructed by Morris, Nicholson and Greenleaf, a syndicate that built its share of brick houses in the city.

Law was a member of a wealthy English family who came to America with his three sons after making his fortune in India. He was frequently described as one of Washington's wealthiest citizens. After marrying Martha Washington's granddaughter, Elizabeth Parke Custis, a woman 20 years younger than him, Law moved into the home in Southwest Washington. The Laws lived there during their honeymoon while awaiting completion of their home on New Jersey Avenue.

Their marriage lasted only eight years and produced one child, a daughter, Eliza, born in 1797. After separating in 1804, the couple divorced in 1811. Law was granted custody of their daughter and agreed to pay Elizabeth $1,500 per year.

While backing plans to build condos in their wards, two aldermen representing Logan Square, Humboldt Park, Wicker Park and other booming neighborhoods got loans from a bank headed by the lawyer for the developers, a Chicago Sun-Times investigation has found.

Ald. Roberto Maldonado (26th) and Ald. Proco Joe Moreno (1st) each has gotten mortgages from Belmont Bank & Trust, according to a Sun-Times' review of the more than 1,200 mortgages that the small, Northwest Side bank has made since it opened 11 years ago.

Maldonado's loans totaled nearly $1 million, Moreno's $825,000, according to records and interviews.

The chairman of the bank? James Banks, who's also one of the city's busiest zoning and development lawyers. He is the largest shareholder in Belmont Bank, according to records it filed with the Federal Reserve Bank.

[IL] Austin population drops to No. 2 in city for 1st time in 45 years (Chicago Tribune, IL)
Chicago Tribune
(7/14/2017 6:53 AM, Marwa Eltagouri)
VIDEO. In a neighborhood as large as Austin, each block can be its own world.

The tree-lined ones, with restored Victorian homes or brick two-flats and kids playing in polished gardens, are what residents call good blocks. They're free of the shootings and drug deals that plague others. But those other blocks, dotted with boarded-up houses and vacant lots with overgrown weeds, are often down the street or around the corner.

Austin is the city's largest neighborhood geographically, and was the most populated for 45 years. But as the West Side neighborhood's gun violence has increased, so too has families' realization that at any moment the shootings can creep into their blocks — even the good blocks. Austin's residents are leaving, with some saying goodbye to the place they've called home their entire lives.

"They're scared because even though it's not right here, on their block, the whole thing is still surrounding (them)," said Tiffany Smith, a 35-year-old Austin resident who brought her young daughter to visit her grandmother's house near South Laramie Avenue on a recent June afternoon. They sat on the porch together, kneading play dough, just a block from where five people were shot the night before.

WGH Heritage reported a more than $2 million deficit in its latest tax filing. It also posted multi-million-dollar deficits in 2014 and 2013.

Five years ago, the company defaulted on its loans and restructured $20 million in debt backed by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

WGH Heritage agreed in 2015 to pay $30,000 in civil penalties to the Texas attorney general's office to settle a lawsuit stemming from complaints that the assisted-living facility did not have a working sprinkler system for eight months in 2012, Tarrant County district clerk records show.

The Texas Department of Aging and Disability Services investigated dozens of complaints in 2012. Now, under the words "Wall of Excellence," Sweeney proudly displays state complaint forms. Many of the forms show that the complaints of license violations were unsubstantiated. Forms with bright yellow stickers indicate where regulators did find violations, and say that additional records can be found at the front desk.

Texas regulators last investigated a complaint about the facility in March, concluding it had "failed to follow its internal policies regarding the prevention, detection, and reporting of abuse, neglect, or exploitation," records show.

[CA] Venice Beach Is a Hot Place to Live, So Why Is Its Housing Supply Shrinking? (Wall Street Journal)
Wall Street Journal
(7/17/2017 5:20 AM, Laura Kusisto)

Venice Beach is the toughest neighborhood to build new housing in U.S., followed by Prospect-Lefferts Gardens in Brooklyn and Philadelphia's Fishtown

Venice, Calif., is one of the nation's hottest neighborhoods, brimming with affluent young residents and technology startups like Snap chat parent Snap Inc. But in one respect, it bears little resemblance to a boomtown: It hasn't gained a single housing unit in 15 years.

The ZIP Code encompassing this vibrant Los Angeles precinct is the toughest place in America to build housing, according to an analysis of housing data conducted for The Wall Street Journal by Issi Romem, chief economist at BuildZoom, a website for contractors.

In all, the area, which encompasses Venice Beach, had about 700 fewer housing units in 2015 than in 2000, as apartment development stalled and wealthy homeowners gobbled up adjacent properties and leveled them. Home prices in the ZIP Code have more than tripled in those 15 years, rising 246% compared with the national average of 52% in the period, according to Mr. Romem's analysis.

Venice Beach is an extreme example of what has been happening in wealthy urban enclaves across the U.S. that have been resisting new housing development in recent years.

DRA's, by now the VTC staff in your regions have let you know that we will be holding a DRA, VTC meeting in lieu of the quarterly DRA face to face here in the DC headquarters. My apologies that you heard it from them first. Below is the agenda. We have compressed the meeting to 6 hours to fit in all the topics we usually discuss and to accommodate our west coast family. Pam, myself, Darlene and Paul will have our staff on hand for portions of our respective sessions to facilitate an effective discussion. We have included an optional block for those that want to stay on and explore these or other issues with the HQs team in more depth.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT
WASHINGTON, DC 20410-3000

OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATION

MAY 1 4 2018

Mr. Austin R. Evers
Executive Director
American Oversight
1030 15th Street NW
Suite B255
Washington, DC 20005

FOIA Control No.: 17-FI-HQ-01560

Dear Mr. Evers:

This letter is the third interim response to your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request dated and received on July 14, 2017. You asked for Department of Housing and Urban Development records related the FOIA since March 2, 2017, to include:

1. All emails sent or received by any political appointee or Senior Executive Service (SES) staff in the Office of the Secretary, the Office of the Deputy Secretary, the Office of Public Affairs, the Office of Congressional and Intergovernmental Relations, or the Office of Field Policy and Management including the phrase "Freedom of Information Act" or the word "FOIA;" and

2. All other communications involving any political appointee or SES staff in the Office of the Secretary, the Office of the Deputy Secretary, the Office of Public Affairs, the Office of Congressional and Intergovernmental Relations, the Office of the General Counsel, or the Office of Field Policy and Management regarding HUD's policies or practices for processing FOIA requests or producing documents in response to FOIA requests. This includes communications regarding review of existing policies or practices as well as communications regarding adoption of new policies or practices or of changes to existing policies or practices affecting HUD's response to FOIA requests.

Your request is granted in part. Enclosed are records, responsive to item 1 of your request, of Region 3 Administrator Joseph J. DeFelice.

I am withholding proprietary financial information under Exemption 4 of the FOIA. Exemption 4 protects commercial or financial information obtained from a person that is privileged or confidential, the release of which would cause substantial competitive harm to that person. I am withholding reports—prepared by consultants procured by the Department for the purpose of advising the Department on the financial health of Federal Housing Administration programs—under Exemption 5 of the FOIA as privileged deliberative records. Exemption 5 protects documents that are inter-agency or intra-agency, which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with HUD. The release of this internal information would reflect HUD's predecisional, deliberative process, and would discourage open and candid advice, recommendations, and exchanges of views within the Department, which could bring about public scrutiny of the individuals and the need to justify in public their tentative opinions. I am also withholding personal cell phone numbers, home telephone numbers, personal email addresses, home addresses, dates of birth, unit numbers, conference call passcodes, and private citizens' names under Exemption 6 of the FOIA, because release of such information would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. The interest of the general public in reviewing these portions of government documents does not outweigh the individuals' right to privacy.

Please be advised that the review of records responsive to item 1 of your request is ongoing. Further interim responses may be provided to you as this process continues. At the completion of this review, a final response letter will be provided. The final response letter will detail all applicable appeal rights.

For your information, your FOIA request, including your identity and any information made available, is releasable to the public under subsequent FOIA requests. In responding to these requests, the Department does not release personal information, such as home address, telephone number, or Social Security number, all of which are protected from disclosure under FOIA Exemption 6. Please also be advised that all appeal rights related to your request will be provided to you in a final response letter.

If you have questions regarding your request, please contact Mr. Ethan Bodell at (202) 402-3450. Thank you for your interest in the Department's programs and policies.

Sincerely,

Deborah R. Snowden

Essex Village, Henrico County, Va.
Briefing Report Update, 05.22.17

On March 30, Director Carrie Schmidt and members of the multifamily team met with Henrico County officials to discuss concerns about the HUD-assisted property, Essex Village at the Richmond Field Office. In preparation for the meeting on March 29, Brenda Brown, Director Baltimore MF Satellite Office, Lisa Ellis, Branch Chief, and Carolyn Anastasi, Resolution Specialist, met with PK Management Official Jenne McClain-Blankhead and others to tour the site. There were many obvious physical maintenance needs. HUD officials spoke to many residents and were invited into a few units. There is an obvious difference between the condition of elderly units and the condition of those mainly for families. The development is considered a troubled property with a final REAC inspection score, after appeal, of 51. PK Management is working on the Compliance, Disposition, and Enforcement (CDE) plan, due May 25, 2017 as a follow-up to the failing REAC score. Management will be submitting monthly accounting reports and physical property updates.

On March 30, HUD staff met with Colonel Doug Middleton, Deputy County Manager of Public Safety, and 10 other County Officials at the Richmond Field Office. The Colonel voiced complaints concerning exterior physical violation notices previously given to property as well as sewer issues (privately-owned). Brenda Brown discussed prior day property visit and planned physical repairs including a possible $19 million in rehab. Following the meeting, Brenda Brown spoke with owner, Gregory Perlman, to facilitate a meeting with the Colonel to open the lines of communication. A meeting via conference call will be scheduled monthly for property updates.

To date, the following is in process or has occurred.

- The Performance Based Contract Administrator (PBCA), Navigate Affordable Housing, conducted a Management Occupancy Review (MOR) on April 18. The final report was sent to the owner on April 28.
- PBCA Navigate Management Review included maintenance reports for over 3,000 requests for service in last year, averaging 261/month. All REAC exigent, health and safety deficiencies have been corrected.
- An April 3 fire damaged eight units. No injuries occurred and all residents are back in their units. Restoration work has been completed except the unit in which the fire started; repairs are still underway and the resident was housed in an available apartment on site.
- PK Management is submitting bi-weekly property updates concerning sewer/maintenance issues and proposed project transformation through sale/merger with a nonprofit.

Subject: HUD FOLLOW-UP on Essex Village REAC Inspection

Good afternoon Elton and Sylvia -- I am the Mid-Atlantic Regional Public Affairs Officer that handles media inquiries for the Commonwealth of Virginia. I also support the work of the Richmond Field Office in the various program areas to benefit those we serve. Like Tracey, I was on yesterday's call regarding the work that is underway to resolve the issues at Essex Village. To clarify some of the points we discussed, I thought it might be helpful to provide some information to you about the REAC Inspection process, Essex Village's most recent inspection and the Notice outlining the agency's process when a property receives a failing score.

PART 1: INSPECTION PROCESS
As part of our oversight of both public housing (owned/managed by public housing authorities) and multifamily housing (privately-owned w/HUD oversight), we have a number of inspections and reviews. Here's some information about REAC—Real Estate Assessment Center. You'll see on the "About REAC" page, there are number of types of inspections. In this case we are talking about the physical inspection of a property.

Real Estate Assessment Center (REAC)
Nearly 4 million American families live in rental housing that is owned, insured or subsidized by HUD. To ensure that these families have housing that is decent, safe and sanitary and in good repair, REAC conducts approximately 20,000 physical inspections on properties each year.

Scoring notice
http://portal.hud.gov/hudportal/documents/huddoc?id=pass4.0scoringnoticefr.PDF

Here's the reference to the letters after the scores in the Description:
Examples of overall scores are: 95c; 67b*; 84a*; 100b; 78a; and 43c*. The asterisk indicates that Health and Safety (H&S) deficiencies were found with respect to smoke detectors. The lower-case letter indicates whether or not other kinds of H&S deficiencies were observed, as follows:
- The letter "a" is given if no health and safety deficiencies were observed.
- The lower-case letter "b" is given if one or more non-life threatening H&S deficiencies, but no exigent/fire safety H&S deficiencies were observed.
- The lower-case letter "c" is given if one or more exigent/fire safety (calling for immediate attention or remedy) H&S deficiencies were observed.
* Indicates that Health and Safety (H&S) deficiencies were found with respect to malfunctioning smoke detectors.

Ratings determine the frequency of inspections:
- Standard 1 Performing Property: score of 90 or more, inspection is every three years
- Standard 2 Performing Property: score of 80 – 89, inspection is every two years
- Standard 3 Performing Property: score of less than 80, inspection is every year

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Please keep in mind that the goal of our REAC inspection process is to review how the property is being maintained—to ensure that all HUD assisted properties provide decent safe and sanitary housing for tenants.

PART 2: ESSEX VILLAGE APARTMENTS INSPECTION

ESSEX VILLAGE 800021812 46c* 1/19/2017 after appeal, raised to a 51c*. Past two inspections: 75b 12/3/2015 72c* 12/1/2014
https://portal.hud.gov/hudportal/documents/huddoc?id=virginia.pdf

The most recent inspection was completed on January 11, 2017 and the report was given to Essex Village and HUD on January 19. REAC reports are not releasable until 120 days to allow time for appeals. The final REAC report will be available beginning May 19, and subject to any FOIA exemptions. Please note the most recent inspection is the first time Essex Village has received a failing score. The lower-case letter "c" is given if one or more exigent/fire safety (calling for immediate attention or remedy) Health and Safety deficiencies were observed. The asterisk indicates that Health and Safety deficiencies were found with respect to smoke detectors.

PART 3: NOTICE FOR FAILING SCORE

The following Notice defines what occurs when a property receives a failing score—which is 59: https://portal.hud.gov/hudportal/documents/huddoc?id=15-02hsgn.pdf

This Notice may be of interest to the Congressman; it outlines our process and the owner's responsibilities when a property receives a failing score. Please let me know if you have any questions. Thanks!

Subject: NOTES from May 23 Essex Village Call/Updated Briefing Report

Hi everyone – Just an FYI, here are the notes from the May 23 call as well as the updated briefing report that was originally submitted to the Congressman per his request before his visit to Essex Village. There have been quite a few updates since then, which will be discussed during this morning's call. Please let me know if there is anything else you need from me before we get together in 26 minutes. Thanks for your continuing help and support…
Lisa

Notes from today's call/from County—Colonel Doug Middleton reporting:

- Pest control, appliances, paint, sewage overflows, substantial deployment of resources to evaluate.
- November 29 Henrico County officials walked the property. 51 additional complaints on that day; life/safety issues.
- Working with owners and management to correct problems. Making progress.
- HUD meeting – also had concerns. 100 percent inspection; request for rent increase put on hold, not granted pending outcome of work.
- Spoke with HUD about creating a partnership.
- County manager and Doug met with owner, Greg Perlman, owns both complex and management company. Acknowledged they had not maintained the facility per County ordinances and HUD guidelines.
- Meeting was about accountability, not tax credits. County threatened taking court action if property was not in code compliance.
- Looking for local buyer, but complex must meet county code and HUD requirements.
- Henrico had inspectors on the ground daily; meeting with Perlman in early August. Concerns that the reconstruction will not be done properly.
- Update meeting w/Carrie and HUD team happening today.
- Open items include (John Butler, building supervisor), status of complaints: over 100 outstanding violations to only a handful. Failing staircases, sewage overflows—broken window theory applicable—overflowing dumpsters, broken window, gutter issues. Insect and rodent problem also being corrected.
- Henry Rosenbaum – Fire Marshall for county – status of smoke alarms #1 concern. Yearly testing of smoke alarms—said they do them annually w/filter changes. Some were in there a long time ago. Some occupants said their alarms had never been tested; no documentation. Fire department/building inspections concurrent.
- January full apartment inspection—wasn't until May 15 until they could produce document for 100% inspection/testing. Maintenance person signed and dated; had occupant also sign and date. Taken over 6 months to get to that point. Hoping this will become an annual inspection. Fire code issues—dryer vents; stairs/egress corrected and/or mended.
- Clarified process, the inspections were not being done as reported. Onsite manager said there were records of inspections, but could not be produced.
- Hope Village inspections/corrections are also not up-to-date. Systemic problems within PK Management.
- Interaction w/community at Essex Village. Residents started a petition; many signed, started sometime in November. Petition was delivered a month ago. Demand was to be provided vouchers to leave the complex.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- Only other issue—sewer lines—management said they had dome a camera inspection; that inspection did not happen. Perlman/PK Management never been made aware of the conversations county had w/management. Assured County they are now aware and things will be addressed.

Brenda Brown:

- Owner and agent are making efforts to improve the property; trash/extermination have been expanded.
- All of the county violations have been addressed with the exception of a few small items.
- Siding has been repaired and power-washed. Siding replacement will begin 30 to 45 days.
- Sidewalks/landscaping work underway.
- Navigate MOR completed; satisfactory rating. Several issues to be responded to by May 28. Qualitative component – range of scoring for each. Entire MOR is 100 percent. Satisfactory 75 to 80.
- Congressman asked about building failing score—physical inspection 2015 received 70 passing score. Hope Village—same manager/same owner. 500 families.
- Process that must be followed to update the HAP – Housing Assistance Provider contract. Residents may apply for vouchers at the housing authority. To withdraw the subsidy, there is a process. Families can always go apply for vouchers.
- Once the property gets a passing grade—Congressman is talking about high rates—rents are acceptable. Brenda is explaining the use of vouchers.
- From Doug Middleton -- County is assuring the Congressman that all the families may be placed—that there are available apartments.
- Will follow-up with Congressman's office. Staff does not understand REAC inspection process; what happens when a property receives a failing score.
- Last sewage issue was in February—State EPA must be notified by property owner—we learned PK Management had not been making those notifications. The County is working as a back-up.
- County/HUD will follow-up with PK Management. Owner pledged to hire a company to scope the lines. Open item—red flag to come down on the owner. Sylvia said that is an issue for the Congressman as well. HUD had been led to believe that issue had been addressed.
- Carol – two bids, awaiting third bid for sewage contractor will be in next week. Elton, from Congressman's office, asking for the bids/follow-ups in writing. Wanted it in writing that the bids are in progress. The company has two bids and awaiting a third bid. Sylvia Murphy.
- Colonel – REAC Inspection w/in a year or w/in the next 12 months. Brenda will ask for a REAC Inspection by the end of the calendar year. HUD will make every effort to have that inspection before the end of the year. We will be "aggressive" with our follow-up on this property.
- One of the things at HUD meeting, was the possibility of the County accompanying the REAC inspector. Colonel is still making that offer. REAC policy to not have others accompany them. Even though they are walking/doing an inspection; do not want others to walk with them. Brenda offered to check with REAC about possibility of having a County official accompany an inspector.
- Is REAC a private company? The QA team is a HUD quality team; other inspectors are third-party contractors. Brenda will follow-up with the REAC Director to see if they will make an exception. County believes they would do a better long-term job if we could do it together.

Review/wrap-up by the Colonel:

- Planning another County inspection; checking on code violations—the County's limit.
- When County met with Perlman/PK Management—they offered to meet with them again; County offered to integrate their sewer system once the complex brings it up to county code. Asbestos in the pipes may be an issue.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- Sewage system may continue to have problems; if we have overflows, will continue to follow-up.
- The Congressman has continued to advocate on behalf of the citizens.
- Will continue to work with all interested parties; administrative actions that may involve abating the HAP contract.
- Appreciate the County's involvement. Mr. Burton's request from Congressman's office to follow.

Hi everyone – As promised, here's last week's Congressional request to use as a basis for updates during tomorrow's call. Please let me know if you have any questions, or would like to add any updates. Thanks!

Essex Village, Henrico County, Va.
Briefing Report Update, 05.22.17

On March 30, Director Carrie Schmidt and members of the multifamily team met with Henrico County officials to discuss concerns about the HUD-assisted property, Essex Village at the Richmond Field Office. In preparation for the meeting on March 29, Brenda Brown, Director Baltimore MF Satellite Office, Lisa Ellis, Branch Chief, and Carolyn Anastasi, Resolution Specialist, met with PK Management Official Jenne McClain-Blankhead and others to tour the site. There were many obvious physical maintenance needs. HUD officials spoke to many residents and were invited into a few units. There is an obvious difference between the condition of elderly units and the condition of those mainly for families. The development is considered a troubled property with a final REAC inspection score, after appeal, of 51. PK Management is working on the Compliance, Disposition, and Enforcement (CDE) plan, due May 25, 2017 as a follow-up to the failing REAC score. Management will be submitting monthly accounting reports and physical property updates.

On March 30, HUD staff met with Colonel Doug Middleton, Deputy County Manager of Public Safety, and 10 other County Officials at the Richmond Field Office. The Colonel voiced complaints concerning exterior physical violation notices previously given to property as well as sewer issues (privately-owned). Brenda Brown discussed prior day property visit and planned physical repairs including a possible $19 million in rehab. Following the meeting, Brenda Brown spoke with owner, Gregory Perlman, to facilitate a meeting with the Colonel to open the lines of communication. A meeting via conference call will be scheduled monthly for property updates.

To date, the following is in process or has occurred.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- The Performance Based Contract Administrator (PBCA), Navigate Affordable Housing, conducted a Management Occupancy Review (MOR) on April 18. The final report was sent to the owner on April 28.
- PBCA Navigate Management Review included maintenance reports for over 3,000 requests for service in last year, averaging 261/month. All REAC exigent, health and safety deficiencies have been corrected.
- An April 3 fire damaged eight units. No injuries occurred and all residents are back in their units. Restoration work has been completed except the unit in which the fire started; repairs are still underway and the resident was housed in an available apartment on site.
- PK Management is submitting bi-weekly property updates concerning sewer/maintenance issues and proposed project transformation through sale/merger with a nonprofit.
- PK Management responded to Notice of Violation (NOV) requiring a 100%-unit inspection. Confirmed that 100 percent of units have been inspected, work orders generated and work is just about complete.
- PK Management Official Jenne McClain-Blankhead confirmed that a meeting took place between Essex Village owner Gregory Perlman and Henrico County's Deputy County Manager of Public Safety Colonel Doug Middleton on May 8. Security, exterior site work and upgrades, sewer issues and completed work orders were discussed. County officials and PK Management agreed to meet again in 90 days.
- HUD Multifamily and Richmond Field Office leaders will meet with Henrico County Officials on May 23.
- There has been continued media interest in Essex Village, including a FOIA request for the most recent REAC Inspection report. As of May 19, the report may be released after redaction.
- Additional media interest in two other PK Management properties in Henrico County. A CBS6 FOIA from Melissa Hipolit for Woodland Crossing Apartments included a REAC Inspection Report (66b) and subsidy amount. The reporter also contacted us about a child with an elevated lead blood level in Hope Village. In addition, the reporter inquired about who performs HUD's REAC inspections. Currently working on the responses and outstanding FOIA requests.
- On Friday, May 19, Jenne McClain-Blankhead was interviewed by CBS6 Reporter Melissa Hipolit about Woodland Crossing. Jenne will submit a summary to multifamily by COB on Monday, May 22.

Lisa, we are going to have a bad nursing home story. A Philadelphia nursing home that scored a 2 will be a prominent part of the story.

Jerry,
I have a few general questions on the inspection reports:
Is it correct that HUD inspectors use these similar standards to assess the physical condition of public housing units and privately owned rental units that are insured or assisted by various programs under HUD, such as rental units that accept Section 8 vouchers. Is this type of inspection just done on all HUD-financed housing?
How many similar reports are done each year? Can you tell me how many similar inspections of just nursing homes each year?
Does the 1-100 ranking system cover all types of property inspections?

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The scores on the Philadelphia nursing homes inspections that I received range from the 70s down to the score of 2 for Bala nursing home?
Have there been Section 8 rentals of other HUD properties that have received scores as low as 2?
HUD letters to low scoring nursing homes say non-compliance may adversely affect the homes' ability to participate in HUD programs: Can it affect participation in all government programs? Could owners who don't comply have all of their properties affected because of one non-compliance finding?
Can you recommend any reading that I should do to get background on the inspections?

This story will run as soon as the Inquirer receives our response. Evidently there is a major lawsuit against the nursing home. A patient recently fell out of the bed and died as a result of the fall.

& FO are working through 2 Important Hot Issues

- Re-compete of CPD IT Services Contract – as of 4/21/17
  - With delays in the acquisition, HUD secured a 5-month extension of the current contract:
    - Contract Extension Period: 5/26/17 to 10/25/17 (builds in 1-month transition, if needed)
    - New Contract Base Year Period: 10/26/17 to 5/25/18 (Options Years start on 5/26/##)
    - RCS-Q-2017-00110 (extension funding): GSA requested a few revisions; HUD is completing these updates and will return to GSA as soon as possible

- IDIS FIFO Project Delays – as of 4/21/17
  - Delays primarily due to complexity of the Home Commitment Deadline work
  - CPD has effectively managed the delays and re-planned the project
    - Release 11.13 was deployed March 27, approximately two months late
    - Release 11.14 will be deployed in mid-June, but with reduced scope
    - HUD will add one release (IDIS 11.15) in September to finalize all required work. CPD has requested additional IT budget for this added release. If not funded, the Corrective Maintenance "break-fix" budget for IDIS will be reduced during the November 2017 - May 2018 time period.

Jerry,
I have a few general questions on the inspection reports:
Is it correct that HUD inspectors use these similar standards to assess the physical condition of public housing units and privately owned rental units that are insured or assisted by various programs under HUD, such as rental units that accept Section 8 vouchers. Is this type of inspection just done on all HUD-financed housing?

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

How many similar reports are done each year? Can you tell me how many similar inspections of just nursing homes each year?
Does the 1-100 ranking system cover all types of property inspections?
The scores on the Philadelphia nursing homes inspections that I received range from the 70s down to the score of 2 for Bala nursing home?
Have there been Section 8 rentals of other HUD properties that have received scores as low as 2?
HUD letters to low scoring nursing homes say non-compliance may adversely affect the homes' ability to participate in HUD programs: Can it affect participation in all government programs? Could owners who don't comply have all of their properties affected because of one non-compliance finding?
Can you recommend any reading that I should do to get background on the inspections?

Subject:	Calimer Drive Sewer, Washington Township (CDBG) & Privacy Form
Attachments:	3823_001.pdf

Good Morning Nancy:

In 2010, Franklin County Planning Department submitted our annual entitlement CDBG application to the State of Pennsylvania (specifically the Department of Economic and Community Development) for their review and approval. Within this application was the Calimer Drive Sewer Project. The county described to DCED the project. It was described as a typical sewer system extension, which includes everything involved in the sewer extension. It was also described as a multi-year project and requiring multiple CDBG funding allocations. In 2014, after the county applied to the state for a reimbursement of funds for the Calimer Drive Sewer Project, we discovered, after receiving a denial from the state, that our contract was conditioned by the state and they would not allow us to withdraw any CDBG funds.

We contacted our grant manager at the state of Pennsylvania and the manager noted that the contract is conditioned because of the project was paying tap fees and we needed to submit more information and forms. We reached out to the state to come to an understanding of their issues and discovered that there is only one way to allow CDBG funding to pay for tap fees. It was to ensure that the Wastewater-treatment plant in Washington Township was built to the requirements of the federal code at the time of it's construction. We, including Washington Township, pulled documents from the 1970s showing that the project was funded by EPA money and abide by federal code at that time.

After a several weeks, the state of Pennsylvania alerted our office that they are pushing this issue to US HUD. (Side note- We wish the state informed the county of the possibility of pushing the issue to US HUD.) A couple weeks ago (first quarter 2017), our office received correspondence from the state saying that US HUD officials pushed the issue to US HUD's Counsel. We are not sure if DCED forwarded this to US HUD in Washington, DC or their regional offices (Philadelphia or Pittsburgh).

Currently, our questions for you to find out on our behalf are the following:

1. What is the status of the review?

2. When will we hear the results?

Thanks,

PROCESSING AND UNDERWRITING DIVISION

Andrew Cianci is the Director of the Processing and Underwriting Division (PUD) with four Underwriting/Insurance Branches and two Technical Support Branches.

- There are a total of 69 employees. There are two contractor companies who work within the PUD at the Philadelphia HOC.

- From FY 2008 to FY 2013, FHA experienced increased volumes of insurance endorsement applications and refinances to FHA as a result of FHA initiatives throughout the sub-prime mortgage / National Housing crises. Starting in FY 2014, FHA reduced its footprint in the housing market. Program Updates and Legislation have further modernized and reformed FHA's programs. In January 2015, FHA announced a reduction in annual Mortgage Insurance Premium (MIP) rates for most Title II forward mortgages with amortization terms greater than 15 years. This initiative increased FHA endorsements again.

Management and Marketing Contracts

PROCESSING AND UNDERWRITING DIVISION

Andrew Cianci is the Director of the Processing and Underwriting Division (PUD) with four Underwriting/Insurance Branches and two Technical Support Branches.

- There are a total of 67 employees. There are two contractor companies who work within the PUD at the Philadelphia HOC.

- From FY 2008 to FY 2013, FHA experienced increased volumes of insurance endorsement applications and refinances to FHA as a result of FHA initiatives throughout the sub-prime mortgage / National Housing crises. Starting in FY 2014, FHA reduced its footprint in the housing market. Program Updates and Legislation have further modernized and reformed FHA's programs. In January 2015, FHA announced a reduction in annual Mortgage Insurance Premium (MIP) rates for most Title II forward mortgages with amortization terms greater than 15 years. This initiative increased FHA endorsements again.

Reminder: Guidance for FHA-approved Mortgage Servicers regarding Presidentially-Declared Major Disaster Areas

Today, the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) is issuing this reminder of the recent Presidentially-Declared Major Disaster Areas (PDMDA) in the State of Louisiana due to damage caused by severe storms and flooding. As a reminder that mortgages secured by properties in a PDMDA are subject to a 90-Day moratorium on foreclosures following the disaster. HUD provides mortgagees an automatic 20-Day extension from the date of the moratorium expiration date to commence or recommence foreclosure action or evaluate the borrower under HUD's Loss Mitigation Program. See Presidentially-Declared Major Disaster Areas, Section II.A.2.c.(i) in the Single Family Housing Policy Handbook 4000.1 (SF Handbook)

Can a person have more than one FHA loan?

FHA will insure more than one Property as a Principal Residence for any Borrower, except as noted below. FHA will not insure a Mortgage if it is determined that the transaction was designed to use FHA mortgage insurance as an inducement for operating investment Properties, even if the Property to be insured will be the only one financed using FHA mortgage insurance.

Properties previously acquired as Investment Properties are not subject to these restrictions.

Listed below are the only circumstances in which a Borrower with an existing FHA-insured Mortgage for a Principal Residence may obtain an additional FHA-insured Mortgage on a new Principal Residence:

RELOCATION - A Borrower may be eligible to obtain another FHA-insured Mortgage without being required to sell an existing Property covered by an FHA-insured Mortgage if the Borrower is
- relocating or has relocated for an employment-related reason; and
- has established a new Principal Residence that is at least 100 miles from the Borrower's current Principal Residence.

If the Borrower moves back to the original area, the Borrower is not required to live in the original house and may obtain a new FHA-insured Mortgage on a new Principal Residence provided the relocation meets the above requirements.

INCREASE IN FAMILY SIZE - A Borrower may be eligible for another house with an FHA-insured Mortgage if the Borrower provides satisfactory evidence that:
- the Borrower has had an increase in legal dependents and the Property now fails to meet family needs; and
- the current value of the equity in the current Principal Residence is equal to or less than 75% of the total amount based on the outstanding Mortgage balance and a current residence appraisal.

RELOCATING A JOINTLY-OWNED PROPERTY - A Borrower may be eligible for another FHA-insured Mortgage if the Borrower is vacating with the intent to return the Principal Residence which will remain occupied by an existing co-Borrower.

NON-OCCUPYING CO-BORROWER - A non-occupying co-Borrower on an existing FHA-insured Mortgage may qualify for an FHA-insured Mortgage on a new Property to be their own Principal Residence.

Washington, DC 20410

Dear Dr. Golding:

IFE Group has completed and, along with this letter, is submitting the fiscal year 2016 Actuarial Review of the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund Home Equity Conversion Mortgages (the HECM Fund).

(b)(5) Deliberative Privilege

The financial estimates presented in this Review require projections of events as long as 74 years into the future. These projections are dependent upon the validity and robustness of the underlying model and assumptions about the future economic environment and loan characteristics. These assumptions include economic forecasted by Moody's Analytics and the assumptions concerning compositions of future endorsements projected by FHA. To the extent that actual events deviate from these or other assumptions, the actual results may differ, perhaps significantly, from our current projections. The models used for this Review are, by nature, large and complex. We applied an extensive validation process to assure that the results reported in this Review are accurate and reliable.

The full actuarial report explains these projections and the reasons for the changes since last year's actuarial review.

Very truly yours,

Tyler T. Yang, Ph.D.

Actuarial Review of the Federal Housing Administration
Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund
HECM Loans
for Fiscal Year 2016

I have reviewed the "Actuarial Review of the Federal Housing Administration Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund, HECM Loans, for Fiscal Year 2016". The purpose of my review was to determine the soundness of the methodology used, the appropriateness of the underlying assumptions applied, and the reasonableness of the resulting estimates derived in the Review.

The Review was based upon data and information prepared by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA). I have relied upon the FHA for the accuracy and completeness of this data. In addition, I also relied upon the reasonableness of the assumptions used in the economic projections prepared by Moody's Analytics, from which the base case used in the Review was derived.

It is my opinion that on an overall basis the methodology and underlying assumptions used in the Review are reasonable and appropriate in the circumstances. In my opinion the estimates in the Review lie within a reasonable range of probable values as of this time although the actual experience in the future will not unfold as projected.

Executive Summary

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), Federal Housing Administration (FHA), provides reverse mortgage insurance through the Home Equity Conversion Mortgage (HECM) program. HECMs enable senior homeowners to obtain additional income by accessing the equity in their homes. The program began as a pilot program in 1989 and became permanent in 1998. Between 2003 and 2008, the number of HECM endorsements grew because of increasingly widespread product awareness, lower interest rates, higher home values, and higher FHA loan limits. Prior to fiscal year (FY) 2009, the HECM program was part of the General Insurance (GI) Fund. The Federal Housing Administration Modernization Act within the Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008 (HERA)[1] moved all new HECM program endorsements into the Mutual Mortgage Insurance (MMI) Fund effective in FY 2009.

At the beginning of 2014, the HECM Standard and HECM Saver programs were replaced with HECMs that reduced the initial and total allowable drawdowns in order to strengthen the financial condition of the program.[2] Also in 2014, FHA allowed a Non-Borrowing Spouse to be younger than 62[3] years of age and implemented corresponding principal limit factors for those younger ages.[4] In 2015, FHA introduced the Life Expectancy Set-Aside (LESA) Growth Rate and related requirements to address tax and insurance defaults; additional guidance on HECM "Due and Payable" policies and timing requirements; and permissible loss mitigation options when property charges are not paid.

The National Housing Act requires an independent annual actuarial study of FHA's MMI Fund.[5] Accordingly, an actuarial review must be conducted on HECM loans within the MMI Fund. This document reports the estimated economic values of the FY 2016 through FY 2023 MMI HECM portfolios. A fiscal year's MMI HECM portfolio is defined as the loans that survive to the end of the fiscal year and were endorsed in FY 2009 or later. In addition to the initial capital resources, the economic value of the portfolio depends on the net present value of the future cash flows from the surviving portfolio of loans existing at the start of the valuation forecast (the end of the fiscal year under review).

IFE Group's projections indicate that, as of the end of FY 2016, the HECM portion of the MMI fund has an economic value of (b)(5) Deliberative Privilege

The Honorable Golding, Edward
Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary for Housing – Federal Housing Commissioner
U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development
451 Seventh Street, SW, Room 9100
Washington, DC 20410

Dear Dr. Golding:

IFE Group has completed and, along with this letter, is submitting the fiscal year 2016 Actuarial Review of the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund Forward Loans (the Fund).

We estimate that the Fund's economic value as of the end of fiscal year 2016 was (b)(5) Deliber

(b)(5) Deliberative Privilege

The financial estimates presented in this Review require projections of events more than 30 years into the future. These projections are dependent upon the validity and robustness of the underlying model and assumptions about the future economic environment and loan characteristics. These assumptions include economic forecasted by Moody's Analytics and the assumptions concerning compositions of future endorsement portfolios projected by FHA. To the extent that actual events deviate from these or other assumptions, the actual results may differ, perhaps significantly, from our current projections. The models used for this Review are, by nature, large and complex. We applied an extensive validation process to assure that the results reported in this Review are accurate and reliable.

The full actuarial report explains these projections and the sources for the changes since last year's actuarial review.

Very truly yours,

Tyler T. Yang, Ph.D.
Chairman and CEO

Actuarial Review of the Federal Housing Administration
Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund Forward Loans
for Fiscal Year 2016

I have reviewed the "Actuarial Review of the Federal Housing Administration Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund, Forward Loans, for Fiscal Year 2016". The purpose of my review was to determine the soundness of the methodology used, the appropriateness of the underlying assumptions applied, and the reasonableness of the resulting estimates derived in the Review.

The Review was based upon data and information prepared by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA). I have relied upon the FHA for the accuracy and completeness of this data. In addition, I also relied upon the reasonableness of the assumptions used in the economic projections prepared by Moody's Analytics, from which the base case used in the Review was derived.

It is my opinion that on an overall basis the methodology and underlying assumptions used in the Review are reasonable and appropriate in the circumstances. In my opinion the estimates in the Review lie within a reasonable range of probable values as of this time although the actual experience in the future will not unfold as projected.

Executive Summary

The 1990 Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act (NAHA) requires an independent actuarial analysis of the economic net worth of the Federal Housing Administration's (FHA's) Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund. Enacted on July 30, 2008, the Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008 (HERA) moved the requirement for an independent actuarial review into 12 USC 1708(a)(4). This report presents the results of IFE Group's independent analysis for fiscal year (FY) 2016.

HERA also moved several additional programs into the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund. One of them, Home Equity Conversion Mortgages (HECMs, which are reverse mortgages) is analyzed separately and is excluded from this Review. In the remainder of this Review, the term "the Fund" refers to the MMI Fund excluding HECMs.

The primary purpose of this Actuarial Review is to estimate:

- the economic value of the Fund, defined as the existing capital resources, or total assets less total liabilities of the Fund, plus the net present value (NPV) of the current books of business, and

- the total insurance-in-force (IIF) of the Fund.

We use a stochastic method to estimate the net present value of expected future cash flows. In the FY 2011 and previous Reviews, the net present value of the cash flows was computed using a single, deterministic path of house prices and interest rates. Starting with the FY 2012 Review, instead of a single path, we generated 100 equally likely paths to conduct a Monte Carlo simulation, and computed the net present value of the cash flows for each of the paths. Then we averaged these 100 numbers to obtain our estimate of the expected net present value of the future cash flows under our simulation procedure. This is our baseline estimate.

Based on our stochastic simulation analysis, we estimate that the economic value of the Fund as of the end of FY 2016 is (b)(5) Deliberative Privilege

Subject: FYI: HUD FOLLOW-UP on Essex Village REAC Inspection

Bob/Jen – Here's the information that was initially shipped to the Congressman's staffers. I worked with Delton and the multifamily team to craft this REAC 101 primarily to educate members of the media unfamiliar with our REAC Inspection process. For the Essex Village inquiries, I also included the guidelines for what happens when a multifamily property fails an inspection. We have been aligning our follow-ups with where we are in the process of that checklist.

I'll also send over the info we sent to the press last week. I'll work with Brenda and Carolyn to create an updated version for your use tomorrow afternoon. I will also do a pull of media clips—there have been many. Please let me know if there is anything else I can do to help. Again, many thanks to all for the support you have provided to me on the many, many media inquiries. Much appreciated…

Subject: HUD FOLLOW-UP on Essex Village REAC Inspection

Good afternoon Elton and Sylvia -- I am the Mid-Atlantic Regional Public Affairs Officer that handles media inquiries for the Commonwealth of Virginia. I also support the work of the Richmond Field Office in the various program areas to benefit those we serve. Like Tracey, I was on yesterday's call regarding the work that is underway to resolve the issues at Essex Village. To clarify some of the points we discussed, I thought it might be helpful to provide some information to you about the REAC Inspection process, Essex Village's most recent inspection and the Notice outlining the agency's process when a property receives a failing score.

PART 1: INSPECTION PROCESS
As part of our oversight of both public housing (owned/managed by public housing authorities) and multifamily housing (privately-owned w/HUD oversight), we have a number of inspections and reviews. Here's some information about

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

REAC—Real Estate Assessment Center. You'll see on the "About REAC" page, there are number of types of inspections. In this case we are talking about the physical inspection of a property.

Real Estate Assessment Center (REAC)
Nearly 4 million American families live in rental housing that is owned, insured or subsidized by HUD. To ensure that these families have housing that is decent, safe and sanitary and in good repair, REAC conducts approximately 20,000 physical inspections on properties each year.

About REAC

Scoring notice
http://portal.hud.gov/hudportal/documents/huddoc?id=pass4.0scoringnoticefr.PDF

Here's the reference to the letters after the scores in the Description:
Examples of overall scores are: 95c; 67b*; 84a*; 100b; 78a; and 43c*. The asterisk indicates that Health and Safety (H&S) deficiencies were found with respect to smoke detectors. The lower-case letter indicates whether or not other kinds of H&S deficiencies were observed, as follows:
- The letter "a" is given if no health and safety deficiencies were observed.
- The lower-case letter "b" is given if one or more non-life threatening H&S deficiencies, but no exigent/fire safety H&S deficiencies were observed.
- The lower-case letter "c" is given if one or more exigent/fire safety (calling for immediate attention or remedy) H&S deficiencies were observed.
* Indicates that Health and Safety (H&S) deficiencies were found with respect to malfunctioning smoke detectors.

Ratings determine the frequency of inspections:
- Standard 1 Performing Property: score of 90 or more, inspection is every three years
- Standard 2 Performing Property: score of 80 – 89, inspection is every two years
- Standard 3 Performing Property: score of less than 80, inspection is every year

Please keep in mind that the goal of our REAC inspection process is to review how the property is being maintained—to ensure that all HUD assisted properties provide decent safe and sanitary housing for tenants.

PART 2: ESSEX VILLAGE APARTMENTS INSPECTION
ESSEX VILLAGE 800021812 46c* 1/19/2017 after appeal, raised to a 51c*. Past two inspections: 75b 12/3/2015 72c* 12/1/2014
https://portal.hud.gov/hudportal/documents/huddoc?id=virginia.pdf

The most recent inspection was completed on January 11, 2017 and the report was given to Essex Village and HUD on January 19. REAC reports are not releasable until 120 days to allow time for appeals. The final REAC report will be available beginning May 19, and subject to any FOIA exemptions. Please note the most recent inspection is the first time Essex Village has received a failing score. The lower-case letter "c" is given if one or more exigent/fire safety (calling for immediate attention or remedy) Health and Safety deficiencies were observed. The asterisk indicates that Health and Safety deficiencies were found with respect to smoke detectors.

PART 3: NOTICE FOR FAILING SCORE
The following Notice defines what occurs when a property receives a failing score—which is 59: https://portal.hud.gov/hudportal/documents/huddoc?id=15-02hsgn.pdf

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

This Notice may be of interest to the Congressman; it outlines our process and the owner's responsibilities when a property receives a failing score. Please let me know if you have any questions. Thanks!

Subject: HUD FOLLOW-UP Essex Village

Ashley – Here are my answers to your questions:

- The property profile says 26 residential units were sampled. That means 26 buildings out of the 46 were looked at by an inspector, correct? NO, it means that 26 residential units were sampled and inspected. That's 26 of the 496 units at the property. REAC Inspections are a sampling of the units/apartments and building exteriors.
- Are different units inspected each year? YES, it is a random sampling.
- The inspection reports show that inoperable smoke detectors, infestations and inoperable water heaters were issues for years. NO, that is not the case. Because the units inspected vary from year to year, the findings are for different units—not issues that go unresolved—but there are certain types of deficiencies we do see year after year. This property has a pattern of deferred maintenance over several years and HUD field office personnel monitor such patterns.
- Were there follow ups to makes sure these issues were fixed? YES, the lower-case letter "c" is given if one or more exigent/fire safety (calling for immediate attention or remedy) Health and Safety deficiencies were observed. The asterisk indicates that Health and Safety deficiencies were found with respect to smoke detectors. Any Health and Safety deficiencies must be immediately resolved.
- And even if there was, it seems the issues persisted and became worse. I'm wondering what happened to the accountability? First, you should be aware that it is always more challenging to maintain an older property than a new one. Essex Village was built in 1981. REAC Inspections are designed to identify issues that need to be addressed. The frequency of the inspection is determined by the score—lower scoring properties are inspected more frequently. In this case, Essex Village scored in the 70s the past two inspections to the failing score—so it was never a stellar performer—it was a Standard 3 Performer.
- Were the REAC reports for 2015 and 2016 ever located? SORRY, just checked. The reports were never "missing" not sure how you got that impression. The last inspection was conducted on 11/24/2015 with a score of 75 and the one prior was on 12/05/2013 with a score of 76. The frequency of inspections was changed from every two years to every year for properties in the 70s. They are available by FOIA.
- While the 2016 report is not available (there isn't a 2016 report) I see a drastic change in the score from 2014 to 2017. And I've been told Essex Village was given a passing score until 2017 AFTER the county started issuing violations as well. NO, that is not true. We were not made aware of Henrico County's code violations until we received a letter of concern from Henrico County Supervisor Frank Thornton dated February 2, 2017. That was the first communication we received on the many issues the County was hoping we could address in a concerted effort. The REAC Inspection at Essex Village was conducted on January 11, 2017.
- Why the sudden change in results? A different inspector or a more thorough look because the county started noticing issues as well? NO, the score reflected the deterioration of the property.

Please let me know if you want to submit a FOIA for the other inspections. We can get that underway for you.

We have a freshman Congressman who is rather aggressive in his opinions, and an ex-Colonel police officer (who is referred still as "the Colonel.") pursuing 3 MF properties over property conditions and health and safety matters. It has been quite a show. All is being managed by our key individuals in MF (most notably Bob Iber) and our PAO Wolfe. Jerry Brown is well informed each day. Just for your awareness at this time. We may need to get Joe or me down there depending how the next several days go. The owner has 60 days to cure the weaknesses. Oy…. Rich

[VA] Congressman McEachin requests HUD to 'cease business with PK Management (WWBT-TV, VA) (6/7/2017 6:48 PM, Megan Woo)
Congressman Donald McEachin is requesting the Department of Housing and Urban Development to "cease business" with PK Management due to the conditions at Essex Village Apartments in Henrico, as well as other PK Management properties. Congressman McEachin says he "asked regional representatives for plans to address his constituents' concerns and HUD's relationship with the management company." This comes after requests sent to HUD regarding Essex Village. "PK Management is not meeting the spirit of its obligation to provide safe, sanitary housing. My constituents are being forced to live with sewage backups, dangerous structural issues, rodents and other vermin," said Congressman Donald McEachin. "Enough is enough – we need to stop wasting taxpayer dollars with this company, which has appeared to mismanage properties across the country. Essex Village should ideally be closed. In any event, residents need expedited access to vouchers that will empower them to move to decent homes." [Editorial note: VIDEO at source]

[VA] Congressman calls for HUD to end business with company that manages uninhabitable properties (WTVR-TV, VA) (6/7/2017 6:47 PM, Vernon Freeman Jr.)
Congressman Donald McEachin has called for the Department of Housing and Urban Development to terminate their business with a company that manages several housing complexes in the Richmond-area. McEachin says PK Management properties is not meeting the spirit of its obligation to provide safe and sanitary housing. PK Management, an Ohio-based company, runs three Section 8 facilities in Henrico County including, Essex Village, Woodland Crossing and Hope Village. The company receives millions of dollars a year from HUD to subsidize rent at its housing complexes, but multiple CBS 6 investigative reports have revealed multiple issues at the properties. Residents have told CBS 6 that the company has not done enough to fix things like leaks, flood damage, sewage problems, structural issues, broken lights, and bug infestations. "My constituents are being forced to live with sewage backups, dangerous structural issues, rodents and other vermin," said Congressman McEachin. "Enough is enough - we need to stop wasting taxpayer dollars with this company, which has appeared to mismanage properties across the country." McEachin specifically noted that Essex Village should be closed due to "uninhabitable" conditions, and he wants HUD to terminate or abate all contracts with the management company. "In any event, residents need expedited access to vouchers that will empower them to move to decent homes," he said. McEachin has also requested that HUD allow permission for Henrico County officials to join HUD's inspectors for future inspections at Essex Village. "I will continue to do everything I can so that my constituents do not live in these conditions and that taxpayer monies are not given millions of dollars to a company that has failed at their minimal responsibilities," he wrote.

Hello Mr. Defelice,

Please help me, Ms. Payne HUD - Baltimore office, passed me to Ms. Fadlemola in D.C. HUD office (Neither of these women are doing anything to help with the issue of my unit at Brinkley Hill in Ft. Washington under Section 811 being available.

These two women have passed be back and forth since May 2013, and I have the emails to prove it.

Can you have someone from the Regional HUD Office call Ms. Sylvester, Director Housing Policy and Programs to see if my unit is available. Her number is (b)(6)

My disability of anxiety (Reasonable Accomodation) was ignored by Ms. Sylvester, but really I just have to find a Female social worker, and I found a nice lady named Ms. Nab Brittingham at MDOD who is helping me.

My present unit has water damage and mold smells and I suffer from headaches daily. I just suffered a mild heart attack from emotional stress on May 5, 2017.

Gratefully,

Belinda,

I had a conference call with the Maryland Department of Disabilities and the Maryland Assistant Attorney General regarding the (b)(6) case. They gave me a 30,000 foot view of what was going on and I am able to discern a few next steps for us.

- (b)(6) applied for a as accepted for a Weinberg Unit in Brinkley. She was approved for her credit and background check and declined to participate. She refused to identify a case worker and her paperwork was returned to her.
- (b)(6) does not qualify for an 811 unit, because she is 62 (they are for under 62 population).
- (b)(6) has been approved for the Maryland Rental Assistance Program (http://dhcd.maryland.gov/HousingDevelopment/Pages/rap/default.aspx) , but refused to sign the papers. If she signs, she would be eligible for between $460 and $480 a month to assist her. This program is a state program, but run at the County level. She needs to complete the paperwork to receive it, as she is already approved.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

- She did have a caseworker with the Center for Independent Living, but that ended badly (according to the State) and they may refuse to work with her again. The State suggested that QCI Behavioral Health may be a better fit. They have a Prince George's outfit at http://www.qcihealth.com/largo.
- Because she is 62, she is more likely to find a solution with Senior Housing. Not sure what that looks like in the County.

Next Steps:

1. If you can reach out to QCI Behavioral Health and see if she can obtain a female case worker? Because of HIPPA, I'd recommend treading lightly here, but suggesting that she may need a female caseworker. Do not discuss her self-identified diagnosis/phobias.
2. If they do provide a caseworker, have them (the caseworker) reach back out to Ms. Sylvester to see if she can get back on the list for Brinkley.
3. Have (b)(6) execute the documentation to allow her to obtain the RAP money. I've put the website above to familiarize you with the program.
4. Contact Prince George's County to discuss their senior housing. Also, feel free to reach out to Carol to determine if there are pockets of senior housing that she may be familiar with in Anne Arundel County.

Keep me posted and let me know if I can be helpful, but that's about as far as we can go at this point.

Subject: HUD'S REVIEW: REQUEST FOR HOUSING ASSISTANCE

(b)(6)

Our office reached out to the parties/organizations who are involved in assisting you with rental assistance and obtaining affordable housing: we obtained the following information:

1. It was confirmed that the Rental Allowance Program is a flat-rate subsidy (it not the same as other housing programs whereby the amount received is based on a percentage of your income). Below is the website which indicates the "flat-rate" of $460 which is determined based on your metropolitan area and family size. You fall under Washington, DC SMSA 1-2.

http://dhcd.maryland.gov/HousingDevelopment/Documents/rap/MoAllowPmtAmtsByHH-SizeCounty.pd

2. Our office reached out the QCI Behavioral Health, LLC (http://www.qcihealth.com/) to assist you in obtaining a female caseworker. The intake person provided their procedures to determine eligibility under their program. QCI was suggested by the Maryland Department of Disabilities.

3. As a reminder, you are not eligible under the Section 811 program because it is for persons "under" 62 years-of age. Please click on the link below to confirm the eligibility requirements-- "Section 811 Supportive Housing Fact Sheet- Question 15: Who is eligible…"

http://811resourcecenter.tacinc.org/policy-programs/section-811-program-faqs

Recommendations:

Rental Allowance Program:
The State of Maryland Department of Social Services (DSS) is waiting for you to submit the proper paperwork to receive assistance under the Rental Allowance Program (RAP). Once DSS receives the signed documents, they are in the position to make the rental allowance of $460 for June, and will continue until the assistance ends.

Case Management:
Due to privacy issues, our office cannot obtain the services of a female caseworker for you. However, we are offering a referral: QCI Behavioral Health, LLC (http://www.qcihealth.com/). We contacted the organization and was informed that a person who is interested in obtaining case management must fill out the required surveys and submit to QCI for review. A staffer will contact the requester for further determination of eligibility; and hopefully, provide case management and/or other services under their program.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

QCI Questionnaires:

HOUSING:

Our review of your housing request clarified that your application for a Weinberg unit in Brinkley was previously approved. It is a requirement, under the housing program, that you identify a case worker and execute the proper paperwork to proceed with obtaining housing. It is hoped that the above referral will assist with the case worker requirement.

We also reached out to the Prince George's County Housing Authority regarding your placement on the Housing Choice Voucher waiting list. Unfortunately, you are number 2.491 on the list; and we do not have the authority to advance you.

In summary, (b)(6), it is at this point, our office has provided as much as assistance as we can.

The following items in today's HUD News Briefing are of specific interest to the HUD Richmond Office:

[VA] Essex Village parent company received over $150 million from HUD in 2016 (WTVR-TV Richmond, VA) (6/15/2017 5:00 PM, Staff)
HENRICO COUNTY, Va. -- The Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) paid the company managing Essex Village more than $150 million to subsidize the rent of residents at low-income housing complexes across the country in 2016. WTVR CBS 6 Problem Solver Melissa Hipolit uncovered the numbers after Congressman Donald McEachin called for HUD to terminate their business with PK Management, which manages several housing complexes in the Richmond-area. McEachin said PK Management properties is not meeting the spirit of its obligation to provide safe and sanitary housing. PK Management and their parent company, GHC Housing, received $152,110, 882 from HUD in 2016, according to information obtained through a Freedom of Information Act request submitted to HUD. PK Management, an Ohio-based company, runs three Section 8 facilities in Henrico County including, Essex Village, Woodland Crossing and Hope Village. The company receives more than $7 million a year from HUD to subsidize rent at its housing complexes in the Richmond-area, but multiple WTVR CBS 6 investigative reports have revealed multiple issues at the properties. Residents have told WTVR CBS 6 that the company has not done enough to fix things like leaks, flood damage, sewage problems, structural issues, broken lights, and bug infestations. "My constituents are being forced to live with sewage backups, dangerous structural issues, rodents and other vermin," said Congressman McEachin. "Enough is enough – we need to stop wasting taxpayer dollars with this company, which has appeared to mismanage properties across the country." McEachin specifically noted that Essex Village should be closed due to "uninhabitable" conditions, and he wants HUD to terminate or abate all contracts with the management company. "In any event, residents need expedited access to vouchers that will empower them to move to decent homes," he said. The President of PK Management, Jenee McClain-Bankhead, recently told WTVR CBS 6 reporter Melissa Hipolit via email, that the senior manager who oversaw Essex Village, Woodland Crossing, and Hope Village is no longer with the company. The company said they are addressing deferred maintenance and meeting with residents who have concerns or repair requests. McEachin has also requested that HUD allow permission for Henrico County officials to join HUD's inspectors for future inspections at Essex Village. "I will continue to do everything I can so that my constituents do not live in these conditions and that taxpayer monies are not given millions of dollars to a company that has failed at their minimal responsibilities," he wrote.
[Editorial note: VIDEO at source]

[VA] Federal reports show Essex Village had the same problems for years (WFIE-TV, IN) (6/15/2017 8:07 PM, Ashley Monfort)
VIDEO. Essex Village managers promised things are changing at Henrico's largest subsidized housing complex, but federal inspection reports show the same problems keep coming up. On Thursday, crews were working to fix and clean apartments, the landscaping, and the playgrounds at Essex Village. For some residents, like a single mom of three, who wishes to remain anonymous, says many renters are still waiting for a complete overhaul. She's afraid to be identified, but she wanted to show how she's been living for five years. The only reason why she said it happened was because she said Virginia Senator Jennifer McClellan toured the apartments on Wednesday and was appalled with her living conditions. She also says the carpet has not been changed since it flooded three or four years ago. Since Essex Village and its managers, PK Management, have been in the spotlight, the mother of three says she has heard of other neighbors getting new cabinets and carpet. NBC12 obtained reports that show what federal inspectors knew about living conditions at Essex Village. Keep in mind that a U.S. Department Housing and Urban Development inspector only looks at 26 randomly picked units out of a total of 496. For several years, Essex Village scored low in federal inspections but passed, until this year when it failed with a score of 50. HUD says it "reflected the deterioration of the property." On top of issues already reported in previous years, the reports say there are emergency exits that are blocked, wires that are exposed, and in one of the apartments, it says the electricity doesn't work properly in the kitchen, bathroom and living room. Since failing, PK Management has promised federal and Henrico authorities to spend whatever it takes to get the property in good condition.

[VA] Nonprofit developer receives $2.25 million for conversion of hotel in Scott's Addition into affordable housing (Richmond Times-Dispatch, VA) (6/15/2017 5:15 AM, Carol Hazard)
The Better Housing Coalition will receive a $2.25 million boost from state resources to transform the former Quality Inn at 3200 W. Broad St. into a mixed-income apartment complex for families. The nonprofit affordable-housing developer will be awarded the money through a competitive Vibrant Community Initiative grant and will use the funds to underwrite the development of the property along an entire block in the rapidly evolving Scott's Addition area of Richmond. The property is a block from a stop for the Pulse bus rapid transit system, a 7.6-mile route from Rocketts Landing to Willow Lawn that is under construction and will run mostly along Broad Street. Greta Harris, president and CEO of the coalition, said she is honored in the confidence that Gov. Terry McAuliffe, who announced the award this week, and state agencies have placed in the organization. "This catalytic award provides crucial funding for this transformational project," she said. "As plans progress, we will seek additional debt, equity and grant funding to solidify our ability to serve our future residents." The Vibrant Community Initiative grant includes federal and state funds allocated to state agencies. It combines multiple Virginia Department of Housing and Community Development funding sources to support local or regional projects for affordable housing, community development and economic development components.

Hi Tracey,

This matter does involve a multifamily property in Philadelphia. The Asset Manager is in the Philadelphia office, however, under the new procedures that MF-New York Regional Center issued, as of today we are to assign all controlled correspondence to a general mailbox for their Operations Division to coordinate. We will get it in the queue for the MF mailbox. I have already alerted the MF staff in the Philadelphia office where I believe the assignment will be made. Staff has already indicated that they currently are unaware of the lease submitted by G-town Radio and Interfaith House for HUD's review/approval.

See attached.

Subject: Region III FOIA's, Correspondence and WebMail: Multifamily NE Region Baltimore Satellite Office and corresponding Field Offices

Good Afternoon Everyone,
So you may have heard that Multifamily' s NE Region would like to have some visibility and give you a main POC mailbox location where answers and or either information that you need for various types of correspondence will be received, routed, addressed and sent back to you for final close-out. As you can see this email is coming directly from our new correspondence mailbox BaltimoreMultifamilyCorrespondence@hud.gov . We look to implement this process around mid-June 2017 (this year) and to work with you in making this a streamline process between you and our staff.

I understand you (Region 3) has a turn-key process in place but the vision for this mailbox is just to provide you a centralized location so that you can send any inquiry such as FOIA's, Controlled Correspondence, Executive Orders, Web Mails request to one location not having to seek and find out who it goes to thru ought the Region. We will do that for you!
From this mailbox we will assist as to directly identify the property (based on address) and the assigned NE Multifamily staff member who then will provide back to you the response , or information needed to prepare the official final document for mailing or the staff can respond directly to the recipient (such as web mails).
This mailbox only serves the Multifamily North East Regional staff who's offices fall under Region 3 : Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Richmond, Washington, and Charleston field Offices.

All I ask is when you send these inquiries to the mailbox please identify:

1. If you're looking for the staff to directly respond back to the recipient, provide you with the information so you can prepare a response, or identify if spoken via telephone how they resolved the issue.
2. If a final signature is needed, advise if we're to provide you with the response for final signature (for your RA/Deputy Secretary/FOD) and mail out or, can one of our Division Directors sign off on it.
3. The due date you would like the response sent back to you or replied by.

I look forward to working with you all going forward. If you have any questions feel free to contact me via email or telephone as my contact info is listed below in the signature.

Essex Village, Henrico County, Va.
Briefing Report, 05.11.17

On March 30, Director Carrie Schmidt and members of the multifamily team met with Henrico County officials to discuss concerns about the HUD-assisted property, Essex Village at the Richmond Field Office. In preparation for the meeting on March 29, Brenda Brown, Director Baltimore MF Satellite Office, Lisa Ellis, Branch Chief, and Carolyn Anastasi, Resolution Specialist, met with PK Management Official Jenne McClain-Blankhead and others to tour the site. There were many obvious physical maintenance needs. HUD officials spoke to many residents and were invited into a few units. There is an obvious difference between the condition of elderly units and the condition of those mainly for families. PK Management is working on the Compliance, Disposition, and Enforcement (CDE) plan, (due May 25) following the failing REAC score. Management will be submitting monthly accounting reports and physical property updates.

On March 30, HUD staff met with Colonel Middleton, Deputy County Manager of Public Safety, and 10 other County Officials at the Richmond Field Office. The Colonel voiced complaints concerning exterior physical violation notices previously given to property as well as sewer issues (privately-owned). Brenda Brown discussed prior day property visit and planned physical repairs including a possible $19 million in rehab. Following the meeting, Brenda Brown spoke with owner, Gregory Perlman, to facilitate a meeting with the Colonel to open the lines of communication. A meeting via conference call will be scheduled monthly for property updates.

The development is considered a troubled property with a final REAC score, after appeal, of 51. The Owner's plan of correction is due in May (60 days after the posted score).

To date, the following is in process or has occurred.

- The Performance Based Contract Administrator (PBCA), Navigate Affordable Housing, conducted a Management Occupancy Review (MOR) on April 18. The final report was sent to the owner on April 28.
- PBCA Navigate Management Review included maintenance reports for over 3,000 requests for service in last year, averaging 261/month. All REAC exigent, health and safety deficiencies have been corrected.
- There has been continued media interest in Essex Village, including a FOIA request for the most recent REAC Inspection report (Not releasable for 120 days from report date). Three reporters are currently tracking the release of the report.
- An April 3 fire damaged eight units. No injuries occurred and all residents are back in their units. Restoration work has been completed except the unit in which the fire started; repairs are still underway and the resident was housed in an available apartment on site.
- PK Management is submitting bi-weekly property updates concerning sewer/maintenance issues and proposed project transformation through sale/merger with a nonprofit and the Compliance Disposition and Enforcement (CDE) plan is due May 25,2017.
- PK Management responded to Notice of Violation (NOV) and has completed a 100%-unit inspection.
- PK Management Official Jenne McClain-Blankhead confirmed that a meeting took place between Essex Village owner Gregory Perlman and Henrico County's Deputy County

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Manager of Public Safety Colonel Doug Middleton on May 8. Security, exterior site work and upgrades, sewer issues and completed work orders were discussed. County officials and PK Management agreed to meet again in 90 days.

- They are investigating a more controlled access to the property, have expanded security and have initiated a one-way entrance/exit during the evening hours.
- Confirmed that 100 percent of units have been inspected, work orders generated and work is just about complete.
- Owner walked through site and has ordered:
  - asphalt resealed and parking lot restriped – should be started this weekend.
  - Landscaping upgrades will continue;
  - Playground equipment has been repainted and new additions added.
  - An old basketball court area has been redefined and is being transformed to become a new fenced in 'tot' lot
- A contract is being sought to investigate (camera/engineering study) the sewer issues, the Colonel did acknowledge that although there were two backups in January, and that they were handled properly by PK Management.
- Mr. Perlman/owner addressed the police substation and stated his interest in accepting the Colonel's desire to increasing the usage of this unit,
- Both sides promised to cooperate with a common goal and meet again in 90 days,
- All in all, all parties felt it was a step in the right direction.

I have attached a letter pertaining to our mother's application for senior living. She has been on the waiting list since January 2014. It is imperative that our mother find a place to live. Due to her handicap (hearing impaired), we believe she is not being considered residency. She desires to live at the Haddington facility and we know there have been plenty of people who have moved in and out of that facility since 2014. Please review the letter and faxes that are submitted for a better understanding. A hard copy is being mailed as well. We appreciate your time and look forward to speaking with you soon.

RE: (b)(6) Residence as Haddington Elderly
(b)(6)

Dear Mr. DeFelice:

We are writing on behalf of our mother (b)(6) who has applied (application number 0142102) for residency at the Mahlon M. Lewis Residence as Haddington Elderly Senior Living House. Just as way of background, our mother has a handicap (she is Hearing Impaired/Deaf) and we applied for residency in 2014.

We have called continuously after our site visit in 2015 about the status of our mother's application. We have been told that there has not been any availability and that she is still on the waiting list. We do know that several people have moved in and out of the facility since our first meeting.

We have some concerns that our mother's application is not being processed because of her handicap and the facility would not be able to accommodate her needs. If someone would discuss with us their concerns, we could let them know our mother's actual limitations and specific needs. An application has been filed in January 2014, a form was sent to the facility on August 13, 2014 stating to keep our mother on the waiting list. We were asked to come to the facility to fill out documents in August 2015 and missing documents were faxed to the facility on 7/7/2015 and 8/10/2015. All documents faxed are attached. It is very disheartening to not be contacted from the facility about our mother's housing status.

We are contacting you first to see what assistance and/or advice you can offer us in processing our mother's application. We have been advised to contact our State Representative to get assistance but we want to make sure that you were aware of our situation and give you an opportunity to advise us prior to seeking that assistance.

We are willing to schedule an appointment with you to discuss this matter further. Thank you for your attention in this matter.

Sincerely,

Kerri – Here's the update I promised. First off, I wanted you to know that I received word from PK Management's regional manager that she spoke with (b)(6) Wednesday morning. She has been temporarily moved to a hotel and will then move to a first-floor 3-bedroom apartment in the complex. PK Management has secured a company to help her make the move Friday morning. So, that is good news. And second, please know that we take the issues raised about the complex very seriously, and are taking the appropriate steps to ensure the families at Essex Village have housing that is decent, safe, sanitary and in good repair.

Here's a little background about the work that has been going on:
On March 30, Director Carrie Schmidt and members of the multifamily team were scheduled to meet with Henrico County officials to discuss concerns about the HUD-assisted property, Essex Village at the Richmond Field Office. As you are aware, the development is considered a troubled property with a final REAC inspection score, after appeal, of 51c*. (Available by FOIA.)

In preparation for the meeting, on March 29 HUD's multifamily team met with a PK Management official and others to tour the site. There were many obvious physical maintenance needs. HUD officials spoke to many residents and were invited into a few units. On March 30, HUD staff met with Colonel Doug Middleton, Deputy County Manager of Public Safety, and 10 other County Officials at the Richmond Field Office. The Colonel voiced complaints concerning exterior physical violation notices previously given to property as well as (privately-owned) sewer issues. Multifamily leaders discussed the prior day property visit. All participants agreed to monthly conference calls for property updates.

HUD Multifamily and Richmond Field Office leaders met with Henrico County Officials on May 23. Multifamily staff participated via conference call. Congressman McEachin and members of his staff also participated in the call. HUD's report-out included:

- Owner and agent are making efforts to improve the property;
- Management is investigating a more controlled access to the property and has initiated a one-way entrance/exit during the evening hours;
- Security coverage has been increased; Essex is now setup on a 16-hour day security utilizing two off-duty Henrico Police Officers per shift;
- Trash pick-up has been increased;
- Extermination contract has been switched to Terminix for mice, rodents and bedbugs (if reported); quarterly treatment scheduled;
- Per HUD guidelines as a follow-up to the failed REAC score, the owner/manager conducted a 100 %-unit inspection; the inspection has been completed and work is underway to correct the deficiencies;
- Owner walked through site and has ordered:
  - asphalt resealed and parking lot restriped by June 1
  - landscaping upgrades will continue;
  - playground equipment has been repainted and new additions added;
  - unused basketball court area has been redefined and is being transformed to become a new fenced in 'tot' lot;
- Siding has been repaired and power-washed;
- Owner set aside funds for $500,000 to have three buildings re-sided to begin in 30 to 45 days (confirmed on May 25);
- Contract is being sought to investigate (camera/engineering study) of the sewer issues; Dillon Plumbing has been contracted to be completed this week;

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

At this point, HUD officials are reviewing the Compliance, Disposition and Enforcement Plan submitted by PK Management last Friday. Per HUD guidelines, the Plan defines a specified timetable for correcting all deficiencies noted by the REAC Inspection and the 100%-unit inspection conducted by the property management company. We are also in the process of scheduling a REAC Re-inspection. Happy to update you as more information is available.

Joe,

I am waiting for an update from the multifamily asset manager/contractor. Randy Scheetz contacted them about providing a status so that you could get back to (b)(6) Her mother applied for senior housing at Haddington Elderly but there is concern about how long it is taking. They feel that management has not been responsive to inquiries.

I will not be in the office tomorrow.

Mr. Defelice
I have attached a letter pertaining to our mother's application for senior living. She has been on the waiting list since January 2014. It is imperative that our mother find a place to live. Due to her handicap (hearing impaired), we believe she is not being considered residency. She desires to live at the Haddington facility and we know there have been plenty of people who have moved in and out of that facility since 2014. Please review the letter and faxes that are submitted for a better understanding. A hard copy is being mailed as well. We appreciate your time and look forward to speaking with you soon.

Kerri – Here's the update I promised. First off, I wanted you to know that I received word from PK Management's regional manager that she spoke with (b)(6) Wednesday morning. Kerri – Here's the update I promised. First off, I wanted you to know that I received word from PK Management's regional manager that she spoke with (b)(6) Wednesday morning. She has been temporarily moved to a hotel and will then move to a first-floor 3-bedroom apartment in the complex. PK Management has secured a company to help her make the move Friday morning. So, that is good news. And second, please know that we take the issues raised about the complex very seriously, and are taking the appropriate steps to ensure the families at Essex Village have housing that is decent, safe, sanitary and in good repair.

Here's a little background about the work that has been going on:
On March 30, Director Carrie Schmidt and members of the multifamily team were scheduled to meet with Henrico County officials to discuss concerns about the HUD-assisted property, Essex Village at the Richmond Field Office. As you are aware, the development is considered a troubled property with a final REAC inspection score, after appeal, of 51c*. (Available by FOIA.)

In preparation for the meeting, on March 29 HUD's multifamily team met with a PK Management official and others to tour the site. There were many obvious physical maintenance needs. HUD officials spoke to many residents and were invited into a few units. On March 30, HUD staff met with Colonel Doug Middleton, Deputy County Manager of Public Safety, and 10 other County Officials at the Richmond Field Office. The Colonel voiced complaints concerning exterior physical violation notices previously given to property as well as (privately-owned) sewer issues. Multifamily leaders discussed the prior day property visit. All participants agreed to monthly conference calls for property updates.

HUD Multifamily and Richmond Field Office leaders met with Henrico County Officials on May 23. Multifamily staff participated via conference call. Congressman McEachin and members of his staff also participated in the call. HUD's report-out included:

- Owner and agent are making efforts to improve the property;
- Management is investigating a more controlled access to the property and has initiated a one-way entrance/exit during the evening hours;
- Security coverage has been increased; Essex is now setup on a 16-hour day security utilizing two off-duty Henrico Police Officers per shift;
- Trash pick-up has been increased;
- Extermination contract has been switched to Terminix for mice, rodents and bedbugs (if reported); quarterly treatment scheduled;
- Per HUD guidelines as a follow-up to the failed REAC score, the owner/manager conducted a 100 %-unit inspection; the inspection has been completed and work is underway to correct the deficiencies;
- Owner walked through site and has ordered:
  - asphalt resealed and parking lot restriped by June 1
  - landscaping upgrades will continue;
  - playground equipment has been repainted and new additions added;
  - unused basketball court area has been redefined and is being transformed to become a new fenced in 'tot' lot;
- Siding has been repaired and power-washed;
- Owner set aside funds for $500,000 to have three buildings re-sided to begin in 30 to 45 days (confirmed on May 25);
- Contract is being sought to investigate (camera/engineering study) of the sewer issues; Dillon Plumbing has been contracted to be completed this week;

At this point, HUD officials are reviewing the Compliance, Disposition and Enforcement Plan submitted by PK Management last Friday. Per HUD guidelines, the Plan defines a specified timetable for correcting all deficiencies noted by the REAC Inspection and the 100%-unit inspection conducted by the property management company. We are also in the process of scheduling a REAC Re-inspection. Happy to update you as more information is available.

I am waiting for an update from the multifamily asset manager/contractor. Randy Scheetz contacted them about providing a status so that you could get back to (b)(6) Her mother applied for senior housing at Haddington Elderly but there is concern about how long it is taking. They feel that management has not been responsive to inquiries.

Mr. Defelice
I have attached a letter pertaining to our mother's application for senior living. She has been on the waiting list since January 2014. It is imperative that our mother find a place to live. Due to her handicap (hearing impaired), we believe she is not being considered residency. She desires to live at the Haddington facility and we know there have been plenty of people who have moved in and out of that facility since 2014. Please review the letter and faxes that are submitted for a better understanding. A hard copy is being mailed as well. We appreciate your time and look forward to speaking with you soon.

Good morning – Please see the early clips about Essex Village. I understand Deena's concern about submitter notification and the need for it, but I really believe if we can expedite the release of the CDE Plan, officials, reporters and readers will understand there is a plan in place and the property owner/management is taking action to make the needed repairs.

I have a number of outstanding media inquiries that are citing the inactivity of HUD to take action—which we all know is not the case. Any help in moving the release of the plan under FOIA will be much appreciated. Thanks!

Housing secretary meets with mayor, city housing team

BALTIMORE — Housing Secretary Ben Carson is in Baltimore this week, and the former neurosurgeon's trip back was met with protesters.

The protesters are upset with proposed cuts to the Housing and Urban Development budget that they believe will harm families and create more homeless nationwide.

Carson was in Baltimore Wednesday for several private meetings, one of which was with Mayor Catherine Pugh and the city's housing team.

Carson made no comment as he left the Charles Benton Building in downtown Baltimore. His staff termed it as a private meeting, saying he would answer questions during an informal news conference Thursday.

Pugh described what she called a session with the secretary, saying, "What's really important is that continued relationship and the hundreds of millions of dollars that have been invested in Baltimore by HUD, how much we still need those dollars, and as we continue to look at expanding neighborhoods and communities and giving folks opportunities to be in housing that is affordable, that HUD is important to Baltimore City."

Some community activists gathered outside Henderson Hopkins Elementary School in east Baltimore, where Carson attended an event. The activists voiced their discontent with President Donald Trump's proposed cuts of more than $6 billion, and they called for states, local governments and private entities to assist more in handling the needs of affordable housing.

"Community development block grants are being eliminated. The home program is being eliminated. The National Housing Trust Fund is being eliminated. Rather than eliminating things, we need more of them. Baltimore has, oh, we don't know, 45,000 vacant houses, and it has tens of thousands of people who get eviction notices every year. Let's make positive changes, not negative changes," said Jeff Singer, with City Advocates in Solidarity with the Homeless.

Carson has public appearances scheduled Thursday. He will visit two houses where HUD grants have paid for lead remediation work, and he's scheduled to return to Henderson Hopkins Elementary School for a national Healthy Homes Community Family Fair.

HUD Secretary Carson eludes protesters (Baltimore Brew, MD)

Ben Carson, the U.S. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, slipped in and out of an East Baltimore public school today, holding a private meeting with several local officials while about 50 protesters waited patiently outside to express their concerns about the Trump administration's housing policies.

"There was a big black SUV in the parking lot with a chauffeur in a black uniform, and there were people going into the school who said they were going to speak to the secretary. But we never got a chance to even see him," said Jeff Singer, a homeless advocate who helped organize the protest.

Singer identified two of the participants as Greg Sileo, assistant Baltimore health commissioner, and Redonda Miller, president of the Johns Hopkins Hospital. "They told us they were there for a 'listening session' with Carson," Singer said. Sileo and Miller could not be reached for comment this evening.

Last week HUD announced that Carson would come to Baltimore today to meet with local officials at the Henderson-Hopkins public school. The press office later refused to confirm the meeting after it became apparent that several housing groups planned to protest the visit of the retired Johns Hopkins neurosurgeon who was named the top U.S. housing administrator.

The HUD press office, however, stressed that Carson will appear tomorrow (Thursday) in Baltimore to visit two homes that benefited from HUD lead hazard control grants and would be available for a "press gaggle" between 9:30 and 9:37 a.m. at 3104 Gwynns Falls Parkway.

Beware the Agency Leadership Void (Government Executive) Government Executive
(6/28/2017 1:36 PM, Matthew Dull)
Whatever else transpires, many government workers will remember 2017 as the year of the empty office. Almost six months along, the Trump administration's appointments strategy is a slow moving disaster. The administration has not even nominated candidates to fill three-quarters of top Senate-confirmed agency appointee positions, according to the the Political Appointee Tracker developed by the Partnership for Public Service and the Washington Post.

Across federal agencies, anecdotes abound of quiet hallways and pervasive uncertainty. A palpable emptiness fills the southwest corner of the Main Treasury Building's third floor, where empty offices of the department's 27 vacant appointee positions await occupants. Secretary Steven Mnuchin remains the only confirmed Treasury Department appointee. Cabinet secretaries are the only confirmed appointees in the departments of Agriculture (12 vacant positions), Commerce (20), Education (14), Energy (21), Housing and Urban Development (11), Interior (16), Labor (13), and Veterans Affairs (10). Even agencies critical to the Trump administration's security agenda are coping with a gaping leadership void. At the Defense Department, 47 of 53 positions are vacant. At Homeland Security, 10 out of 13 appointee positions remain vacant.

LeadingAge Hosts Rally on Capitol Hill to Save HUD 202 (LeadingAge)

More than 1,100 residents of HUD Section 202 Housing for the Elderly communities were joined by members of the U.S. Senate and House, as well as leading advocates for affordable housing for older adults, at a June 27 rally outside the Capitol building in Washington, DC.

"Save affordable senior housing!" An early chant from the crowd, led by emcee Steve Fleming, president and CEO of WellSpring and chair-elect of LeadingAge, got the juices flowing. Patricia Davis, a resident of Retirement Housing Foundation's North Capitol at Plymouth 202 community in Washington, DC, told the boisterous crowd 13 reasons why she loves her home, including affordability, excellent management, and "our independence."

Representative Al Green (D-TX), a member of the House Committee on Financial Services, which has jurisdiction over housing policy, revved up the crowd and ensured attendees, "I'm going to work as hard as I can to protect your Medicare, to protect your Social Security, and your Section 202 housing!"

Volunteers of America's (VOA) Executive Vice President for Housing Patrick Sheridan told 2 moving stories of residents served by 202 communities sponsored by VOA, one who would otherwise likely be homeless and the other resident who might unnecessarily be in a nursing home without the Section 202 program. Mr. Sheridan implored residents and other advocates to join the Seniors Action Network, a grassroots movement to give America's seniors a greater voice in public policy, which VOA and LeadingAge coordinate jointly.

After Mr. Sheridan, House HUD Appropriations Subcommittee Ranking Member David Price (D-NC) joined the rally stage. "Thank you for fighting for 202 – it is so essential for elderly Americans and, in fact, for all Americans," Rep. Price said. While the budget threats facing the Section 202 and other programs are serious, Rep. Price continued, "There's nothing more essential to human health and well-being than good, decent, and affordable housing!" to loud cheers from the crowd. We must preserve 202 communities and their affordability, but,, "our ultimate goal must be to respond to the need, and this is going to require more, not less!"

[NH] Concord Homeless Shelter Settles With HUD, Victim After Domestic Violence Discrimination Allegations (New Hampshire Public Radio, Concord, NH)
New Hampshire Public Radio
(6/28/2017 10:21 AM, Emily Corwin)
A recent agreement between a Concord homeless shelter and the federal government could help end discrimination against domestic violence survivors who face homelessness.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

The settlement includes the US Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Friends Program in Concord, and a female survivor of domestic violence.

In May, 2016, the woman stayed at Friends' Emergency Housing in Concord. When she disclosed to staff that she had recently survived domestic violence, the homeless shelter requested she leave, citing policy: the shelter said it did not have the necessary security measures in place to protect against potential perpetrators. (Read the letter she received below.)

Victoria Horrock, a lawyer with New Hampshire Legal Assistance, says the settlement means this shelter will have to change its policies. Additionally, she said, "It's our hope that other shelters across the state will examine their own policies to make sure they're not placing increased burdens on vulnerable women at this time of most desperate need."

Legal Assistance argued the policy banning recent domestic violence survivors violates the Fair Housing Act. The plaintiff received a $5000 settlement from the shelter. According to Horrock, the funds were used to secure housing.

[CT] MHA seeking $23M loan for Bristol project (My Record Journal, CT)

(6/29/2017 5:30 AM, Mary Ellen Godin)
In 2015, the MHA entered into an agreement with Leasing Innovations Inc. that would allow it to lend Maynard Road Corp. $3 million for the Bristol project. The funds covered pre-development work including geothermal installation, and will be repaid at the project closing. Haynes Construction is the contractor on the Bristol deal.

But the MHA continues to answer questions from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development about the Bristol deal and the role of the MHA and Maynard Road.

A HUD spokeswoman said Monday the MHA has provided answers and is working with HUD on details. The queries are to ensure that no federal funds are being used on the Bristol project.

Maynard Road is also overseeing the Yale Acres redevelopment. The state recently awarded it $5.7 million to rebuild 162 moderate income rental units at Yale Acres. Eight model units have been completed with geothermal heat and solar panels. Construction of the remaining units is expected to begin in the fall, Cappelletti said.

The Meriden Housing Authority, and Maynard Road Corp., have also teamed with Pennrose Properties on a 150-unit mixed income development project called Meriden Commons I and II. The partners were given a $1.5 million grant and subsidy and $2.4 million advance through the Massachusetts Housing Investment Corp. for 75 rental units at Meriden Commons I, now under construction.

[DC] A Housing Stipend for Congress? There's a Better Way (Bloomberg View)
Bloomberg View
(6/28/2017 11:46 AM, Megan McArdle)
Lawmakers should fix the zoning that limits development and drives up DC's cost of living.

Does anyone pity the poor congressman? He spends much of his life on the road, eating rubber chicken or repugnant local specialties, in between making a few speeches and shaking a whole lot of hands. And when he comes off the road, he generally does not go home to whatever fair district where he once chose to live, but to Washington, which may not actually be a badly paved swamp, but sure feels like one come June.

To add insult to injury, it's become a very expensive pseudo-swamp. When I moved here 10 years ago, it was possible to rent a room in a house for a few hundred dollars a month. Now, to hear tell from the young'uns, a mere bedroom in a group house starts around $1,000 a month -- and then heads north at a brisk clip. Apartments in convenient locations are considerably more dear. Which is why some members of Congress spend their time in Washington sleeping on cots in their offices.

Now that he's retiring, and can't be accused of self-interest, Representative Jason Chaffetz of Utah is suggesting that perhaps voters might want to offer their representatives some help affording their own little slice of the quagmire. He's floated the idea of giving our representatives a $2,500 a month housing allowance (that term sounds so much better than "raise"), so that they can actually procure a room with walls and a bed.

It is, in truth, hard to pity the poor congressman. They make $174,000 a year, which may not be private island money, but is a whole heck of a lot more than most Americans make. And while they do have some unusual expenses, even once you net out the suits, the travel incidentals, and the pop psych books on managing a long-distance marriage, they're still doing better than, say, your average trucker.

Yet it seems worth pointing out that our congress critters could do something to help themselves, without even dipping into the federal treasury. Thanks to Washington's unique constitutional status, Congress has more power over its operations than over any other city. The city has "home rule," to be sure, but that home rule was a gift from Congress, and Congress can take back that gift any time they want. Or amend it, to slash through the array of zoning regulations that help to make Washington housing so expensive. At the very least, they could repeal the height limits, dating from 1899, which make it impossible to build true high-rises in downtown Washington, and thereby forces up the price of conveniently located housing.

This is an effort that would be beloved of many conservatives, who are rather fond of the free market. It would be beloved of many progressives, who have come to realize that NIMBYism and strict zoning regulations are forcing the poor out of many desirable cities. And it would do a very good thing for the poor and the middle class who live in and around Washington -- for now, anyway.

But here's the best news of all for politicians who contemplate this plan: The only folks who would get angry about it can't vote any of them out of office. Elsewhere in the country, plans to strip away onerous housing regulations generally die a quick and painful death, because homeowners get very, very angry if you suggest a new law that will help developers change the character of their neighborhood, or lower their property values. We have plenty of those folks in DC, mind you -- theoretically in favor of affordable housing, and practically opposed to any plan that would actually make housing affordable. On the local level, they've done a pretty good job at stymieing various efforts to increase Washington's housing supply. But because DC is not a state, its residents have no vote in the government body that ultimately controls their city.

[VA] Essex Village owner faces 9 criminal charges for building violations (WTOC-TV CBS 11 Savannah, GA)
WTOC-TV CBS 11 Savannah
(6/28/2017 6:08 PM, Ashley Monfort)
VIDEO. NBC12 has been investigating living conditions at Essex Village for months, and we've seen crews cleaning up and doing repairs.

However, Revels says it's not enough.

"They've been very responsive to the notices that we've issued so far, but they're not extending their efforts beyond that to repair all of the neglect that's accumulated over the years," said Revels.

He says there needs to be a comprehensive plan of action.

"I don't believe that's being done," says Revels.

Each charge carries a fine of up to $2,500.

It's unclear how that will affect PK Management, who receives millions of federal dollars from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). NBC12 reached out to PK Management and Essex VA Investors, LLC and have not yet heard back.

[VA] Henrico County officials to take Essex Village operators to court over building code violations (Richmond Times-Dispatch, VA)

Henrico County officials are taking the operators of a dilapidated, federally subsidized housing community to court for building-code violations.

AMERICAN OVERSIGHT

Gregory Revels, the county's building official, said the county plans to obtain and serve at least 15 court summonses to Essex VA Investors LLC for a slew of infractions that include failing to properly maintain balconies, roofs and air-conditioning units at Essex Village. Nine of the summonses were issued Tuesday, Revels told the Henrico Board of Supervisors during its work session later in the day.

Revels said in an email that the county hopes the court will compel the owner to develop an "aggressive plan to rehabilitate the property." Court hearings for the summonses are scheduled for July 14 and 28 in Henrico General District Court.

"Given the state of disrepair that is evident, they have continued to fail the residents in this regard and they are relying too heavily on the county to identify the defects that need attention," Revels said.

Since 2016, more than 180 violation notices by the county were issued to the management company PK Management for the conditions at Essex, which has been the subject of an attempted turnaround by the county. The housing community also received its first failing inspection grade from the Department of Housing and Urban Development earlier this year.

Essex Village is privately owned but its owners receive funding from the U.S. Housing and Urban Development department. HUD has ultimate authority over the complex.

In December 2015, HUD inspected Essex Village and gave it a passing grade of 74, Middleton said. Then this January, HUD inspected the complex again and gave it a failing grade of 44, Middleton said.

Essex Village is owned by Gregory Pearlman and managed by PK Management, which is also owned by Pearlman. Pearlman manages 18,000 HUD units in the country. Last year, Pearlman received more than $152 million from HUD to subsidize rent, according to CBS 6.

Pearlman attributed the problems at Essex Village to a single manager at PK Management who has since been fired, he said in an interview with CBS 6.

Middleton questioned how one employee's decisions could have resulted in the conditions at Essex Village, he said.

"I think HUD dropped the ball with their inspections, and I'm absolutely confident that Pearlman and PK Management could have cared less," Middleton said.

HENRICO COUNTY, Va. -- Henrico County officials came out to the Essex Village apartment complex Wednesday afternoon after an anonymous tip said there was a sewer overflow issue.

The Henrico Fire Department and the Public Utilities Department responded to the apartment complex.

The low-income housing complex has been the subject of an on-going CBS 6 investigation.

Residents have told CBS 6 that the company has not done enough to fix things like leaks, flood damage, sewage problems, structural issues, broken lights, and bug infestations.

During the meeting Tuesday night, Henrico Board of Supervisors Chair Patricia O'Bannon said the board will take action and set up meetings with the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) in Washington.

[NC] HUD lifts sanctions on authority (The Robesonian, NC)
The Robesonian
(6/29/2017 5:30 AM, Bob Shiles)
LUMBERTON — The Robeson County Housing Authority has been given more financial freedom by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Niakeya Jones, the authority's executive director, confirmed that HUD is no longer requiring the local housing authority get federal approval before making purchases and entering into contracts. The regulation, in effect for about three years, was lifted earlier this month.

"We are now in a good place," said Jones, who has been the authority's executive director since Feb. 2. "Everything is going good. I am happy, and the staff is happy."

Jones declined to comment further about the financial upgrades and improvements that led to HUD lifting its strict oversight of the authority's purchasing process. She said Monday that she did not want to comment "at this time" because she was not involved with the Robeson County Housing Authority when HUD put the procurement regulation in place.

But County Attorney Patrick Pait credited Jones with playing a leading role in helping the authority address HUD's concerns.

"I think Miss Jones and the staff at the housing authority have done a good job," Pait said. "That is reflected in HUD removing the zero-tolerance regulation."

The oversight regulations were put in place as a result of findings in a procurement assessment conducted by HUD in January 2014. The report detailed weaknesses and irregularities in the authority's procurement activities and charged mismanagement of federal funds.

(6/29/2017 12:31 AM, Rosana Hughes)
The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development awarded more than $1.6 million to the city of Chattanooga on Tuesday to confront lead hazards in homes.

Chattanooga was one of 48 cities across the country that received one of the grants and the only city in Tennessee.

The funding will be used to abate lead and other safety hazards in 75 Chattanooga homes, and about 7,600 homes in the U.S., according to a press release announcing the funding.

HUD's lead-based paint hazard control grant programs promote local efforts to eliminate dangerous lead paint and other housing-related health hazards from low-income homes, encourages private sector investment in lead hazard control and educates the public about the dangers of hazards in the home.

CAIRO – Housing and Urban Development Secretary Ben Carson, in a memo dated Wednesday, moved to end the collective bargaining agreement between the Alexander County Housing Authority and Laborers' International Union of North America Local 773, which represents housing authority employees.

As a result of that, 19 employees, a mix of part- and full-time workers, were given notice their positions would be eliminated in 30 days. HUD officials announced the news during a morning staff meeting at the ACHA's administrative office in Cairo.

The employees were told that they would have the option of reapplying for a new set of positions that HUD has created as deemed essential to carry out the duties of the housing authority within its financial constraints, said Jereon Brown, deputy assistant secretary for HUD's Office of Public Affairs.

The move is intended solely to save money for the housing authority, and is not a reflection upon the work of the affected employees, Brown said.

Eliminating all existing positions and then rehiring to fill specific needs will save the housing authority about $339,886 annually of the $705,550 it is presently paying in salary and benefits, according to a financial document that was provided to the newspaper. That represents about a 52 percent cut to the ACHA's labor costs.

CLEVELAND, Ohio--The city of Cleveland and the Cuyahoga County Board of Health each received new federal grants Tuesday aimed at cleaning up lead contamination in area homes. The grants, totaling $6.3 million, continue funding the health departments have received in the past.

The new funding--a total of $127 million to 48 state and local government agencies-- was announced Tuesday by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). Cleveland received $3.4 million and Cuyahoga County received $2.9 million.
